9. Judgment, if should be followed by a decree. — According to the Calcutta High Court,<sup>1</sup> there is nothing objectionable to a decree being drawn up on a judgment under this rule and later on to another decree being drawn up after investigation of the claim not admitted. But according to the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court,<sup>2</sup> it is not necessary to have a decree drawn up on a judgment passed under this rule, it being open to the plaintiff to enforce payment of the amount awarded as an order in execution proceedings by virtue of Section 36.

10. Appeal. — An order rejecting an application for a judgment on admissions is a "judgment" within Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable under the Letters Patent.<sup>1</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope and object of the Rule.

2. "Shall produce at the first hearing."

4. Admission of documents after first hearing. See Rule 2.

5. "In such form as the High Court directs." See Appendix II, Form No. 5.

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — A Court must secure a fair trial of cases, and to that end obviate the chances for the parties to adduce forged or manufactured evidence. This rule, accordingly, enjoins on the parties to lay their documents before the Court at the earliest possible opportunity.<sup>1</sup> Where the documents are not in the possession or power of the party, they cannot and therefore need not be produced at the first hearing.<sup>2</sup>

The rule is peremptory that the documents on which a party intends to rely must be produced at the first hearing.<sup>3</sup> But as the object of the rule is not to penalise the parties, the Court is given discretion, under Rule 2, to receive any documents at later stages of the suit if there is no suspicion about their genuineness.<sup>4</sup>

The provisions of this Order relating to the production of documents are made applicable to proceedings under the undermentioned local Acts.<sup>5</sup>

2. "Shall produce at the first hearing." — The procedure under the Code relating to the production of documents by the parties is briefly as follows —

The plaintiff shall produce and deliver into Court with the plaint the document on which he sues, if it is in his possession or power (O. 7 R. 14 sub-rule 1). Other documents, whether in his possession or power or not, on which he relies in support of his claim need not, however, be produced with the plaint, but a list thereof shall be filed at the time of the plaint (O. 7 R. 14 sub-rule 2). In that list the plaintiff need mention only those documents on which he relies for his claim. He need not anticipate the defence case and mention in the list such documents as may form an answer to such a defence. Nor need he mention in the list documents to be produced for the cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses or for refreshing the memory of a witness (Order 7 Rule 18, sub-rule 2).

Where the document referred to in O. 7 R. 14 is not in his possession or power, the plaintiff shall, if possible, state in whose possession or power it is (O. 7 R. 15). After the suit is instituted, a summons with a copy of the plaint is served on the defendant to appear and answer the plaintiff's claim (O. 5 R. 1). The summons will also order the defendant to produce all documents in his possession or power on which he intends to rely in support of his case (O. 5 R. 7). On the day on which the defendant is to appear and answer according to the summons, both parties must be present and the Court may hear the parties (O. 9 R. 1). On that day, both the parties shall, under this rule, bring in all the documents on which they rely, and the Court is bound to receive them, if they duly put them in (sub-rule 2).<sup>1</sup>

The language of this rule may be contrasted with the language used in O. 7, R. 14 with reference to the production of the document on which the plaintiff sues, viz., "he shall produce it in Court and shall at the same time deliver the document . . . to be filed with the plaint." Production as such of documents under this rule amounts only to bringing in the documents with the object of leaving them in Court. The non-production of the documents by a party as per the terms of this rule is done at his own peril, the consequence of such non-production being that the Court will not receive them at a later stage except on satisfactory grounds. Accordingly, the plaintiff, if he desires to avoid the risk of his documents being rejected subsequently and to ensure their being received by the Court, must produce, under this rule, at the first hearing, all the documents mentioned in his list filed under O. 7 R. 14 and also such documents as may be ordered by the Court to be produced under O. 11 R. 14. But documents of the kind specified in O. 7 R. 18, sub-rule 2 or documents which are not in the possession or power of the plaintiff do not come under this rule.<sup>2</sup> The defendant is bound by the same procedure so far as it may be applicable to him.

Is the Court bound to pass an order fixing a date for the production of documents? Under the corresponding provision of the Code of 1882, the parties were required only to keep their documents in readiness at the first hearing to be produced when called for by the Court.<sup>3</sup> The present rule requires the parties not only to get ready but also to produce, i. e., to deposit in Court their documents at the first hearing. The terms of the present rule are clear, and an order fixing a date for production of documents by the parties is not a condition precedent for their production. But the rule does not preclude a Court from calling on the parties, for valid reasons, to produce their documents or a list thereof by a specified date.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where the Court does not want the production of documents till a particular stage in the suit is reached, it may pass an order requiring parties to produce their documents within a specified time.<sup>5</sup> The view, however, that the Court is bound to receive documents at any stage of the suit, if there is no order of the Court for production within a fixed time,<sup>6</sup> does not appear to

1. Effect of non-production of documents. — The object of the previous rule is to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents: see Note 1 to Rule 1. When, therefore, the genuineness of a document is beyond doubt, there can be no reasonable objection to its reception even at a later stage.<sup>1</sup> The rule makes the satisfactory explanation for non-production at the first hearing a condition precedent for the reception of documents produced out of time. But the rule must be liberally construed so as to advance the cause of justice.<sup>2</sup> No documents whether public<sup>3</sup> or private<sup>4</sup> which are above suspicion should be excluded if they are necessary for the proper decision of the case.

The Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, while disagreeing with the view which gives a liberal construction to this rule has, however, arrived at the same result by granting the application under its inherent powers under Section 151 of the Code.<sup>5</sup>

Once a document is received under this rule, no adverse inference can be drawn against the party on the ground of late production.<sup>6</sup>

The discretion to reject a document under this rule must be exercised at the earliest possible opportunity after production, for, documents not promptly rejected<sup>7</sup> or ordered merely to be kept on the file<sup>8</sup> will be deemed to have been received.

The rule applies only to documents which are in the possession or power of a party. Hence, when the documents are in the custody of another Court and are produced after the first hearing, they cannot be rejected under this rule.<sup>9</sup>

2. "Unless good cause is shown." — Vexatious and dilatory applications for the reception of documents cannot be granted.<sup>1</sup> It is not a good cause for non-production that on the day fixed for the production of documents the hearing only resulted in an adjournment.<sup>2</sup> The Court must record its reasons for receiving documents beyond time. Admission of papers after long delay without recording any reasons is wrong.<sup>3</sup> The fact that the documents were in the custody of another Court and that the delay in their production was not due to any fault of the party is sufficient reason for receiving the documents after the first hearing under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

3. Appeal. — The admission or rejection of documents under this rule is entirely in the discretion of the trial Court<sup>1</sup> and an Appellate Court will not interfere with it,<sup>2</sup> unless such discretion has been exercised capriciously or improperly.<sup>3</sup> In a case where the trial Court in its discretion received documents produced at a late stage, the Privy Council said: "If the sanction of the Court can purge the original defect, it has

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. Objection to admissibility.
3. Appeal.

1. Scope of the Rule.—Under Rule 1 the Court receives, as it is bound to do, all documents of every description produced by the parties at the first hearing, however numerous they might be. Under Rule 2, again, the Court, at its discretion, receives documents subsequently produced, or rejects them for late production. Out of the documents received as aforesaid, the Court, under this rule, is expected and empowered to exercise discrimination and reject, even in limine, documents considered irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible,<sup>1</sup> and retain on the file only such of the documents as may, if properly proved, be used as evidence at the trial.<sup>2</sup> Rejection under this rule may be at any stage.<sup>3</sup> For the procedure on rejection, see Rule 6 below.

2. Objection to admissibility.—There is a distinction in this matter between a point of relevancy and a point of admissibility. Whether an objection is raised or not, every Court is bound to reject irrelevant documents.<sup>1</sup> But objections to the admissibility of documents for want of proof or any necessary formality must be taken at the trial<sup>2</sup> and should be decided as they arise and not reserved until judgment is given.<sup>3</sup> In case of doubt on a question of admissibility, the safer course for the Court, in appealable cases, is to admit the document.<sup>4</sup>

No objection will be allowed to be taken in appeal to the admissibility of a document which was admitted in evidence without objection at the trial.<sup>5</sup> The reason is, that if the objection had been taken at the trial, the party tendering the document would have taken steps to duly prove it.<sup>6</sup> But this principle does not apply to a document which the law forbids to be received in evidence. Thus, where a document which is compulsorily registrable under Section 17 of the Registration Act is not registered, Section 49 of that Act forbids such document to be received as evidence of any transaction affecting the immovable property comprised therein. In the case of such a document, the failure to object to the admission of the document in the trial Court is no bar to raising the objection before a superior Court.<sup>7</sup> As to objections on the score of insufficient stamp duty, see Sections 35 and 36 of the Stamp Act (II of 1899), and the undermentioned cases.<sup>8</sup>

(4) When a number of documents of the same nature are admitted, as, for example, a series of receipts for rent, the whole series shall bear one number or capital letter, a small number or small letter being added to distinguish each paper of the series.

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.

2. Endorsements on admitted documentary evidence.

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or initialled" in this rule are new.

2. Endorsements on admitted documentary evidence. — There are two stages relating to documents filed in Court — One is the stage when all the documents are filed by the parties in Court; the next stage is where the documents are formally proved and tendered in evidence. It is at this stage that the Court has to decide whether they are to be admitted or rejected.<sup>1</sup> If the documents are admitted and proved, then the endorsement containing the particulars referred to in the rule is to be made on them. The endorsement is intended to be a record of the fact that the document has been admitted in evidence after the necessary legal formalities have been complied with.<sup>2</sup> An endorsement, therefore, made before the documents are proved,<sup>3</sup> or the practice of putting a seal on the documents immediately on their production,<sup>4</sup> is not proper.

The rule as to the endorsement of the documents must be strictly followed.<sup>5</sup> In Sadik Husain Khan v. Hashim Ali Khan,<sup>6</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council deprecated strongly the practice of not complying with the provisions of this rule and went on to observe as follows:

" Their Lordships, with a view of insisting on the observance of the wholesome provisions of these statutes will, in order to prevent injustice, be obliged in future on the hearing of Indian appeals to refuse to read or permit to be used any document not endorsed in the manner required."

'In Secretary of State v. Sarla Devi,<sup>7</sup> in which the provisions of this rule had been completely ignored, it was held that the documentary evidence in the case could not be regarded as having been legally brought on the record and as being legally before the Court. In Imam-ud-Din v. Sri Ram Perbhu Dial<sup>8</sup> there was a controversy whether the documents had been admitted in evidence and as it was impossible, owing to the absence of the endorsements under this rule, to say whether the documents had, in fact, been admitted in evidence or not, the High Court in appeal found it necessary to remand the case to the lower Court for retrial. But in Mukhi Ram v. Firm Kamta Prasad<sup>9</sup> the Patna High Court has distinguished the above Privy Council case on the ground that in it there was a controversy as to whether the documents had been admitted in evidence by the trial Court and it was held that where there was no doubt as to the documents having been admitted, as a fact, by the trial Court, the mere absence of the endorsements under this rule did not make the documents inadmissible in evidence. A similar view was also taken by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court in the undermentioned case.<sup>10</sup> The marking of documents for mere identification<sup>11</sup> or a mechanical endorsement without the Judge applying his mind to a consideration as to the admissibility of the document,<sup>12</sup> does not amount to an admission in evidence. Similarly, where a document tendered in evidence is marked as an exhibit for purposes of reference, but the endorsement prescribed by this rule is not made, it cannot be said that the document has been admitted in evidence.<sup>13</sup> To such cases, the provisions of Section 36 of the Stamp Act will not, therefore, apply. But where no objection is taken to the admissibility of a document at the time it is let in evidence and the formalities prescribed by this rule are complied with, the admissibility of the document on the ground that it is insufficiently stamped cannot be raised at any subsequent stage by virtue of Section 36 of the Stamp Act.<sup>14</sup>

Documents shown to have been regularly admitted in evidence by a commissioner cannot be objected to on the ground of the want of endorsement by the Court under this rule.<sup>15</sup>

"who shall give a receipt for them in Col. 6 of the list in Form Judicial

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. "Shall be returned."

1. Scope of the Rule. — Documents admitted in evidence are the only documents that can legally be on record.<sup>1</sup> Other documents cannot be on the record of the suit. Where after a document has been admitted in evidence the Court considers that it is a forged document or that its genuineness has not been satisfactorily established, the document should not be "rejected" but must still form part of the record although the Judge may make an endorsement on the document "genuineness not established" or words to that effect.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Shall be returned." — Documents which do not form part of the record as aforesaid should not be used in the case.<sup>1</sup> They should be removed from the records and returned to the persons producing them.<sup>2</sup>

R. 8. [S. 143.] Notwithstanding anything contained in rule 5 or rule 7 of this Order or in rule 17 of Order VII, the Court may, if it sees sufficient cause, direct any document or book produced before it in any suit to be impounded and kept in the custody of an officer of the Court, for such period and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit.

"Provided also that a copy of the decree and of the judgment filed with the memorandum of appeal under Order 41 Rule 1, may be returned after the appeal has been disposed of by the Court."

LAHORE

To sub-rule (1), the following further proviso was added :

"Provided further that the cost of such certified copy shall be recoverable as a fine from the party at whose instance the original document has been produced."

MADRAS

Add the following as sub-rules (3), (4) and (5):

"(3) Every application for return of a document under the first proviso to sub-rule (1) shall be made by a verified petition and shall set forth facts justifying the immediate return of the original.

(4) The Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the costs of any or all the parties to any application under sub-rule (1). If the copy is not so provided within the time fixed by the Court, the original document shall be returned to the applicant without further delay."

"(1a) Where a document is produced by a person who is not a party in the proceeding, the Court may require the party on whose behalf the document is produced, to substitute a certified copy for the original as hereinbefore provided."

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.

2. Scope of the Rule.

3. Stamp duty on copies furnished under this Rule.

1. Legislative changes. — The effect of the principal changes in the rule is —

(1) In appealable cases the Court under the present Code should not only see that the time for preferring an appeal has expired but also be satisfied that no appeal has been preferred.

(2) In the case of return of documents before the time fixed by this rule, the Court under the present Code must also take an undertaking for the production of the original if and when required. The words "and undertakes to produce the original if required to do so" are new.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule provides for the return of documents placed on the record, whereas Rule 7 provides for return of documents not placed on the record. The return under this rule is made subject to conditions intended to secure the preservation of records for use by the Appellate Court if necessary.

The act of returning documents under this rule is merely ministerial and no evidence on oath is required, if there is a proper application for return.<sup>1</sup> Under the second proviso to sub-rule 1, no document shall be returned which, by force of the decree, has become wholly void or useless. But where a suit has been allowed to be withdrawn, the document on which the plaintiff sued does not become void or useless and must be returned.<sup>2</sup>

3. Stamp duty on copies furnished under this Rule. — There is a distinction between a copy substituted under Rule 5 and that substituted under this rule. The latter is liable to stamp duty if required by law.<sup>1</sup>

Court may send for papers from its own records or from other Courts.

(2) Every application made under this rule shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be supported by an affidavit showing how the record is material to the suit in which the application is made, and that the applicant cannot without unreasonable delay or expense obtain a duly authenticated copy of the record or of such portion thereof as the applicant requires, or that the production of the original is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(3) Nothing contained in this rule shall be deemed to enable the Court to use in evidence any document which under the law of evidence would be inadmissible in the suit.

Sub-rule (3) shall be re-numbered as (5) and the following shall be inserted as sub-rules (3) and (4) :

"(3) If the Court thinks fit to send for the record, it shall do so by sending a formal proceeding to the Court whose record is required. No summons to produce any record shall be issued to any record-keeper, chief clerk, or official of any Court.

(4) Whenever a Judge sends for the record of another suit or case, or other official papers, and uses any part of such record or papers as evidence in a trial before him, he shall direct that an authenticated copy of the part so used shall be put up with the trial record, and shall further direct at the expense of which party such copy shall be made."

Documents do not become evidence in the case by the mere fact of being received into the Court under this rule. They must be admitted in evidence by the Court like any other document.<sup>3</sup> See sub-rule 3.

O. 13 R. 10
Notes 1-4

2. Discretion of Court. — The Court has a discretion to grant or refuse an application under this rule.<sup>1</sup> It should not, however, refuse to send for necessary documents on a proper application,<sup>2</sup> nor, having ordered them to be sent for, omit to actually send for them to be used by the party as evidence.<sup>3</sup> But a Court is not bound to send for a document when the party neglects or fails to make an application<sup>4</sup> or where he could but would not employ other means of production of the documents under the Code.<sup>5</sup>

An omission to exercise the discretion in favour of a party in a proper case is a good ground in an appeal or revision provided the party has been prejudiced thereby.<sup>6</sup>

3. "From any other Court." — The Court from which a document is sent for need not necessarily be a Civil Court.<sup>1</sup> But it must be a Court.<sup>2</sup> A Court from which records are sent for under this rule has no discretion to refuse to send them.<sup>3</sup>

4. Affidavit in support of the application. — The rule as to the contents of an affidavit under this rule must be strictly complied with. An application without setting forth the necessary grounds satisfactorily in the affidavit will be rejected.<sup>1</sup>

Add the following to the end of Order 13 :

O. 13 R. 12
(Allahabad)

Every document not written in the Court vernacular or in English, which is produced (a) with a plaint, or (b) at the first hearing, or (c) at any other time tendered in evidence in any suit, appeal, or proceeding, shall be accompanied by a correct translation of the document into the Court vernacular. If any such document is written in the Court vernacular but in characters other than the ordinary Persian or Nagri characters in use, it shall be accompanied by a correct transliteration of its contents into the Persian or Nagri character.

The person making the translation or transliteration shall give his name and address and verify that the translation or transliteration is correct. ## ORDER XIV.

SETTLEMENT OF ISSUES AND DETERMINATION OF SUIT

ON ISSUES OF LAW OR ON ISSUES AGREED UPON

O. 14 R. 1

R. 1. [S. 146.] (1) Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other.

Framing of issues.

(2) Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence.

O. 14 R. 1
Notes 1-2

(3) Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other shall form the subject of a distinct issue.

(4) Issues are of two kinds: (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law.

(5) At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall, after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend.

(6) Nothing in this rule requires the Court to frame and record issues where the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence.

1. Legislative changes. — In sub-rule (2), the words "or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence" are new.

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — The plaint and the written statement constitute the pleadings in a case and mark the first stage at which the differences between the parties are placed before the Court. The Court itself may also at the first hearing examine the parties in order to ascertain with precision, the propositions of law or fact on which the parties are at variance;<sup>1</sup> and on such questions issues have to be framed and recorded.<sup>2</sup>

The framing of issues has a very important bearing on the trial and decision of a case. In the first place, it is the issues fixed and not the pleadings that guide the parties in the matter of adducing evidence.<sup>3</sup> Thus, when a point has been the subject of an issue, the parties will not be heard to say that the point was not disputed and so required no proof.<sup>4</sup> Secondly, the Court cannot refuse to decide a point on which an issue has been framed and evidence given by the parties,<sup>5</sup> even if the point involved is not mentioned in the pleadings.<sup>6</sup> Conversely, the Court should not decide a suit on a matter on which no issue has been raised.<sup>7</sup> Finally, if the case goes in appeal it must be dealt with by the Appellate Court on the issues settled for trial<sup>8</sup> and not on a point on which there is no issue.<sup>9</sup> It is therefore essential to the right decision of a case that appropriate issues should be framed and tried.<sup>10</sup>

Sub-rule (1) declares that an issue arises when a material proposition of law or fact is affirmed by one party and denied by the other,<sup>11</sup> and sub-rule (2) defines what material propositions are.

The issues should be confined to points necessary for the proper trial and disposal of the case and should not be framed with respect to points not so necessary.<sup>12</sup> No issue need be framed on a point of law which is perfectly clear,<sup>13</sup> nor is the Court bound to grant an issue on a point not arising on the pleadings.<sup>14</sup> But when the pleadings raise points with sufficient clearness, issues should be framed on them though they may not have been put in the pleadings in any particular form.<sup>15</sup> Sub-rule (3) declares what each issue should contain. The issues should be so framed as to embrace the whole dispute in the suit<sup>16</sup> but to cover only the points in dispute and to cover each point once only.<sup>17</sup>

It is primarily the duty of the Judge to frame the proper issues in a case<sup>18</sup> and the Judge must apply his mind and understand the facts before framing them.<sup>19</sup> Where issues have already been framed in a suit, the fact that the Judge who framed the issues has been transferred will not make it obligatory on the incoming Judge to frame issues again.<sup>20</sup> Where after the filing of a written statement, the Court passes a consent decree on the agreement of the parties, there is no obligation on the Court to frame issues before passing the decree.<sup>21</sup>

Sub-rule (6) relates to cases where the defendant makes no defence. The Court is not bound to frame and record issues when the defendant is ex parte and no written statement has been put in.<sup>22</sup> But even in ex parte cases, if there is any room for doubt about any matter, the Court has been held, under certain circumstances, to be bound to inform the plaintiff specifically what points he has to prove.<sup>23</sup>

As to particular issues arising in certain kinds of suits, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>24</sup>

A point alleged by the plaintiff and admitted by the defendant cannot be said to be in issue and a decision can be given on the basis of such admission without an issue.<sup>25</sup> Averments contained in the plaint which are not traversed in the written statement and as to which no issue has been asked for will be deemed to be admitted.<sup>26</sup>

3. Issues between co-defendants. — It is contrary to practice to frame and try issues between co-defendants.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, such an issue is necessary for giving appropriate relief to the plaintiff, it should be framed and tried.<sup>2</sup>

4. Omission to frame issues. — A Court commits a grave irregularity in proceeding to the final hearing of a case without settling issues therein.<sup>1</sup> But the mere omission to frame issues is not necessarily fatal to the trial of the suit.<sup>2</sup> It is an irregularity which may or may not be a material one. If such omission has affected the disposal of the case on the merits it will be a ground for remanding the case for a new trial. But if, on the other hand, parties have not been prejudiced by the omission<sup>3</sup> and substantial justice has been done in the case notwithstanding the omission to frame issues,<sup>4</sup> the decision will not be set aside or remanded for a new trial. Thus, a decision will not be interfered with in the following cases on the ground of issue not having been framed —

- (1) Where the issue omitted relates to a point not necessary for the right determination of the case;<sup>5</sup>
- (2) Where, in spite of the omission of an issue, the parties are alive to the point, have adduced evidence on it, and have discussed it in the trial Court.<sup>6</sup> Thus, in a case where no specific issue was raised on a point but it was treated as if it arose in the suit and it had been put in issue in another suit between the same parties, it was held that evidence in that suit could be considered to determine the question where no surprise would be caused thereby;<sup>7</sup>
- (3) Where, in spite of the omission, the party affected had notice of the point and had opportunity to adduce evidence to meet it;<sup>8</sup> or
- (4) Where the omission was due to the deliberate conduct of the party affected.<sup>9</sup>

On the other hand, where there has been no trial at all or only an imperfect trial on the point as a consequence of the omission of an issue on it, the decision will be set aside.<sup>10</sup> In such cases the Appellate Court should frame the proper issues and remand the case for re-trial on them.<sup>11</sup> Where an issue already framed, though in terms covering the main question in the case, does not sufficiently direct the attention of the parties to it, and may thereby have prevented a party from adducing evidence on it, the proper course is to frame fresh issues and to remand the case for re-trial on them.<sup>12</sup>

5. Wrong issues. — Where wrong issues have been framed in a suit and the suit has been disposed of on the findings on those issues, the decision will be set aside in appeal and the suit remanded for re-trial after framing proper issues.<sup>1</sup> This, however, will not be done where, in spite of the wrong issues, the points have been correctly understood by all the parties<sup>2</sup> or where all the available evidence has been adduced on the necessary points and duly discussed.<sup>3</sup>

6. Issues by consent. — Where the issues raised in a suit have been consented to by a party, then the decision cannot be objected to by him on the ground that the issues are wrong or defective or unnecessary.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where the parties affected by the wrong issue have waived their objections thereto, the decision will not be interfered with.<sup>2</sup>

7. Abandonment of issue. — It is open to the parties to abandon issues, thereby waiving the points raised therein. Such abandonment may be express or implied. It has been held by the High Court of Madras that Courts are not bound to raise issues suo motu on questions of fact where parties do not ask for them, that the omission to raise such issues implies an abandonment of such questions by the party interested, but that, where the question is one of law, it is incumbent on the Court to frame proper issues on such questions.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Bombay has, on the other hand, broadly held that it would be unsafe to presume, from the failure of the Court to raise the necessary issues, an intention on the part of the party to admit the fact which the other party was bound to prove.<sup>2</sup>

Even on points raised in the pleadings, the conduct of a party may, in certain circumstances, amount to abandonment.<sup>3</sup> A pleader duly appointed to conduct a case on behalf of his client has full authority to abandon an issue raised on behalf of his client and the latter will be bound by such abandonment.<sup>4</sup>

8. Delay in raising issue. — Rule 5 gives the Court power to raise issues or amend or strike out issues at any time. The mere fact that a particular issue was raised at a late stage of the suit will be immaterial if the parties had sufficient opportunity to

9. Issue not raised in the pleadings but in evidence. — A relief not founded on the pleadings should not ordinarily be granted. Where a material point has not been raised in the pleadings and is not comprised in the issues originally framed, but appears for the first time in evidence, the Court may frame an issue on it and decide it<sup>2</sup> after giving the party affected an opportunity to meet it.<sup>3</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or any part thereof" are new.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — Ordinarily, a Court is not under any obligation as to the order in which it is to try the issues raised before it, and has the right to dispose of the issues in any way which it considers most likely to be conducive to the ascertainment of truth.<sup>1</sup> There are however two reservations. The first is that in appealable cases, the Court should as far as possible decide on all the issues joined, inasmuch as a piecemeal trial might lead to protracted litigation and repeated appeals in the same suit.<sup>2</sup> The second is that contained in this rule, which prescribes that where issues of law going to the root of the case and capable of being decided without evidence arise, the Court is bound to try those issues first<sup>3</sup> and may in its discretion postpone the settlement of the issues of fact until after the issues of law have been determined.<sup>4</sup> The rule casts on the Court the duty of determining whether circumstances exist in each particular case for the exercise of the power conferred therein.<sup>5</sup> Where a party suggests that the suit can be disposed of on the hearing of a preliminary issue, the proper procedure is to set down the case for settlement of issues and on that day decide which, if any, of the issues can be decided in the above manner.<sup>6</sup>

The present rule, no doubt, contemplates the procedure to be followed at the issue stage. But O. 15 R. 3 empowers the Judge to proceed to determine issues of law at any subsequent stage also,<sup>7</sup> so that even if issues of fact have been settled, a Judge commits no irregularity if he proceeds to determine issues of law postponing the trial of the issues of fact.<sup>8</sup>

At the hearing of a case on a preliminary issue, the party by whom it is raised has the right to begin.<sup>9</sup>

The trial of issues of fact will not be stayed pending appeal on the decision on law except upon very strong grounds.<sup>10</sup>

An issue requiring evidence is not a preliminary issue which can be dealt with under this rule.<sup>11</sup> Where all the issues are issues of fact, the Court has no power to try only some of them and postpone the trial of the others, save on the ground of embarrassment.<sup>12</sup>

The decision on a preliminary issue cannot be re-opened in the trial Court.<sup>13</sup>

3. Revision. — Where the trial Court fails to consider whether a case or a part thereof may be disposed of on issues of law only, but merely says that it is not desirable that the case be decided piecemeal, the order is open to revision by the High Court.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The word “pleadings” in clause (b) has been substituted for the words “in the plaint or in the written statement (if any) tendered in the suit” which occurred in the corresponding portion of the old Section.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — In Eshenchunder v. Shamcharan,<sup>1</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that “the determinations in a cause should be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings or involved in, or consistent with, the case thereby made.” In order to provide against failure of justice upon technical rules of pleadings and to enable the Court to frame issues on correct points of dispute, this rule prescribes that the Courts are to base the issues not on the pleadings only but on the other materials referred to in the rule as well.<sup>2</sup> Owing to the infelicitous mode of drawing up pleadings prevalent in this country, the real points in dispute are often missed or obscured and therefore even if the pleadings are bad, it is the duty of the Judge to ascertain these points clearly and frame issues accordingly.<sup>3</sup> The proper “materials” that may be taken into consideration under this rule are —

- (1) Allegations made on oath by the parties or any persons present on their behalf and statements made by pleaders appearing for the parties<sup>4</sup> [clause (a)] ;
- (2) Allegations made in pleadings or in answer to interrogatories [clause (b)] ; and,
- (3) Documents filed by parties [clause (c)].

Under Rule 4 the Judge can summon witnesses and documents and examine them before framing issues. In Rule 5 provision is made for amendment, addition and striking out of issues in the course of the trial.

Notes 2-4

These "materials" mentioned in the rule are only intended to enable the Court to ascertain the contentions of the parties with precision,<sup>5</sup> i. e., to elucidate points which are ambiguous or obscure.<sup>6</sup> They cannot enlarge the scope of the pleadings so as to enable the Court to raise an issue on a point not at all raised in the pleadings.<sup>7</sup> But the Court cannot refuse to enquire into a plea raised by plaintiff's vakil in reply to question put to him by the Court even though such a plea has not been advanced in the original plaint.<sup>8</sup> Also, where a plaint has not set out the true facts, a plea raised by a defendant in his examination cannot be refused on the ground that it is not found in the written statement.<sup>9</sup>

The result of the exhaustive provisions contained in this rule is that if a point or plea has not been raised or agitated in the trial Court, it will not ordinarily be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal.<sup>10</sup>

The provisions of this rule do not apply where the defendant is ex parte.<sup>11</sup>

3. Issue not to be inconsistent with the pleadings. — The issue raised by the Court should not be inconsistent with the allegations contained in the pleadings.<sup>1</sup> Thus, on a plea of forgery of a document, no issue can be raised as to whether it was executed under coercion or undue influence.<sup>2</sup> But an issue as to undue influence is not inconsistent with a plea of fraud.<sup>3</sup>

4. Appeal. — An order refusing to frame an issue asked for by a party is not appealable either under the Code<sup>1</sup> or under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent as a "judgment."<sup>2</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The word "controversy" which occurred in the old Section has been changed into "matters in controversy."

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — This rule provides for amending issues, framing additional issues and striking out issues in the course of the trial of a suit. A Court trying a civil action has inherent jurisdiction to take cognizance of questions going to the root of the subject-matter in controversy between the parties at any stage of the trial.<sup>1</sup> But before doing so, the Court should frame and record issues on such questions.<sup>2</sup>

This rule does not enable the re-opening of issues already closed; in other words, a permission to raise an additional issue will not empower the party to let in additional evidence on issues already closed.<sup>3</sup>

A Judge who transfers a case to his own file can amend the issues already framed and frame additional issues.<sup>4</sup>

3. Where an amendment of issues and the framing of new issues is obligatory. — Where an amendment of an issue or an additional issue is necessary for determining the matter in controversy between the parties, it is obligatory on the Court under the second portion of sub-rule (1) to make such amendments of issues or to frame such additional issues. The principle underlying this provision is that Courts are bound to take into consideration all the rights of parties whether legal or equitable.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where the pleadings and proof necessarily lead to one or more particular issues, it is the duty of the Court, if they do not come by surprise to the other side, to raise such issues and give relief thereon.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where a matter is fairly within the scope of the pleadings and important for the decision of the substantial dispute between the parties, it is equally the duty of the Court to frame issue on it and decide it.<sup>3</sup> For illustrations of this principle, see the cases noted below.<sup>4</sup> If the issues already framed do not clearly bring out the points in controversy between the parties,<sup>5</sup> or if by inadvertence or other causes the recorded issues do not enable the Court to try the whole case on the merits,<sup>6</sup> the issues should be amended or new issues framed in order to be able to give a decision on the real points in dispute. Where a suit has been adjusted by a valid compromise and it is brought to the notice of the Court, it is bound to raise an issue in respect of the compromise and proceed to determine it.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 4-6

4. Where an amendment of issues and the framing of additional issues is discretionary. — The first portion of sub-rule (1) leaves it to the discretion of the Court to amend issues or frame additional issues in certain cases not falling within the obligatory provision. Where no injustice would be done to either party, the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, under special circumstances, may allow issues to be raised upon matters which do not come within the proper scope of the pleadings.<sup>1</sup> The same discretion applies in the matter of amendment of issues also.<sup>2</sup> This discretion is, however, subject to several restrictions. Thus a party, having set up one case and failed in it, will not be allowed to ask for issues to be raised to suit the proof.<sup>3</sup> Nor should a Judge take the case altogether out of the hands of the parties and make for them a case which they had no intention of making for themselves.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, no amendment should be made and no new issues raised on points which are inconsistent with the original pleas,<sup>5</sup> or are wholly different from them,<sup>6</sup> or which will change the nature of the suit;<sup>7</sup> nor should a new issue be framed which would re-open the whole case.<sup>8</sup>

Where a Judge at the settlement of issues had decided not to raise a certain issue, the question cannot be re-opened at the trial.<sup>9</sup>

The exercise of the power under this part of the sub-rule being discretionary, it is doubtful whether a revision would lie from an order declining to amend issues or frame additional issues.<sup>10</sup> In any view, the exercise of the discretion will not be interfered with unless the discretion is shown to have been abused or perversely exercised.<sup>11</sup>

5. "At any time before passing a decree." — The Court may amend issues or frame additional issues at any time before passing a decree.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the power can be exercised even after the close of the arguments<sup>2</sup> unless the exercise of the power at such a late stage is likely to prejudice the fair trial of the case.<sup>3</sup>

A Court acts irregularly in simply recording a proceeding declaring its intention to frame additional issues and postponing the actual framing of such issues till judgment.<sup>4</sup>

6. Power of the Appellate Court to amend the issues or frame additional issues. — Where, by inadvertence or other causes the issues recorded do not enable the Appellate Court to try the whole case on the merits, it should make the necessary

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. | 2. Appeal.

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule may be compared with Order 36 which deals with the statement of a special case for the opinion of the Court, without bringing a suit. This rule and Rule 7 deal with stating by consent, of special issues in a suit, and provide for what may be called an adjustment or compromise of a suit, not absolutely as under O. 23 R. 3 but contingently on the opinion of the Court on certain issues of fact or law submitted to it. Upon the finding on those issues being given, the adjustment or compromise becomes absolute.<sup>1</sup> As to the form of agreement for issues to be tried, see Appendix H, Form No. 1.

2. Appeal. — A decree passed under the terms of Rules 6 and 7 is appealable.<sup>1</sup> But where the parties agreed to refer issues of fact to a commissioner and to abide by his findings, it was held that no appeal would lie against a decree passed on the report of the commissioner.<sup>2</sup>

Court, if satisfied that agreement was executed in good faith, may pronounce judgment.

R. 7. [S. 151.] Where the Court is satisfied, after making such inquiry as it deems proper, —

- (a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,
- (b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and
- (c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided, it shall proceed to record and try the issue and state its finding or decision thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and shall, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and, upon the judgment so pronounced, a decree shall follow.

DISPOSAL OF THE SUIT AT THE FIRST HEARING

R. 1. [S. 152.] Where at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment. O. 15 R. 1

1. First hearing, meaning of. — See Order 8 Rule 1.

2. Disposal at first hearing. — Where the parties are not at issue upon any point of fact or law, the Court may, under this rule, at once pronounce judgment. It has been seen in O. 5 R. 1 that no summons need be sent to a defendant who has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim. In such a case and in cases where the defendant appears after summons at the first hearing and confesses judgment, the Court may proceed to give judgment.<sup>1</sup> But the Court must be satisfied that the proper persons are before the Court and that the confession of judgment is unconditional. Where the confession is conditional the Court must dispose of the suit on the merits.<sup>2</sup>

A Court is not justified in disposing of a case two days before the date fixed for hearing and the decree so passed will be set aside.<sup>3</sup>

R. 2. [S. 153.] Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants. O. 15 R. 2

the Court is satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once adduce is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit, and that no injustice will result from proceeding with the suit forthwith, the Court may proceed to determine such issues, and, if the finding thereon is sufficient for the decision, may pronounce judgment accordingly, whether the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit :

Provided that, where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the parties or their pleaders are present and none of them objects.

(2) Where the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the Court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such further argument as the case requires.

Synopsis

1. Application of the Rule.
2. Summons for settlement of issues only — Effect of.
3. "And shall fix a day" — Sub-rule (2).

1. Application of the Rule. — This rule and O. 14 R. 2, give power to the Court to try issues of law first. The power under O. 14 R. 2 can be exercised at the issue stage.<sup>1</sup> As to whether this rule gives power to the Courts to proceed to determine issues of law at a stage subsequent to the issue stage, there is a difference of opinion.

The High Courts of Madras<sup>3</sup> and Patna<sup>3</sup> have held that it does, while the High Court of Calcutta<sup>4</sup> has held that it does not.

But though this rule empowers a Court to dispose of a suit on preliminary issues, it should not ordinarily do so but should pronounce its opinion on all important issues.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that piecemeal trial of a case leads to serious inconvenience and protracts litigation. In Tara Kant Banerjee v. Puddo Monee Dossee,<sup>6</sup> Lord Justice Turner, in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council, observed as follows :

"The Courts below, in appealable cases, by forbearing from deciding on all the issues joined, not infrequently oblige this Committee to recommend that a cause be remanded which might otherwise be finally decided on appeal. This is certainly a serious evil to the parties litigant, as it may involve the expense of a second appeal as well as that of another hearing below. It is much to be desired, therefore, that in appealable cases the Courts below should, as far as may be practicable, pronounce their opinion on all the important points.

Where the suit is sought to be disposed of on a preliminary point of law, it must be done only on the assumption that the facts pleaded can be and are proved.<sup>7</sup>

2. Summons for settlement of issues only—Effect of. — Where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the Court may proceed to hear and dispose of the case if the parties are ready and willing to proceed.<sup>1</sup> If, however, one of the parties objects to the adoption of such a procedure, the Court has no jurisdiction to proceed to dispose of the case.<sup>2</sup>

3. "And shall fix a day"—Sub-rule (2). — The object of the Code in requiring a day to be fixed for the hearing of the case and all the evidence to be adduced on that day is that parties may thus be confronted with each other and the whole evidence on either side be at one and the same time before the Court.<sup>1</sup>

R. 4. [S. 155.] Where the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit and either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may, if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary for its decision upon such issues.

Court can determine preliminary issues first. See Note 1.
Proviso to the Rule. See Note 2.

1. "The Court may pronounce judgment." — Even in a case in which the summons may have been issued for final disposal, the Court has a discretion to adjourn the case for the production of such evidence as may be necessary. Thus, if, after the written statement is filed, the suit is found to involve issues of a less simple character than might have been anticipated at the outset, it is desirable, in the interests of justice, that the discretion given to the Court by this rule should be so exercised as to ensure a fair trial and not to deny, in effect, the trial to the parties.<sup>1</sup>

Where a party fails, without sufficient cause, to produce his evidence on the date fixed for final disposal, and an adjournment is refused, the Court can at once pronounce judgment. But it cannot dismiss the suit for non-prosecution.<sup>2</sup>

2. "Sufficient cause." — Where the plaintiff and the defendants were endeavouring to settle their differences by arbitration, and the plaintiff was told by one of the defendants that he would inform the Court of what was going on, in consequence of which plaintiff did not appear with his evidence on the day fixed, it was held that there was sufficient cause for the plaintiff not to be ready with his evidence.<sup>1</sup>

3. Appeal. — A pronouncement of judgment under this rule is a decree and is appealable as such.<sup>1</sup>

"1. (1) On such date as the Court may appoint and not later than 30 days after the settlement of issues, the parties shall present in Court a list of witnesses whom they propose to call either to give evidence or to produce documents.

(2) They shall not be permitted to call witnesses other than those contained in the said list, except with the permission of the Court and after showing good cause for the omission of the said witnesses from the list; the Court granting such permission shall record reasons for so doing.

Where such a list has been called for from any party, the latter shall not, except for special reasons, be permitted to summon or produce as witness, any person whose name has not been entered in the list.

The words "at any time after the suit is instituted" have been substituted for the words "after the summons has been delivered or sent for service on the defendant, whether it be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit . . . . . before the day fixed for such settlement or disposal."

For the effect of the change, see Note 3.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This Order contains the necessary rules in the matter of enforcing the attendance of persons either to give evidence or to produce documents provided for in Sections 30 and 32, ante. Though the Court is bound to help the parties in this behalf,<sup>1</sup> it is ordinarily for the parties to move the Court to take the necessary steps,<sup>2</sup> unless the Court chooses to act of its own motion under Rule 14, infra.

The powers exercisable by Civil Courts under this Order have been conferred on the tribunals appointed under the undermentioned Acts.<sup>3</sup>

3. When witness summons may be applied for. — Section 159 of the Code of 1882 was differently worded as is shown in Note 1, supra. It was, however, held under that Code that an application under that Section could be made at any time before the party closed his case and not necessarily before the date of the first hearing.<sup>1</sup> The present Code has clearly provided that an application under this rule can be made at any time after the institution of the suit.

The Court had a discretion in the matter of such summons and had to be satisfied that such evidence was material.<sup>1</sup> There is nothing in this rule to prevent a party from examining his opponent as his witness in the case.<sup>2</sup> See also Rule 21, infra.

5. Refusal of summons. — The Court is bound to issue summons where application is made at any time after the institution of the suit and before its final disposal<sup>1</sup> provided the application made therefor is a proper one.<sup>2</sup> It cannot be refused on the ground that such an application is too late, though it is within the discretion of the Court to refuse an adjournment of the hearing on the ground of want of diligence of the party.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that it is possible that the hearing may for some reason be adjourned or the party may have his own facilities for the expeditious service of summons.<sup>4</sup> Rule 9, infra, which provides that summons must be served on the witness in sufficient time, is only a rule in favour of the witness and intended to induce due diligence in the party; but it does not empower the Court to refuse to issue a witness summons on the ground of late application.<sup>5</sup> Nor can summons be refused on the ground that the evidence of a witness may not be beneficial to the party,<sup>6</sup> or that the witness had not been summoned before,<sup>7</sup> or that the party had undertaken to bring his witnesses,<sup>8</sup> or that steps were not taken by the party within a time fixed by the Court for that purpose.<sup>9</sup>

This rule does not, however, take away the inherent power of the Court to refuse witness summons in order to prevent an abuse of the process of the Court.<sup>10</sup>

6. Remedy when summons is refused. — An order refusing an application for witness summons is not open to appeal; but its correctness can be questioned in an appeal from the decree in the suit and subject to the limitations prescribed in Sections 99 and 105 of the Code.<sup>1</sup> The High Court may, in a proper case, interfere even in a second appeal<sup>2</sup> provided the appellant had insisted on his right in both the lower Courts.<sup>3</sup>

7. Form of witness summons. — See Form No. 13 in Appendix B of the First Schedule.

8. Second appeal. — See Note 6 above.

9. Revision. — An order wrongly refusing an application may be a material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction and in that case will be open to revision.<sup>1</sup>

Considerations in fixing the scale of expenses. Party making due payment not responsible for service. See Note 5.

1. Legislative changes. — Sub-rule (2) is new.

2. Applicability of the Rule to Chartered High Courts. — This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts. See Order 49 Rule 3.

3. Expenses of witnesses. — A witness is entitled to be paid his travelling and other expenses for his attendance in Court. But except as provided for in sub-rule (2), no witness is entitled to any compensation for loss of time<sup>1</sup> or to any special amount on the ground of status,<sup>2</sup> though the expenses may be claimed suitable to the rank or status of the witness.<sup>3</sup> The right to claim expenses is not lost by the fact of the witness having attended and given evidence before making the claim,<sup>4</sup> or of his having been called by one party and examined by the opposite party.<sup>5</sup> The Court must give the party a reasonable time for payment of the amount of expenses into Court.<sup>6</sup>

4. Remedy where the expenses are not paid. — The remedy of the witness whose expenses are not paid is by an application to the Court and not by a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> See also Rule 4.

5. Effect of non-service of summons owing to the default of the process-server. — If the party duly pays the necessary fees into Court, he is not answerable for the non-service of the summons owing to the default of the process-server.<sup>1</sup> A dismissal of the plaintiff's suit by reason of the plaintiff's witnesses not appearing owing to the default of the process-server in serving the summons on them, is illegal.<sup>2</sup> It is otherwise if the fees are not duly paid.<sup>3</sup>

6. Government servants summoned as witnesses, if entitled to salary during absence on summons. — Government servants summoned as witnesses are not entitled to the payment of any salary as part of the expenses inasmuch as the Government does not deduct any salary for such absence.<sup>1</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule lays down the procedure for the recovery of the expenses or the remuneration of a witness where an insufficient sum has been paid in or where he is detained for more than one day.<sup>1</sup> On default of payment, provision is made also for the discharge of the witness without requiring him to give evidence.

4a. Order for attachment of property—Sub-rule (3). — A Court can order the attachment of the property of a witness under sub-rule (3) of this rule. In applying for attachment under this sub-rule, a party is not in the same position as a decree-holder seeking to attach the property of his judgment-debtor. The reason is that proceedings to enforce the attendance of a witness are the acts of the Court and the object of such proceedings is to vindicate the authority of the Court. Hence, where the properties of a person other than the witness are attached by mistake, the party applying for attachment is not liable for damages.<sup>1</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. When fine can be imposed.
3. Appeal.

1. Scope of the Rule. — Rule 11 deals with the case when the person served appears and shows proper cause for his failure to appear; the present rule applies to a witness who does not appear or on appearance, fails to show proper cause.<sup>1</sup>

This rule does not affect the special jurisdiction of a Chartered High Court to proceed for contempt against a defaulting witness.<sup>2</sup>

2. When fine can be imposed. — There is a conflict of opinion on the point as to when fine can be imposed and three different views have been expressed —

- (1) The first view is that no fine can be imposed under this rule until the procedure laid down in Rule 10, sub-rule (2) or sub-rule (3) has been followed, i. e., either a proclamation or a warrant of arrest or an attachment has been issued.<sup>1</sup> A person to whom a summons has been issued and who fails to obey it cannot straightway be fined under this rule.
- (2) The second view is that the words "such person" in this rule refer to the "person to whom a summons has been issued" in sub-rule (1) of Rule 10 and that the issue of a proclamation or an order for arrest or attachment are not conditions precedent to the imposition of fine, and that this rule deals with all cases of disobedience not covered by Rule 11.<sup>2</sup>
- (3) Where a party is present in Court and is directed to produce a document, the Court can, on his failure to comply with the order, impose a fine upon him without going through the procedure in sub-rules (2) and (3).<sup>3</sup>

It is submitted that the second of the above views is correct. This rule, Rule 11 and sub-rules (2) and (3) of Rule 10 all refer to "such person" and must, therefore, necessarily refer to some person referred to before, i. e., "a person to whom a summons has been issued" in sub-rule (1) of Rule 10.

What is lawful excuse depends upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>4</sup>

3. Appeal. — An appeal lies from an order imposing a fine under this rule: vide Section 104 (1) (h) of this Code. But there is no second appeal: see S. 104 (2).

As regards orders of attachment and sale under this rule, no appeal lay under the Code of 1882.<sup>1</sup> Rule 13 of the present Code makes applicable to such attachment and sale, all the provisions in the Code regarding attachment and sale in execution of a decree.

1. Scope and applicability. — This rule applies to miscellaneous proceedings also.<sup>1</sup> The provisions of this rule being highly penal in character, the rule must be strictly construed.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a party is bound only to produce the document required and is not bound to exhibit it as evidence in the case.<sup>3</sup> Again, the rule applies only when the party is present in Court and refuses to comply with the order.<sup>4</sup> The failure in one suit to obey a requisition to produce or give evidence will not entitle the Court to give a judgment against the defaulter under this rule, in any other suit.<sup>5</sup> Nor can the rule be applied when the default has been once condoned<sup>6</sup> nor against all parties when only one of them was affected by an obligation under this rule.<sup>7</sup>

A party who is not guilty of wilful default is not liable to be visited with the consequences of this rule.<sup>9</sup>

2. "May pronounce." — The rule is permissive and not mandatory and it is, therefore, within the discretion of the Court to pronounce judgment against the defaulter,<sup>1</sup> though such discretion must be exercised with caution and forbearance.<sup>2</sup> It would be a wrong exercise of discretion if the Court penalises the party and prevents him from proving his case<sup>3</sup> merely by reason of the default. Where, for example, there is sufficient evidence on his side<sup>4</sup> or where the opposite party has failed to give any evidence in support of his own case,<sup>5</sup> or the claim of the opposite party is prima facie unsustainable,<sup>6</sup> the Court need not act under this rule. But the Court will be justified in acting under this rule against the defaulting party<sup>7</sup> where, for example, his evidence or his production of any document is material<sup>8</sup> or where there is evidence for the opposite party<sup>9</sup> or where the opposite party is unable to make out his case without compliance of the order, by the defaulting party.<sup>10</sup>

Substitute the following for Rule 21 :

"21. (1) When a party to a suit is required by any other party thereto to give evidence or to produce a document, the provisions as to witnesses shall apply to him so far as applicable.

(2) When a party to a suit gives evidence on his own behalf, the Court may, in its discretion, permit him to include as costs in the suit a sum of money equal to the amount payable for travelling and other expenses to other witnesses in the case of similar standing."

1. Opposite party as a witness. — This rule applies only to the case where a party to a suit has been called to give evidence by the other party. The Court has, therefore, no power under this Code to order the travelling expenses of a party who has given evidence in support of his own case.<sup>1</sup> See the amendment to this rule made by the Calcutta High Court.

The practice of a party not examining himself as his witness and forcing the opposite party to summon him, thereby hoping to obtain an opportunity of being cross-examined by his own counsel,<sup>2</sup> has been severely condemned by their Lordships of the Privy Council. The High Courts of Bombay and Lahore have also held that the practice of summoning the opposite party as a witness is equally objectionable.<sup>3</sup>

As regards the weight of the evidence of the opposite party summoned as a witness, see the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

It is the duty of a party who has certain facts within his personal knowledge to appear before the Court at a very early stage of the case as a witness and to give evidence relating to these facts and submit himself to cross-examination by the other side.<sup>5</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — The rule vests in Courts a discretion to grant time to a party at any stage of the suit.<sup>1</sup> But the application of the rule is limited to adjournments granted at the instance of parties and does not extend to those necessitated by rules of the Court.<sup>2</sup> Thus, an order made on the settlement of issues fixing a day for the final hearing is not an order under this rule.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, orders for adjournment necessitated by delay on the part of Court's officers in the performance of Court's duty are not governed by this rule.<sup>4</sup> But the High Court of Allahabad has held in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that this rule applies both to adjournments made at the instance of a party and to adjournments by the Court of its own motion.

The rule speaks of the "hearing of the suit." There is a distinction between the hearing of the suit and the hearing of evidence. Thus, the Court may adjourn the hearing of the suit and yet may, under O. 13 R. 2, refuse to accept documentary evidence which ought to have been but was not produced at the first hearing of the suit, though such hearing resulted only in an adjournment.<sup>6</sup>

Neither this rule nor any other rule of this Order applies to execution proceedings.<sup>7</sup> Vide also Notes under Rules 2 and 3.

2. "May adjourn" — Discretion of Court. — The granting of an adjournment to a party to a suit is, under this rule, left to the discretion of the Court.<sup>1</sup> The discretion is not subject to any definite rules, but should be exercised in a judicial and reasonable manner,<sup>3</sup> and upon proper materials.<sup>3</sup> It should be exercised after considering the party's conduct in the case,<sup>4</sup> and the opportunity he has had of getting ready, and the truth and sufficiency of the reason alleged by him for not being ready.<sup>5</sup> Where the adjournment is refused, reasons should be given for such refusal.<sup>6</sup>

The main object of vesting the discretion in the Court is to enable it to prevent a party from improperly delaying proceedings and abusing the process of the Court.<sup>7</sup> The Court should not, therefore, be too technical in such matters,<sup>8</sup> and unless there is a pressing necessity for proceeding with the case, or the application for adjournment is obviously frivolous, the adjournment asked for should not be refused.<sup>9</sup> But adjournment is improper when it is granted on the intervention of a third party without hearing the plaintiff or his pleader.<sup>10</sup>

3. Sufficient cause must be shown. — On the one hand, an adjournment should not be refused where sufficient cause for the adjournment is shown;<sup>1</sup> and on the other, it should not be granted even on condition of payment of costs, where no sufficient cause exists.<sup>2</sup>

What is sufficient cause will depend upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>3</sup> Speaking generally, where the necessity for the adjournment is not due to anything for which the party applying for it is responsible,<sup>4</sup> or where there has been little or no negligence on his part,<sup>5</sup> an adjournment should not be refused. But where the party has been wanting in due diligence,<sup>6</sup> or is guilty of negligence,<sup>7</sup> an adjournment can be refused.

The following are some of the circumstances which have been held to constitute sufficient cause for adjournment — should be communicated to the parties or their pleaders or to such of them as are present or represented in Court when the adjournment takes place.<sup>3</sup> It is not, however, necessary to communicate it to an absent party,<sup>3</sup> for, it is the duty of the pleaders to get acquainted with the date of adjournment.<sup>4</sup> See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>5</sup>

5. Costs of adjournment — Sub-rule (2). — In granting an adjournment under this rule, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct the party asking for adjournment to pay costs to the other party.<sup>1</sup> The sum so awarded should not, however, be in the nature of a penalty or punishment but should be commensurate with the costs which, in the opinion of the Court, the party who is ready will have to incur;<sup>2</sup> and sufficient opportunity should be given to the party to obey the order.<sup>3</sup> The rule gives the Court power to make an order as to costs only in respect of the costs occasioned by the adjournment and not the costs of the suit generally.<sup>4</sup>

An order directing payment of costs can be executed under Section 36.

The payment of costs may be made a condition precedent to the adjournment.<sup>5</sup> Such a condition need not, however, be express if it is sufficiently obvious from the context.<sup>6</sup> If the costs are not so paid a further adjournment may be refused.<sup>7</sup> If a suit or appeal is adjourned on condition that it will stand dismissed if the costs of the adjournment are not paid within a certain date, then, on failure of payment of costs within such a date, the suit or appeal will stand dismissed.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, if the suit is adjourned on condition that if the defendant does not pay the costs ordered before the adjourned date, the defence will be struck off and the suit proceeded with ex parte, the Court can in case of default strike off the defence.<sup>9</sup> But the Court has no jurisdiction to pass such a conditional order of adjournment as to enable it, on default, to pass a decree without evidence, when such evidence is necessary.<sup>10</sup>

No costs can be awarded against a party not at fault, in the matter of the adjournment.<sup>11</sup>

6. Costs in pauper suits. — The High Court of Rangoon has held that even a plaintiff suing in forma pauperis may be ordered to pay costs as a condition precedent to his being granted an adjournment.<sup>1</sup>

7. Proviso. — Where the trial of the suit has once begun, it should ordinarily go on from day to day. The Court has, however, a discretion to adjourn the trial of a part-heard case to a day beyond the following day, but in such a case the Court should record its reason therefor.<sup>1</sup> In exercising such a discretion the Court should act of itself and not ask for orders of the superior Court in the matter.<sup>2</sup>

8. Appeal. — No appeal lies from an order refusing adjournment under this rule;<sup>1</sup> but such a refusal is liable to correction by an Appellate Court in an appeal from the decree in the suit.<sup>2</sup> The refusal may be made a ground of attack in appeal, at whatever stage of the hearing of the suit the order of refusal may have been made.<sup>3</sup> The exercise of discretion under this rule is not liable to be interfered with in second appeal.<sup>4</sup> (Vide also Notes under Sections 100 & 101).

9. Review. — An order of adjournment once made cannot be rescinded in review unless for good and sufficient reasons and in the presence of the other side.<sup>1</sup>

10. Revision. — An order of adjournment is not liable to revision.<sup>1</sup> But where an adjournment is refused and the suit is either dismissed for default or decreed ex parte, a revision will lie from an order passed in appeal against an order refusing to set aside the dismissal for default or the ex parte decree as the case may be.<sup>2</sup> Even in such a case the matter will not be interfered with except for strong reasons.<sup>3</sup>

R. 2. [S. 157.] Where, on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by Order IX or make such other order as it thinks fit.

OUDH

Add the following as sub-rule (2), and read the existing Rule 2 as sub-rule (1):

"(2) Where before any such day, the evidence or a substantial portion of the evidence of any party has been recorded, and such party fails to appear on such day, the Court may, in its discretion, proceed with the case as if such party were present and may dispose of it on the merits.

Explanation. — No party shall be deemed to have failed to appear if he is either present in person, or is represented in Court by his agent or pleader though engaged only for the purpose of making an application."

Synopsis

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule.
2. Execution proceedings.
3. Distinction between Rules 2 and 3.
See Rule 3.
4. "Any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned."

5. "Appearance."
6. "Hearing."
7. One of the modes directed by Order 9.
8. "Or make such other order as it thinks fit."
9. Appeal and revision.

Default of appearance on the date fixed for judgment. See Note 8.
Difference between Order 9 and Order 17. See Notes 1 and 7.
Dismissal for default not res judicata. See Note 7.

Remedies against orders passed under this rule. See Note 7.

Suit not to be dismissed for default, where plaintiff lets in all evidence. See Note 8.

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule should be read along with the provisions of Order 9. That Order deals with the failure of parties to appear at the first hearing of the suit, while this rule deals with their failure to appear at the adjourned hearing of the suit. The provisions of Order 9 by themselves do not apply to a case in which a plaintiff or defendant has already appeared but has failed to appear at the adjourned hearing of the case. For such a case the procedure is laid down in this Order.<sup>1</sup>

If, at the hearing of a suit after settlement of issues, the parties or either of them fail to appear, the suit need not be decided on the merits. Nor need it necessarily be dismissed under Order 9; the Court has a discretion either to proceed under Order 9 or pass such other orders as the Court thinks fit.<sup>2</sup> It has been held by the Allahabad High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that where a Court after the framing of issues, fixes a date for the hearing of the suit, such date is one fixed for the "first" hearing of the suit and not one to which the hearing has been "adjourned." It is submitted with respect that the decision is not sound in view of the provisions of O. 15 R. 3, sub-rule (2) which expressly refers to such hearing as the "further" hearing of the suit. Where a suit has been disposed of under circumstances which make this rule applicable, such disposal will be referred to the provisions of this rule.<sup>4</sup>

This rule will not, however, apply if the parties are present though they may have defaulted in respect of some other act.<sup>5</sup> Nor will it apply if the person absent is not validly a party in the suit as where a minor party has no guardian ad litem appointed for him.<sup>6</sup>

The rule does not apply to proceedings after decree.<sup>7</sup>

2. Execution proceedings.—This rule does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> (Vide also Notes under Rules 1 and 3.)

3. Distinction between Rules 2 and 3. — See Rule 3.

4. "Any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned." — This rule does not apply unless the day to which a suit has been adjourned is a day fixed for the hearing or trial of the case.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it has been held not to apply in the following cases —

- (1) Where the day was fixed for consideration of an application for amendment of issues.<sup>2</sup>
- (2) Where it was fixed for the hearing of an application for the appointment of a guardian ad litem of a minor defendant.<sup>3</sup>
- (3) Where on the defendant asking for a stay of the suit, it was adjourned to another date for the production of the copy of a certain order.<sup>4</sup>

Where a suit was postponed to a fixed day for finding out the whereabouts of an unserved defendant and no other separate day was specifically fixed for hearing, it was held that the date fixed was the date of the hearing of the suit.<sup>5</sup>

Where the hearing of a case is proceeding from day to day and the case is adjourned to the next day because the cross-examination of a witness is unfinished, the adjournment is under this rule, and the disposal of the suit ex parte on the next day on the non-appearance of the defendant on that day is under this rule.<sup>6</sup> failed to appear if he is represented by an agent or a pleader though engaged only for making an application. (See also O. 3 R. 1 and Notes thereto). But, the mere fact that before the case is called on for hearing a pleader files a list of witnesses, does not amount to the party being "represented" at the hearing.<sup>3</sup> But, where, however, on the day of the adjourned hearing the pleader reports that he has no instructions and the party is absent and a decree is passed in the suit, the Explanation (added by the Allahabad High Court) does not apply and the decree is an ex parte decree.<sup>4</sup>

6. "Hearing." — The word "hearing" means the taking of evidence or the hearing of arguments or the consideration of questions relating to the suit which would enable the Judge to finally come to an adjudication upon it, and not the consideration of merely interlocutory matters.<sup>1</sup> It refers, so far as this rule is concerned, to the commencement of the hearing on each day of the hearing, and cannot be considered to mean that the suit is in a continuous state of being called on for hearing so long as it is being heard.<sup>2</sup>

The reader of a Court, when the presiding Judge is on leave, is not competent to pass an order, e. g., giving a further date which can bind the parties. The non-appearance of the plaintiff on a date so fixed should not entail the dismissal of the suit for default.<sup>3</sup>

See also Notes to Order 9 Rule 9.

7. One of the modes directed by Order 9. — As has been seen in Note 1, Order 9 refers to cases of default of appearance of parties at the first hearing of a case. This rule makes the provisions of Order 9 applicable to cases of such default at adjourned hearings.

In an old Calcutta case<sup>1</sup> it was held that there was a distinction between Order 9 and this rule and that the provisions of Order 9 relating to the restoration of suits and the setting aside of ex parte decrees did not apply to orders passed under this rule. This view has, however, been overruled and it has been repeatedly held that the said provisions of Order 9 will apply to orders passed under this rule on default of appearance of parties at adjourned hearings. Thus —

(i) if the plaintiff fails to appear at an adjourned hearing, the Court may make an order dismissing the suit for default under this rule and Rule 8 of Order 9, and the plaintiff may thereupon apply for restoration of the suit under Order 9 Rule 9,<sup>2</sup>

(ii) if the defendant fails to appear at an adjourned hearing, the Court may pass an ex parte decree under this rule and Rule 6 of Order 9; and the defendant may thereupon apply under O. 9 R. 13 to set aside the ex parte decree;<sup>3</sup>

(iii) if neither party appears at such hearing, the Court may dismiss the suit under this rule and Rule 3 of Order 9; and the plaintiff may thereupon either file a fresh suit or apply to have the dismissal set aside.<sup>4</sup>

But the provisions of this rule will not apply to proceedings after decree.<sup>5</sup>

8. "Or make such other order as it thinks fit." — In the interpretation of these words, three questions arise for consideration, viz. —

(i) What is the meaning of the expression "such other order as it thinks fit"?

(ii) Does the expression include the power to decide the case on the merits? And if so,

(iii) When is the Court to proceed under Order 9 and when to proceed to decide the case on the merits?

On the first two questions, the High Court of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> had held that the expression "such other order as it thinks fit" only empowers the Court to grant an adjournment and not to decide the case on the merits. The High Court of Lahore<sup>2</sup> has also taken the same view. An earlier decision of the High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> was also to the same effect. But in a later decision of the same High Court, the power of the Court to give a decision on the merits in certain circumstances has been recognized.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Calcutta<sup>5</sup> also recognizes the power of the Court to give a decision on the merits. The Allahabad High Court and the Chief Court of Oudh have recognized this power by adding a new clause to this rule.

On the third question, where the evidence has not yet begun, it has been held that the Court should either proceed under Order 9 or adjourn the case.<sup>6</sup> Where, however, the case is part heard, it would seem that the rule vests in the Court a discretion either to proceed under Order 9 or to give a decision on the merits.<sup>7</sup> In cases

The rule is permissive and not mandatory as is shown by the words "the Court may" proceed to decide the suit forthwith.<sup>4</sup> The stringent provisions thereof should not be applied unless the facts do not admit of the application of any other provision of the Code.<sup>5</sup> Where, for instance, there are no sufficient materials on record to give a proper decision, the Court should grant a further adjournment of the case.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, if the facts of the case make the provisions of Rule 2 applicable, the Court should act under that rule even though such facts come within the operation of this rule as well.<sup>7</sup>

A decision "forthwith" should nevertheless be a decision on the merits, i. e., on a consideration of such materials as may be necessary and available,<sup>8</sup> and does not mean a summary decision.<sup>9</sup> If, in the case of the plaintiff, such materials fail to substantiate the claim, the suit will be dismissed on that ground and not for the default committed by him.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, a decree passed against the defendant under this rule will not be an ex parte decree which can be set aside under O. 9 R. 13.<sup>11</sup>

In a case where the defendant's prayer for adjournment was refused but some time was nevertheless given to him for his evidence, and after plaintiff's evidence was over the Court passed a decree without waiting for the time fixed for the defendant's evidence, the decree was held to be illegal.<sup>12</sup>

The rule applies only after the suit has been instituted,<sup>13</sup> but not to proceedings after the decree.<sup>14</sup>

3. Distinction between Rules 2 and 3. — Rules 2 and 3 provide for distinct and different sets of circumstances —

Note 3

- (1) Rule 2 applies where an adjournment has been generally granted and not for any special purpose. This rule applies where the adjournment has been given for one of the purposes mentioned in the rule.<sup>1</sup>
- (2) Rule 2 does not apply unless the party has failed to appear at the hearing. Rule 3 will apply where the party is present and has committed the default referred to in the rule.<sup>2</sup> A party appearing by pleader and asking for adjournment must, in the absence of an effective withdrawal of appearance by the pleader, be deemed to have appeared.<sup>3</sup> And even if the pleader reports "no instructions" after refusal of the adjournment, it may not, under certain circumstances, constitute a failure to appear.<sup>4</sup>

There might be cases where a default under this rule is coupled with a default under Rule 2 as well. Thus, a party to whom time has been granted, at his instance, for doing one or other of the acts mentioned in this rule, may not only commit default in the doing of the act but may not appear in person or by pleader. In such a case, what has the Court to do? On this question the authorities are not uniform. It was held by the High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned cases<sup>5</sup> that, in such cases, the procedure to be followed is under Rule 2. The decisions of the Oudh Court were

Notes 3-5

4. "To whom time has been granted." — Where a party is ordered to be present at an adjourned hearing it does not amount to a granting of time to the party to do any act within the meaning of this rule.<sup>1</sup> Nor is an adjournment on the joint application of both the parties within this rule.<sup>2</sup> The rule will not also apply where time was granted not to the party in default but to the opposite party.<sup>3</sup> Further, the time must have been granted for the doing of an act which it was not the duty of the Court to do.<sup>4</sup>

Where a party applied for adjournment of the case for getting a transfer thereof and the application was refused but the case was fixed for further evidence, it was held that this rule did not apply as no time can be said to have been granted to the party within the meaning of this rule.<sup>5</sup>

When a case comes within the meaning of the language of this rule, the mere fact that the date fixed is a holiday (when the date has been expressly agreed upon) will not prevent the Court from proceeding under this rule.<sup>6</sup>

5. When is party deemed to fail to do the act for which time has been granted. — At the adjourned hearing of a case, the witnesses on behalf of a party were absent though served and the party applied for warrants of arrest against them. The application was refused. Thereupon the pleader reported "no instructions" and the suit was dismissed. It was held that the dismissal was not one under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Where a party takes steps in time but the witnesses are not served owing to delay on the part of the Court's officers to serve them, the party cannot be said to have committed default.<sup>2</sup> Even if the steps are taken late but there is sufficient time to get the witnesses served, the party cannot be said to be in default.<sup>3</sup> He will be held to have committed a default if the steps are taken too late to get the witnesses served.<sup>4</sup>

When a commission has been issued, the non-return of the commission is no failure on the part of a party.<sup>5</sup>

When time is to be regarded as the essence of the default, the party should have distinct notice of the time within which the act should be done.<sup>6</sup>

6. "Any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit." — The act contemplated by this rule is one which must be necessary to the further progress of the suit.<sup>1</sup> An act which brings about a stay and thus arrests the further progress of the suit cannot be interpreted to be an act necessary to the further progress of the suit; a Court cannot therefore dismiss a suit for non-prosecution because the party failed to produce a stay order within the period allowed.<sup>2</sup> As to what are such acts, see the cases noted below:<sup>3</sup> and as to what are not such acts, see the undermentioned decisions.<sup>4</sup> When the act is one ordered without jurisdiction, a default in doing it will not attract the provisions of this rule.<sup>5</sup>

7. Remedy of a person aggrieved by an order under this Rule. — A decision under this rule is a decree. It will operate as res judicata and bar a second suit for the same relief.<sup>1</sup> But if the decision is not one properly within the rule, there is no bar against a second suit.<sup>2</sup>

The remedy of a party aggrieved by an order under this rule is by way of appeal<sup>3</sup> or review<sup>4</sup> and not revision.<sup>5</sup> It has, however, been held in a case before the Lahore High Court that a decree passed under this rule may nevertheless be an ex parte decree to which the provisions of Order 9 will apply.<sup>6</sup>

Where the order has been expressly passed under this rule, the remedy is by way of appeal only, even though the Court had no power to proceed thereunder and

R. 1. [S. 179 Expln.] The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin.

1. Right to begin. — The right to begin follows the onus probandi as provided by Sections 101 to 114 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). As a general rule, the plaintiff has to prove his claim by positive proof, for the Court has to see whether there is proof of claim before it need enquire as to the truth or otherwise of the defence.<sup>1</sup> It is the duty of the parties to prove their case and the Judge "has nothing to do with the getting up of a case,"<sup>2</sup> but the Court has jurisdiction on a proper occasion, in the interest of justice, to examine de bene esse, witnesses upon an ex parte application.<sup>3</sup> It must be pointed out that evidence need not always be led by the party who has the right to begin and on whom lies the burden; it is open to him to sustain the onus by facts which he may elicit in cross-examination of the other party's witnesses.<sup>4</sup> The onus is not in all cases and necessarily a question of law. How much or what evidence will discharge the onus is a question which depends upon the weight attached to the evidence.<sup>5</sup> In the case of two sets of defendants whose interests are the same, both should address the Court before any evidence is taken,<sup>6</sup> but the defendant supporting the plaintiff must begin before the other defendants.<sup>7</sup> If on the issue or issues of fact, the burden of proof is on the defendant, he has the right to begin.<sup>8</sup>

2. Allegations. — Under Section 102 of the Evidence Act, the burden of proof rests on the party who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side.<sup>1</sup> Thus,

3. Admissions. — Where the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff but contends that he is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, the defendant gets the right to begin. Thus, in suits on a settled account, signed by the defendant,<sup>1</sup> or on a bond the execution of which is admitted,<sup>2</sup> or in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights by the husband where the marriage is admitted by the wife,<sup>3</sup> the defendant has the right to begin. But he will not get this right to begin unless all the material facts are admitted and not only some of them.<sup>4</sup>

In a suit to recover possession of land from the tenant by the landlord, it is not for the plaintiff to explain the possession of the defendant tenant but for such defendant to show that it necessarily leads to an inference of perpetual tenancy.<sup>5</sup> Again, where the defendant held certain lands, admittedly some at least of which were rent paying, the defendant ought to lead some prima facie evidence of the fact that the lands were rent-free if he wants to plead such a fact.<sup>6</sup>

4. Preliminary issue raised by the defendant that the suit does not lie. — Where the defendant raises a preliminary objection that the suit does not lie as, for instance, where he pleads that the suit is barred by res judicata, he has the right to begin.<sup>1</sup> It must be remembered that for the purposes of the preliminary issue, the pleadings are taken as true.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — On the day fixed for hearing the party having the right to begin must state his case, but this does not give him the right to introduce new pleas without the leave of Court. He has only the right to state his case, as has already been put forward.<sup>1</sup> It follows, as a consequence, that the Courts ought not to allow evidence to be given in regard to contentions not raised in the pleadings.<sup>2</sup>

It is not the duty of the Court to determine what witnesses shall be examined.<sup>3</sup> The parties must select their own witnesses and ask the Court to examine such of them as they tender.<sup>4</sup> It is, however, in the discretion of the Court to allow further evidence after the case has been closed.<sup>5</sup> But in such cases it behoves the Court of first instance to take care that a party whose case has been finished is not permitted, without good reason, to mend that case by fresh evidence after his adversary has succeeded in impeaching it.<sup>6</sup> But a document filed with the plaint when tendered after the close of the case, but before the other party began, can be admitted.<sup>7</sup>

Where the onus is on the plaintiff and he has failed to sustain it successfully, the Court will act rightly in dismissing the suit without insisting on the defendant to go into the witness-box;<sup>8</sup> but where the burden of proving some issues lies on the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to reserve his case, and produce rebutting evidence after the defendant's evidence on those issues has been recorded.<sup>9</sup> Where a witness has been summoned and does not appear, the party calling him is entitled to call upon the Court to compel his attendance;<sup>10</sup> but it is not only illegal but improper and unfair to permit the defendant at the very outset of the case to be put into the witness-box nominally as a plaintiff's witness. It is certainly in accord with justice that a party who has to defend a suit should hear what his opponent has to say before he himself is called upon to answer.<sup>11</sup>

Reasonable time must be given for either party to produce his evidence and the Court will exercise sound discretion, if it allows the party to produce his evidence at any time before it proceeds to judgment.<sup>12</sup> Thus, when the defendant's request for time to produce his witnesses was refused but the defendant produced them on the day the case was posted for judgment, it was held that it was a wrong exercise of discretion not to examine the witnesses before proceeding to judgment.<sup>13</sup>

A pleader is bound to call the witnesses his party wishes to examine and any threat on the part of the Court to report to the High Court the conduct of the pleader in examining such witnesses is highly improper.<sup>14</sup> Where a counsel refrains from calling evidence in deference to some observations from the Bench, the Appellate Court ought not to reverse the decree of the first Court without allowing such evidence to be given which the first Court thought unnecessary.<sup>15</sup>

A Court is bound to allow the defendant to produce his evidence although it has already formed an opinion in favour of the defendant from the plaintiff's evidence itself. The Court is not entitled to dispose of the suit without calling on the defendant.<sup>16</sup>

2. Hearing. — See Notes to O. 8 R. 1 and also the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

3. "The other party." — "The other party" means the party other than the one who has the right to begin and has begun. Where there are two sets of defendants and their interests are practically the same, the rule is that after the plaintiff's case has been closed, both the defendants should address the Court before any evidence is given by either set of defendants.<sup>1</sup>

But where a defendant or a set of defendants support the plaintiff's case, wholly or in part, the former must immediately follow the plaintiff and call his or their witnesses, and then only can the other set of defendants who differ from the plaintiff be called upon to address the Court and produce their evidence.<sup>2</sup>

4. Arguments. — It is in the option of the parties to argue their case when the evidence has been closed and it is for them to decide whether they will exercise that privilege or not<sup>1</sup> and a Court delivering judgment without hearing arguments is not acting irregularly where the parties having had the opportunity did not choose to make use of it.<sup>2</sup> Where new cases are quoted in reply, the other party will be allowed to address the Court on such new cases and on the points not argued before the Court previously.<sup>3</sup>

A Judge, who has not heard any part of the evidence and before whom no part of the proceedings has taken place, is not justified in proceeding to judgment until delay justice, the Court can refuse to examine them<sup>5</sup> and whenever it so refuses, it must record its reasons for such refusal.<sup>6</sup>

O. 18 R. 5
Notes 1-2

Where the witness to be examined is an infant or a person of advanced age, the Court may hold an examination on the voir dire as to his competency to give evidence.<sup>7</sup> But this examination must be held before the actual examination commences.<sup>8</sup> Courts, of course, have always the power to examine any of the parties to the suit and compel their attendance.<sup>9</sup> It is also in the discretion of the Court to allow a party to call further evidence after he has closed his case.<sup>10</sup>

The examination of a witness is not complete without any opportunity being allowed for his cross-examination by the other side.<sup>11</sup> A court cannot fix any time limit for cross-examination<sup>12</sup> though it has full power to prevent any abuse of the rights of cross-examination.<sup>13</sup> A co-defendant who is represented by a separate vakil may cross-examine another defendant, in order to discredit the evidence given by him in plaintiff's favour.<sup>14</sup> Refusal by the trial Court to examine the witnesses tendered by a party before delivery of judgment may amount to a substantial error or defect of procedure which may have affected the decision of the case on the merits, and is a ground for second appeal under Section 100, clause (c).<sup>15</sup>

(1) Pardanishin women and other persons who are exempted from personal appearance in Court should not be examined in open Court.<sup>3</sup> See also Sections 132 and 133, ante;

(2) Where witnesses are examined on commission.<sup>4</sup>

The Court should not, as a rule, interfere in the examination of the witnesses except where it is found that they are not properly examined through the incompetency of those who have the management of the case.<sup>5</sup>

The Oaths Act provides imperatively that no person shall testify except on oath or affirmation. As to the effect of the omission to take the oath or affirmation, see the Oaths Act and the undermentioned cases.<sup>6</sup>

1. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule applies to all proceedings<sup>1</sup> except that it does not apply to Chartered High Courts<sup>2</sup> and to the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>3</sup> in the exercise of their original jurisdiction and to Courts constituted under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act.<sup>4</sup> But it applies to proceedings conducted by commissioners for partition appointed by the original side of the High Court.<sup>5</sup> See Order 26 Rule 17.

An objection that the depositions of witnesses were not taken in the manner prescribed must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and not in second appeal.<sup>6</sup>

The notes by a Munsif as to the age or description of the witness in the heading of the deposition do not form part of the evidence.<sup>7</sup>

2. Effect of evidence taken in the absence of parties. — The examination of a material witness in the absence of the other party is a material irregularity which will vitiate the procedure if objection to the same is taken at the proper time.<sup>1</sup> Where no opportunity was given to a party to examine his witness, or to rebut the evidence or cross-examine the witness of the opposite party, then that evidence is not admissible for or against him unless consented to.<sup>2</sup> Where the defendant fails to appear without lawful excuse, the Judge may at once enter judgment against the defendant, but where the Court takes the evidence of the plaintiff, the defendant who has appeared is entitled to cross-examine him.<sup>3</sup> The admission of a fact dispenses with the proof thereof and such portion of the statement as is an admission, can always be treated as evidence without the whole statement being treated as such.<sup>4</sup>

3. "Shall be read over." — There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a deposition not read over to the witness is admissible in evidence against him in a subsequent trial for perjury or forgery. The High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>1</sup> Lahore<sup>2</sup> and Madras<sup>3</sup> have held that it is not, while the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has held that it is admissible.<sup>4</sup> But the fact that the deposition was read over by the witness himself,<sup>5</sup> or that the reading over of the deposition was not in the presence of the Judge,<sup>6</sup> or that a certificate as to the reading over to the witness was not appended by the Judge,<sup>7</sup> or the non-observance of some other formality,<sup>8</sup> will not render the evidence inadmissible in evidence.

4. Signature of witness. — There is no obligation upon witnesses to affix their signature or mark, after their evidence is read over to them. It is, however, generally the practice to have their signatures.<sup>1</sup> But see Rule 16 infra where such signature is obligatory.

5. Signature of Judge. — It is essential that the Judge should sign the deposition so read over to the witness. A prosecution for perjury on the basis of such deposition cannot otherwise be sustained.<sup>1</sup>

R. 6. [S. 183.] Where the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it is given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence as taken down in writing shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it is given.

Synopsis

1. Applicability.
2. Memorandum of evidence.
3. Effect of non-compliance.

1. Applicability. — This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts: see Order 49 Rule 3. For a local repeal of this rule and Rules 9 and 13 of this Order, see the undermentioned Act.<sup>1</sup>

Order 18 Rule 8 — Note 1

1. The O. P. Laws Act (II of 1879), Section 11.

O. 18 R. 8
Notes 2-3

2. Memorandum of evidence. — Where a Judge does not take down the whole of the evidence himself, he is bound to make a memorandum of evidence and record every material answer made by the witness in the examination-in-chief, in the cross-examination and in reply to questions by the Court. It should be written down in consecutive sentences.<sup>1</sup> Where there is a conflict between the Judge's memorandum and the recorded deposition of a witness, the Court must be guided by the latter and not the former.<sup>2</sup> In cases governed by this rule, there must be either one or two records of evidence. If it is on record it must be in Judge's own handwriting; if otherwise, there must be a memorandum of evidence.<sup>3</sup>

3. Effect of non-compliance. — Failure to make a memorandum of evidence does not vitiate the proceedings if evidence is taken down in the language in which it is given.<sup>1</sup>

O. 18 R. 9

R. 9. [S. 185.] Where English is not the language of the Court, but all the parties to the suit who appear in person, and the pleaders of such as appear by pleaders, do not object to have such evidence as is given in English taken down in English, the Judge may so take it down.

[1877, S. 185; 1859, S. 172.]

1. Applicability. — This rule, corresponding to Section 185 of the Code of 1877, does not apply to enquiries under the Central Provinces Laws Act.<sup>1</sup>

R. 10. [S. 186.] The Court may, of its own motion or on the application of any party or his pleader, take down any particular question and answer, or any objection to any question, if there appears to be any special reason for so doing.

[1877, S. 187 ; 1859, S. 172.]

1. Scope and applicability | 2. Objection, when to be taken.

1. Scope and applicability. — This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts : see Order 49 Rule 3. When a question put to a witness is objected to, the proper course for the Court is to allow the question to be recorded and then give its ruling whether such question is allowed or disallowed. It is improper for the Court to allow the question to be put to the witness subject to objection.<sup>1</sup>

2. Objection, when to be taken. — Objection as to admissibility of evidence has to be taken in the Court of first instance and if not so done, the Appellate Court will not entertain any such objection<sup>1</sup> and where evidence of doubtful admissibility has been loosely received, the Privy Council will deal with the case as it appears to it just and will not allow any mere technical objection to prevail as to its admissibility.<sup>2</sup> But an erroneous omission to object to irrelevant evidence will not make it relevant and will therefore be disregarded.<sup>3</sup>

R. 12. [S. 188.] The Court may record such remarks as it thinks material respecting the demeanour of any witness while under examination. O. 18 R. 12

thinks material respecting the demeanour of any witness while under examination.

[1877, S. 188; 1859, S. 172.]

1. Remarks on demeanour. — Under this rule, the Court may record such remarks about the demeanour of a witness as it thinks fit and the same cannot be expunged under the cloak of an amendment.<sup>1</sup> But where a witness stated his age to be 24 but the Judge made a note in his deposition that his age "appeared to be 18 or 19" it was held that the note could not be considered to be evidence in the case.<sup>2</sup> The Court's belief that the evidence is biased, is not a valid ground for refusing to record it.<sup>3</sup> The evidence of a defendant called to give evidence on the plaintiff's side, cannot be judged under different principles, merely because he is a defendant.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — A Judge is bound under this rule, to make a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes.<sup>1</sup> A short abstract of the whole evidence<sup>2</sup> or a mere reference to the evidence in the judgment<sup>3</sup> is not sufficient compliance with the rule.

This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts: see O. 49 R. 3. As to the applicability of this rule to enquiries under various local or special enactments, see the undermentioned Acts.<sup>4</sup>

1. Applicability. — This rule does not apply to the Chartered High Courts : see O. 49 R. 3.

2. Scope of the Rule. — Under Section 191 of the Code of 1882, as it stood before 1888, it was held that the successor of the Judge who was removed was bound to fix a date for the entire hearing and trial of the case before himself and that such trial should proceed in the ordinary way except that the parties would be allowed to use the evidence already taken as evidence in the case.<sup>1</sup> This view, however, was dissented from by a Full Bench in Jadu Rai v. Kanizak Hussain<sup>2</sup> and it was held that Section 191 empowered the Judge to make use of the materials collected by the predecessor as evidence in the case without being bound to fix a day for commencing the trial de novo. In order to give effect to this latter view, the old Section 191 was replaced by a new Section by Act VII of 1888, empowering the Judge to proceed with the suit from the stage at which the predecessor left it. That Section has been substantially re-enacted in this rule.

1. Scope of the Rule.— This rule enables the Court to inspect any property or thing though it may issue a commission for that purpose.<sup>1</sup> The object of this provision is to enable the tribunal to understand questions that are being raised and to follow and apply the evidence.<sup>2</sup> But a judgment should not be based solely on the basis of such personal local inspection.<sup>3</sup> So also, a Judge is not entitled to use the impression formed by him from the local inspection to contradict a witness<sup>4</sup> or to decide whether the plaintiff's evidence or the defendant's evidence is true.<sup>5</sup> A Judge is not entitled to substitute his own view formed as a result of local inspection, for the evidence in the case.<sup>6</sup> Though the Code nowhere lays down that it is obligatory on the Judge to record the result of the local enquiry,<sup>7</sup> yet it is desirable that the result of such inspection should be recorded in the proceedings and not left for notice till judgment.<sup>8</sup>

A Munsif is not bound to get the sanction of the District Judge before he makes an inspection. Sanction is, however, necessary for the levy of money for the expenses of such inspection.<sup>9</sup>

Where, at the instance of the plaintiff, a Munsif held a local inspection and, in the course thereof, at the instance of both the parties, he examined a person whose statements he used as confirming his impression formed independently of them, it was held that the parties could not turn round and say that the Munsif ought not to have used those statements.<sup>10</sup> But, it is not a justifiable procedure for a Judge at such local inspection to welcome the presence of crowds of anonymous villagers and indulge in informal inquiries amongst the people in those crowds for the purpose of guidance in deciding the rights of the parties.<sup>11</sup>

1. Affidavits, essentials of. — An affidavit is a declaration as to facts, made in writing and sworn before a person having authority to administer an oath.<sup>1</sup> The officer authorized must be on duty at the time when the oath is administered.<sup>2</sup> But the want of the seal of the Magistrate before whom it is sworn does not make it bad.<sup>3</sup> The deponent may, instead of signing his name, affix a mark or a stamp bearing his name.<sup>4</sup>

Under the rules of the Supreme Court in England as also under the Rules of Practice framed by the High Courts in India, every affidavit should be drawn up in the first person and divided into paragraphs consecutively numbered, each paragraph dealing with a specific portion of the subject as nearly as may be.<sup>5</sup> It should also state correctly the description, and true place of the abode of the deponent.<sup>6</sup> Any person acquainted with the facts of the case may give the affidavit.<sup>7</sup> An affidavit should not contain any inferences but only facts.<sup>8</sup> The contents must be read over to the deponent in a language which he understands and vouched by him to be correct.<sup>9</sup>

2. Stamp duty, if necessary. — An affidavit for the immediate purpose of being used or filed in any Court or before the officer of any Court, is exempt from stamp duty.<sup>1</sup>

3. Court-fee, if necessary. — No court-fee is payable on an affidavit filed in Court. See also Court-fees Act, Section 19 (xiv). Under Chapter 12, Rule 3 of the Appellate Side Rules of the High Court of Calcutta, a court-fee of Rs. 2 is prescribed for an affidavit.<sup>1</sup>

4. Cross-examination of deponent of affidavit. — Where the adverse party bona fide desires the production of the deponent for cross-examination, the Court has no power, under this rule, to order that the affidavit may be read at the hearing on proof of certain facts.<sup>1</sup> The Court will refuse to act on an affidavit, when the deponent cannot be cross-examined.<sup>2</sup>

On principle, no cross-examination is allowed on affidavits in support of a petition for sanction under Section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and sanction should be given when the affidavit discloses materials for a prima facie case.<sup>3</sup>

This rule enables any Court to order that any fact may be proved by affidavit. Therefore, where on the day of the first hearing of a suit, the defendant does not appear though served, the execution of the document which is sued upon may be proved by an affidavit without calling a witness.<sup>1</sup> The power to take affidavits in proof of facts is extended to enquiries under the undermentioned local or special Acts.<sup>3</sup> of the application stated that the documents complained of were "to the best of his knowledge, information and belief, utterly untrue" but no grounds for his belief were shown, it was held insufficient.<sup>2</sup> An affidavit is defective if the deponent does not say which part is based on information and which on belief or if he does not state the grounds of his belief.<sup>3</sup> Though, ordinarily, evidence on information and belief is admissible in interlocutory applications intended to maintain things in status quo till the rights of the parties are decided, yet in England, if the application is only interlocutory in form but really aiming at finally disposing of the rights of the parties, it will be inadmissible.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope of the Order. — Rules 1 to 5 of this Order deal with judgments and Rules 6 to 19 with decrees. Rule 20 enacts that the parties shall be entitled to obtain certified copies of the judgment and decree on application made by them and at their expense. Rules 12 to 18 in particular deal with the classes of cases in which preliminary decrees may be passed. As to whether the list is exhaustive of the cases in which preliminary decrees can be passed, see Note 10 to Section 2, sub-section 2 and the undermentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

2. Chartered High Courts. — This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts<sup>1</sup> or the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>2</sup> in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.

3. "After the case has been heard." — A judgment given without the Judge having heard the case fully, is a nullity.<sup>1</sup> Where, after arguments were partly heard, a party died and the Court, without bringing his legal representatives on the record pronounced judgment, it was held that the judgment was a nullity as the case had not been fully heard.<sup>2</sup> It is not legal for the Judge to appoint assessors to appraise the value of the evidence in the case and base his judgment on that opinion<sup>3</sup> or to base the judgment upon the unrecorded statements made at the Bar.<sup>4</sup> See also Section 33 ante.

As a general rule it is the Judge who heard the evidence that should give the judgment.<sup>5</sup> The following cases are, however, exceptions to the general rule —

- (1) Where the Judge is prevented by death, transfer, or other like cause from concluding the trial of the suit. In such cases the successor may deal with the evidence taken by the predecessor and proceed with the suit. See Order 18 Rule 15.
- (2) Under Rule 2, a Judge may pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor.
- (3) Where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner under the provisions of Order 26 Rules 1 and 4.

4. "Shall pronounce judgment in open Court." — Judgments should be pronounced in open Court.<sup>1</sup> The expression "open Court" refers to the place and manner of the pronouncement of the judgment.<sup>2</sup> The mere posting of a notice on the notice-board announcing the result of an appeal is not a sufficient compliance with the rule.<sup>3</sup> But it is not necessary that the whole of the judgment should be read out by the Judge in open Court.<sup>4</sup> Nor is a judgment of the Full Bench rendered invalid by its pronouncement at a time when one of the Judges of the Bench was absent on other duty.<sup>5</sup> Where a judgment was written and signed by the Judge who heard the case, but, at his request, was read out by his colleague, a Judge presiding in another Court, it was held that such a procedure is not invalid and will, in any case, be only an irregularity which is cured by Section 99 of the Code.<sup>6</sup>

That an order may be defied is no reason for refusing to make what in the circumstances is a just and proper order. If the execution of the order is likely to be attended with a breach of the peace, it is for the proper authorities to take such steps as they may deem necessary.<sup>7</sup>

O. 20 R. 1

5. "Judgment," meaning of.— See Section 2, sub-section (9) and the case noted below.<sup>1</sup> As to what judgments should contain, see Rule 4, infra.

6. When judgment may be pronounced.— A judgment can be pronounced only after the case has been heard. Where a date has been fixed for the hearing of the suit or appeal, the Court cannot pronounce its judgment before such date.<sup>1</sup> The Court has, however, ample authority to direct successive trials of different issues, and to record interlocutory judgments thereon, to be made the basis of the final judgment at the conclusion of the trial of the whole case.<sup>2</sup> There is no objection to a Judge at the close of the hearing of a suit or appeal stating at once orally the judgment which he intends to record and deliver, and afterwards to pronounce in open Court his written judgment.<sup>3</sup> See also Notes 7, 8 and 9 below.

7. Holiday.— The delivery of a judgment or the doing of any judicial act on a holiday is not illegal,<sup>1</sup> though if a party is injuriously affected by such act he will be entitled to have the proceedings set aside on that ground.<sup>2</sup>

8. "Or on some future day."— The law pre-supposes a prompt and continuous trial and a judgment must be pronounced as quickly as possible.<sup>1</sup> A judgment delivered after an interval of seven months on an incomplete and imperfect record of evidence was held not to be a legal decision.<sup>2</sup>

9. Notice to parties.— Where a judgment is to be passed on a future day after the case has been heard, it is necessary that due notice thereof should be given to the parties or their pleaders.<sup>1</sup> It is not the duty of the parties to make enquiries as to when the judgment will be delivered; they are entitled to rely on the Court obeying the express provisions of law and giving notice to them or their pleaders of the date fixed for the delivery of judgment.<sup>2</sup> The object of the provision as to notice in this rule is to enable the parties to conform to the adjective law in respect of periods of limitation enacted or periods during which conditional payments are prescribed, as for instance, in matters of pre-emption or the making of final or preliminary decrees.<sup>3</sup> The posting of a notice on the notice-board<sup>4</sup> or the sending of a notice to the pleader of a party<sup>5</sup> or to the party<sup>6</sup> announcing the result of a case, is not a compliance with the rule. It has been held that where a judgment has been pronounced without previous notice to a party and, on a subsequent date, information as to the judgment is sent to the party or his pleader, the latter date must be taken to be the date of the delivery of the judgment.<sup>7</sup> But it is not necessary that the parties should be present at the time of the delivery of the judgment and a suit cannot be dismissed on the ground that the parties were not present at the time of the delivery of the judgment.<sup>8</sup> Nor is a Court bound to communicate the result of a case to the parties.<sup>9</sup>

Where there is nothing on the record to show that the notice was not given to the parties or their pleaders, it must be presumed that they did receive such notice.<sup>10</sup>

The provisions of this rule apply also to cases where a judgment is pronounced by a successor under the next rule.<sup>11</sup>

10. Non-compliance with Rules 1, 2 and 3.—A judgment not pronounced at all is not a valid judgment,<sup>1</sup> but the non-compliance with this rule and with Rr. 2 and 3 as to the manner in which it is to be pronounced, dated and signed is only an irregularity within the meaning of Section 99 of the Code and does not afford a ground for the reversal in appeal of the decree based on the judgment in the absence of prejudice.<sup>2</sup> A decree that follows such a judgment is valid until set aside on appeal.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Written but not pronounced by his predecessor."—The object of the Legislature in enacting this rule is that the judgment should be that of the Judge who heard the case though it may be delivered by another; in order, therefore, that this rule may apply, it is necessary that the predecessor must have written the judgment.<sup>1</sup> There is a difference of opinion, however, as to whether it should also be signed by the predecessor. According to the High Court of Calcutta, the judgment has, under the provisions of Rule 3, infra, to be signed at the time of pronouncing it by the successor and therefore it is not necessary that the predecessor should have signed it.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, expressed the view that Rule 3 applies only to cases where the judgment is delivered by the very Judge who wrote it and not to cases coming under Rule 2, where the judgment is written by one officer and is pronounced by another.<sup>3</sup> It seems to follow from this that the predecessor must have written and also signed the judgment.<sup>4</sup>

There is also a difference of opinion on the question whether it is necessary for the predecessor to have written the judgment at a time when he had still jurisdiction over the suit. The general consensus of opinion is that it is not.<sup>5</sup> Thus, when a District Judge retired from office on October 4, 1927, and the judgment was signed by him on October 9, 1927, and the same was pronounced in Court by his successor on October 17, 1927, it was held that the judgment was valid in law.<sup>6</sup> A contrary view has, however, been expressed in the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

Can a judgment be pronounced by the predecessor after his transfer or after he has left his judicial post? According to the Chief Court of the Punjab, there is no illegality in adopting such a course.<sup>8</sup> According to the High Court of Rangoon, the pronouncement of the judgment is a material part of the trial and cannot be performed by any person other than a Judge of the Court in which the suit was tried.<sup>9</sup> It would seem to follow from this that a Judge who has ceased to be the Judge of the Court in which the suit was tried cannot pronounce a judgment therein, though it had been written by himself.

3. "May pronounce."—The rule is not mandatory and the successor is not bound in all cases to pronounce the judgment written by the predecessor; he may, if he sees reason to do so, refuse to pronounce that judgment and may deliver a judgment according to his own view of the case.<sup>1</sup> Where a judgment is signed and dated by the

MADRAS

Substitute the following for Rule 3 :

"3. The judgment shall bear the date on which it is pronounced and shall be signed by the Judge and, when once signed, shall not afterwards be altered or added to, save as provided by Section 152 or on review, provided also that, where the presiding Judge is specially empowered by the High Court to pronounce his judgment by dictation to a shorthand writer in open Court, the transcript of the judgment so pronounced shall, after such revision as may be deemed necessary, be signed by the Judge."

Synopsis

1. Rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts.
2. Applicability of the Rule.
3. "Shall not afterwards be altered or added to."
4. "Save as provided by Section 152 or on review."
5. Non-compliance with Rules 1 to 3.

1. Rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts. — This Rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts<sup>1</sup> or to the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>2</sup> in the exercise of the ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.

But, the principle underlying the rule applies, viz., that a decree once passed is immutable, subject to review or to any subsequent order or decree which may be passed on appeal and subject to the provisions of O. 20 R. 11, sub-rule (2).<sup>3</sup>

2. Applicability of the Rule. — There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this rule, in so far as it requires the Judge to sign and date the judgment at the time of pronouncing it, applies to cases where the successor pronounces the judgment of the predecessor under the provisions of this rule. See also Note 2 to Rule 2 above.

3. "Shall not afterwards be altered or added to." — The jurisdiction of the Court to reconsider its order continues so long as the order has not been perfected under this Rule,<sup>1</sup> but ceases once the judgment is signed, except as provided by Section 152 or on review.<sup>2</sup> The Court cannot therefore, after the judgment is signed, alter it, or add to it, in any manner, except as provided by this rule, and this even with the consent of the parties.<sup>3</sup> Thus, it cannot alter the grounds on which the judgment proceeded,<sup>4</sup> or add findings on issues omitted to be decided by the judgment.<sup>5</sup> Nor can a successor alter the judgment which had been pronounced by his predecessor on any point.<sup>6</sup> Where a Judge pronounces a judgment but suspends the drawing up of the decree till a succession certificate is produced by the plaintiff, he cannot, on the plaintiff's failure to produce the certificate, cancel the judgment and deliver a different one inconsistent with the former.<sup>7</sup>

The words "after such revision as may be deemed necessary" in the rule as substituted by the High Court of Madras, do not authorise the Judge to revise the transcript and to substitute fresh words for the words originally dictated; they do not contemplate a revision of the effective part of the judgment but should be of the nature referred to in Section 152, and one relating to clerical and arithmetical mistakes arising from any accidental slip or omission.<sup>8</sup>

Where, on an application to set aside an execution sale, a conditional order is passed providing that the sale would be set aside if the decretal amount is paid within a certain date and that otherwise, the application would stand dismissed, the order is final in itself and no further reference to the Court is necessary for the purpose of implementing it. Hence, after such an order is passed, the Court has no jurisdiction to alter the order except on review.<sup>9</sup> See also Notes to Section 148 ante.

4. "Save as provided by Section 152 or on review."—This rule recognises two exceptions to the general rule that a Judge cannot, after he has once signed the judgment, reconsider the matter over again—

(1) Under Section 152 of the Code, clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgments, decrees or orders or errors due to accidental slips or omissions can be corrected by the Court.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 2 to Section 152.

(2) Under O. 47 R. 1 the Court may grant a review of the judgment where the conditions of that rule are satisfied. See Order 47 Rule 1.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>3</sup> that where a Court has passed an order under a misapprehension of facts, it is open to it under its inherent powers to set aside such order when the true facts are brought to light and that this rule has no application to such cases.

As to whether and how far questions decided by an order of remand can be re-opened at the hearing after return of the findings after remand, see Rules 23 and 26 of Order 41.

5. Non-compliance with Rules 1 to 3. — The failure to date an order is no doubt an irregularity but it does not invalidate the order and does not prevent it from having a legal operation from the date on which it is made; the date can be proved by other evidence.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, it has been held that an accidental omission to sign an order is only an irregularity.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 10 to Rule 1.

O. 20 R. 4
Notes 1-5

2. "Judgment," meaning of. — See Section 2, sub-section (9), ante.

3. Object of judgments. — The object of insisting upon a judgment in respect of a decision of the Court is to enable an appellate or revisional Court to find out whether the Judge has applied his mind to the case, and whether the decree or order is according to law.

4. Personal knowledge. — A Judge cannot import his own private knowledge or opinion into a case but must decide it on the evidence before him.<sup>1</sup> If he intends to use his personal knowledge, he is bound to give evidence like any other witness.<sup>2</sup> A judgment based upon such knowledge without any reference to the evidence in the case is not one in accordance with law and is liable to be set aside.<sup>3</sup>

5. Appreciation of evidence. — It is a fundamental principle that the decision of a Court rests, not upon mere suspicion, or surmises or conjectures, but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony.<sup>1</sup> A judgment, therefore, based on the evidence of witnesses whom the opposite party had no opportunity to cross-examine,<sup>2</sup> or based on evidence recorded in a different suit,<sup>3</sup> is not a judgment that can be maintained.

An omission to make special mention of the oral evidence,<sup>4</sup> or to refer to every detail in the evidence,<sup>5</sup> does not warrant a presumption that the evidence has not been adequately or reasonably considered ; but where a Judge makes only a colourable pretence of considering the evidence without really having done so, the judgment cannot be accepted as a proper one.<sup>6</sup>

On questions of fact, a judgment of the Court of the first instance must, except as provided by O. 18 R. 15, be based upon an examination of the evidence taken before the Judge himself, who delivers the judgment.<sup>7</sup> It must be based upon a consideration of the whole evidence on both sides and not merely upon some isolated piece of evidence.<sup>8</sup> In considering the evidence, the following points may be usefully mentioned —

(1) It is not the proper way of appreciating the evidence to approach it with prejudice and suspect everything and everybody.<sup>9</sup>

(2) The mere fact that a witness is related to a party or supports the party does not necessarily make his evidence interested or unreliable : nor does the rejection of a portion of his testimony vitiate the whole testimony on that ground alone.<sup>10</sup>

Notes 5-8

(3) The fact that a witness had given evidence in other cases is not always a legitimate objection to his credibility though it may be a legitimate objection to a man's credit that he is a professional witness.<sup>11</sup>

(4) The testimony of a person who testifies that a certain conversation took place is of more value than that of one who says that it did not.<sup>12</sup>

(5) When the oral testimony adduced in an action is directly conflicting and irreconcilable, the only safe guide for the Judge is that afforded by the conduct of the parties and the contents of the documents produced.<sup>13</sup>

6. Contents of judgments. — It is the duty of the Court to adjudicate on a claim as brought.<sup>1</sup> A judgment is bad if it is based on a question neither raised in the written statement nor included in any issue,<sup>2</sup> though it is open to a Court to find that the case of a party lies somewhere between the cases of both the parties.<sup>3</sup>

It is the duty of the Courts to write their judgments without unnecessary prolixity and repetition of pleadings.<sup>4</sup> A judgment is unsatisfactory if it is a mere catalogue of documents without any consideration of their probative value,<sup>5</sup> or if it simply repeats the arguments of the counsel on both sides,<sup>6</sup> or if it is unintelligible.<sup>7</sup> It is not desirable that Judges should make remarks against the character of a person who is neither a party nor a witness in the proceedings before them,<sup>8</sup> nor should they give findings on matters which are unnecessary for the disposal of the suit.<sup>9</sup> The statements or their findings must be specific and precise.<sup>10</sup>

7. Construction of judgments. — As a general rule, where the language of a judgment is doubtful, the benefit of the doubt ought to go to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> All parts of the judgment should be read together and construed as a whole;<sup>2</sup> but where the previous part of the judgment cannot be reconciled with the conclusion ultimately drawn, the former should be rejected.<sup>3</sup>

8. Judgments of Small Cause Courts. — A judgment of a Small Cause Court need not set out the reasons for the decision,<sup>1</sup> though as a matter of practice it is usual

('35) AIR 1935 Pat 452 (452). (In this case the Small Cause Court Judge had given reasons which were held to be arbitrary—High Court held that although a Small Cause Court Judge is not to give reasons except in unimportant cases.<sup>2</sup> But the judgment must set out the points for determination and the decision on each of those points.<sup>3</sup> A mere statement such as "issue not proved, suit dismissed,"<sup>4</sup> or "the plaintiff fails, suit dismissed,"<sup>5</sup> or "claim decreed with costs,"<sup>6</sup> or a general statement after setting out the points "I find all the issues for the plaintiff" without dealing with each point separately,<sup>7</sup> is not a valid judgment.

The judgment must also be sufficiently intelligible,<sup>8</sup> and must indicate clearly that the Judge has applied his mind to the case and that the decree or order is according to law.<sup>9</sup> The test whether this rule has been used or abused lies, in fact, in the answer to the question whether the judgment has been made intelligible. When the Judge has to deal with a question of fact he need not give anything more than his actual decision on the question, namely his answer to it. But in cases involving difficult questions of law or mixed questions of fact and law, the Judge should set out so much of his reasoning as will make clear the road by which he has reached the conclusion.<sup>10</sup>

The mere fact that the judgment of a Small Cause Court does not set out the points for determination is, however, no ground for setting it aside, if otherwise the judgment is intelligible and the Judge has applied his mind to the case.<sup>11</sup>

- (3) the decision thereon, and bound to deal elaborately with the arguments etc. in the case, he is bound to state reasons for his decision and such reasons should not be arbitrary. The view that Small Cause Court is bound to state reasons for decision is directly against the words of this rule and hence not correct.])

(4) the reasons for such decision.<sup>1</sup>

In writing judgments in appealable cases, the provisions of this rule should be strictly followed.<sup>2</sup>

The judgment should state not merely the finding on the point raised, but must also state what the evidence consists of, and how it proves the plaintiff's or defendant's case.<sup>3</sup> A judgment unsupported by reasons cannot be accepted as legally binding on the parties.<sup>4</sup> But a judgment is not defective merely because specific issues were not framed, if all the points arising have in fact been determined.<sup>5</sup> Nor is a judgment bad, merely because it does not fully state the reasons for its conclusion but states that it adopts the reasons given in a judgment in a previous suit between the same parties, the evidence being almost the same.<sup>6</sup>

As to the judgments of Criminal Courts, see Sections 265 and 366 to 372 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

O. 20 R. 5

R. 5. [S. 204.] In suits in which issues have been framed, the Court shall state its finding or decision, with the reasons therefor, upon each separate issue, unless the finding upon any one or more of the issues is sufficient for the decision of the suit.

1. Chartered High Courts. — This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts<sup>1</sup> or to the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>2</sup> in the exercise of the ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction.

2. Decision on each issue necessary. — It is imperative upon the Court to pronounce its findings upon all such issues as may be necessary for the disposal of the suit.<sup>1</sup> There should be a finding on each issue separately and not on all issues together.<sup>2</sup> In appealable cases, it is always desirable that the Court should, as far as may be practicable, pronounce its opinion on all the important points which have been raised in the case (whether such findings are necessary or unnecessary for the decision of the case),<sup>3</sup> and this is ordinarily expected in cases where evidence has been allowed to be given on all the issues.<sup>4</sup> The concluding words of the rule do not preclude the Judge from giving his findings on all the issues, though some of them may be unnecessary for the decision of the case,<sup>5</sup> though such findings should not form part of the Court's decree.<sup>6</sup>

3. Object of judgment. — See Note 3 to Rule 4.

R. 6. [S. 206.] (1) The decree shall agree with the judgment; it shall contain the number of the suit, the names and descriptions of the parties, and particulars of the claim, and shall specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the suit.

O. 20 R. 6

Contents of decree.

(2) The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the suit, and by whom or out of what property and in what proportions such costs are to be paid.

(3) [S. 221.] The Court may direct that the costs payable to one party by the other shall be set off against any sum which is admitted or found to be due from the former to the latter.

As to the applicability of this rule to proceedings under certain Tenancy Acts, see the undermentioned Acts.<sup>2</sup>

2. Scope of the Rule. — It is imperative that the decree should agree with the judgment.<sup>1</sup> As has been seen in Note 6 to Section 152 ante, where the decree does not agree with the judgment, the Court has an inherent power to amend it so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the decree does agree with the judgment, it cannot subsequently be altered or added to by the Court passing it, except under Section 152 ante, or under Rule 11, infra.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree or any part of a decree is passed by consent of parties, it should always so appear on the face of the decree when drawn up.<sup>4</sup>

Where a judgment is pronounced, the decree must automatically follow it and the Court has no power to direct that the preparation of the decree be stopped until the payment of deficit court-fees.<sup>5</sup>

3. Form and contents of decree. — Decrees drawn up in suits should contain all the particulars required by this rule<sup>1</sup> and should use the forms prescribed in

O. 20 R. 6
Notes 3-4

The decree must be quite distinct from the judgment<sup>7</sup> and must be self-contained and capable of execution without reference to any other documents.<sup>8</sup> A copy of the judgment with the schedule of costs appended thereto does not constitute a proper decree.<sup>9</sup>

In preparing a decree, Courts ought to clearly define and specify what their intentions are.<sup>10</sup> The parties and their pleaders should also see that the decrees are properly drawn up.<sup>11</sup>

Courts in India cannot make a decree of non-suit.<sup>12</sup> No decree need be drawn up in matters which are not civil suits,<sup>13</sup> or in cases of orders passed under Section 47 of the Code.<sup>14</sup> But the Court will not be deterred from making a decree by the mere fact that there may be difficulties in carrying it out<sup>15</sup> or because there is no specific provision for passing a decree in the particular case.<sup>16</sup>

In the case of appellate decrees, it will be always expedient expressly to embody in a decree of affirmance so much of the decree below as it is intended to affirm, and thus avoid the necessity of reference to the superseded decree.<sup>17</sup>

But it is not necessary in an appellate decree to state specifically the sums which go to make up the costs of the first Court.<sup>4</sup>

Where, in a suit against a minor, the Court considers that the guardian should be personally ordered to pay the costs, it should be so stated in the decree or order.<sup>5</sup>

The usual practice is that unless the judgment awards separate costs to the several defendants in a suit, the decree should not award separate costs to them.<sup>6</sup>

See also Section 35, ante.

7. Decree not in accordance with the judgment. — Where the judgment awards costs without specifying the actual amount, the costs must be calculated according to law.<sup>1</sup> Where, therefore, the assessment of costs is not according to law,<sup>2</sup> or where the decree awards costs in a case in which the judgment is silent,<sup>3</sup> or where the decree awards interest at a higher rate than that specified in the judgment,<sup>4</sup> the decree to that extent is at variance with the judgment and can be amended under the provisions of Section 152 of the Code or under the Court's inherent powers. See Section 152, Note 6.

As to whether interest which is inadvertently omitted in the decree, though mentioned in the judgment, can be awarded in execution, see the case noted below.<sup>5</sup>

8. Set-off of costs towards sums admitted or found due. — Where in a suit by A against B, a decree is passed against B for payment of a certain sum of money to A, but A is ordered to pay the costs of B, B can set off the amount of costs against the amount payable by him to A.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that costs made payable under different orders in the same suit, may be set off against each other.<sup>2</sup>

A set-off cannot be allowed for costs not actually awarded<sup>3</sup> nor for sums of money which one party might get from the other on the latter's applying for delivery of possession.<sup>4</sup>

Synopsis

1. Chartered High Courts.

3. Limitation.

2. Date of the decree.

4. Registration Act, Section 77.

1. Chartered High Courts. — This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction,<sup>1</sup> but it has been held by the High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> that even in cases of decrees passed on the original side of the High Court, the practice is to make the decree bear the same date as the judgment.

2. Date of the decree. — The date of the decree and the date of the signing of the decree are two different things. The date of the decree must correspond to the date on which the judgment is pronounced, no matter what the date of the signing of the decree may happen to be.<sup>1</sup> The reason is, that it is on the date of the judgment that the Court must be deemed to have expressed what the decree is.<sup>2</sup> The decree, therefore, though drawn up afterwards, relates back to<sup>3</sup> and operates from<sup>4</sup> the date of the judgment. Thus, where one of the plaintiffs dies subsequent to the date of delivery of judgment but before the decree is actually drawn up, this fact does not affect the validity of the decree.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, a Court gives a judgment but refuses or is unable to give a decree, till a condition is performed and draws up a decree after the performance of the condition, it must be held that the judgment given is only a provisional one which does not become operative until the decree is prepared, and that the latter date is the date of the judgment as well as of the decree.<sup>6</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

3. Limitation. — Section 12 of the Limitation Act provides that, in computing the period of limitation for appeal or for review, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree shall be excluded. Suppose now that the decree is actually signed on a date subsequent to that on which the judgment is pronounced, and a party applies for copies of the decree and judgment after the date of the signing of the decree. Can the period between the pronouncing of the judgment and the signing of the decree be excluded in computing the period of limitation, in addition to the period actually taken in obtaining the copies? On this point there has been a conflict of opinion. According to the practice of the Calcutta High Court, such period should be excluded as being part of the time requisite for obtaining the copy.<sup>1</sup> This practice has been followed by the High Court of Patna.<sup>2</sup> All the other High Courts have, on the other hand, held that such period cannot be excluded in computing the period of limitation.<sup>3</sup> In Pramathanath Roy v. William Arthur Lee,<sup>4</sup> it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that no period can be regarded as requisite under the Limitation Act which need not have elapsed if the appellant had taken reasonable and proper steps to obtain an order, and that there is no warrant for the proposition that the time actually consumed in obtaining the decree must be deducted. Their Lordships referred to the Calcutta view but did not decide as to the correctness or otherwise thereof.

Section 12, sub-section 2 of the Limitation Act does not apply to applications for execution of a decree, and even according to the Calcutta<sup>5</sup> and Patna<sup>6</sup> High Courts, the period of limitation for an application for execution of a decree runs from the date of the judgment and not from the date on which the decree is drawn up and signed.

4. Registration Act, Section 77. — It has been held by the High Court of Madras<sup>1</sup> that for the purposes of Section 77 of the Registration Act the period of 30 days is to be reckoned not from the time when the judgment is pronounced, but from the time when the decree is actually drawn up and signed.

1. Scope of the Rule. — In suits relating to immovable property the decree should contain a description of the property sufficient to identify the same, and where it can be identified by boundaries or by survey numbers, the decree should specify such boundaries or numbers. The reason is that, otherwise, the decree may in many cases become impossible of execution by reason of the indefiniteness of the property dealt with by it.<sup>1</sup>

R. 10. [S. 208.] Where the suit is for moveable property, and the decree is for the delivery of such property, the decree shall also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.

Decree for delivery of moveable property.

[1877, S. 208; 1859, S. 191.]

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. "Amount of money to be paid."

1. Scope of the Rule. — A person entitled to the delivery of moveable property from another is not bound to sue for the delivery of the property itself; he may sue for the value thereof.<sup>1</sup> Even if he does sue for the delivery of the property, the decree need not always be for the delivery of the property in the first instance; the Court may, in proper cases, decree only the value of the property as damages.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where the defendant is not in possession of the property claimed, the Court need not decree delivery thereof but may pass a decree for the value of such property.<sup>3</sup> But where the Court considers it proper to direct a restoration of the property, the decree should also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.<sup>4</sup>

The giving of the alternative remedy does not, however, give the decree-holder any option of refusing to take delivery of the property and of insisting upon the money portion of the decree; he cannot execute his decree without having recourse to the procedure prescribed by O. 21 R. 31.<sup>5</sup> Nor can the judgment-debtor claim any option of either surrendering the property or paying the money decreed.<sup>6</sup>

The words "moveable property" in the rule mean specific moveable property such as is referred to in Articulos 48 and 49 of the Limitation Act.<sup>7</sup> A suit for the recovery of a certain quantity of grain payable under a karar for maintenance is not one for specific moveable property within the meaning of this rule.<sup>8</sup>

No decree can be passed under this rule for delivery of property against several defendants jointly, unless there is a combination among them; if it is found that any one of them took possession of the property, the decree should be made against him only, and to the extent of the property taken by him.<sup>9</sup>

2. "Amount of money to be paid."—The money to be paid as an alternative is the value of the property together with damages for the time the plaintiff has been kept out of it.<sup>1</sup> Where the plaintiff valued the property claimed at Rs. 1360 and produced evidence to show that this was the value, but the defendant simply refused to accept the valuation and would not produce the articles, which he did not deny were in his possession, it was held that, under the circumstances, the valuation made by the plaintiff ought to be accepted by the Court.<sup>2</sup>

Where a decree is passed in terms of an award ordering delivery of moveable property, and a part of such property is lost subsequently before delivery, the decree cannot be modified by the Court by inserting in it an order to pay the value of the property so lost.<sup>3</sup>

If there is a dispute as to the property claimed the Court must, of course, determine it before passing the decree; it cannot leave the matter to be settled in execution.<sup>4</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "shall be postponed" in sub-rules (1) and (2) are new. Owing to the absence of these words in the old Code, the Court could not order that the decree amount shall not to be paid until the expiration of a fixed time.<sup>1</sup>

2. The words "notwithstanding anything contained . . . payable" are also new. See Note 7 below.

3. For the words "in all decrees" the words "where and in so far as a decree" have been substituted.

4. The proviso in the old Section has been omitted.

2. Scope of the Rule. — Where a decree in a suit is for the payment of money, the Court may, under this rule, order the payment of the decree amount to be postponed or to be made in instalments.<sup>1</sup> If it decides to pass such order at the time of passing the decree, it may do so if there are sufficient grounds therefor [sub-rule (1)]. After the passing of the decree it can pass such an order only if the decree-holder gives his consent thereto [sub-rule (2)].<sup>2</sup>

The rule applies to decrees for the payment of money. It does not apply to decrees for recovery of money by sale of property, as in the case of mortgage decrees.<sup>3</sup> But, independently of this rule, a decree may, in a suit on a mortgage or for partition, be passed on a compromise between the parties, providing for payment by instalments and for sale of the mortgaged property in default.<sup>4</sup>

This rule does not apply to cases coming under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act<sup>5</sup> or rent decrees under the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>6</sup> In a suit for arrears of rent under the Agra Tenancy Act against a person other than a permanent tenure-holder or a fixed rate tenant, the Revenue Court cannot make a decree payable by instalments under this rule.<sup>7</sup> But it has been held that the provisions of the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act relating to instalment decrees do not derogate from the provisions of this rule and that the Court can pass an instalment decree under this rule even where such decree would not be permissible under the provisions of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.<sup>8</sup>

This rule is not in any way controlled by the provisions of the Imperial Bank Act which limit the powers of the Bank in the matter of advancing loans on longer terms than six months and, therefore, a Court cannot refuse to exercise the discretion vested in it under this rule simply on the ground that such a course would postpone the realization of the dues by the Bank for over six months.<sup>9</sup>

3. Decree must be for the payment of money. — A decree for deficiency passed under O. 34 R. 6 of the Code is only a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule.<sup>1</sup>

4. "The Court." — It is the Court which passed the decree that can act under this rule.<sup>1</sup> In cases coming under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, however, it is provided by Section 15B of that Act that the Court which carries out the decree can order the payment by instalments or extend the time for payment.<sup>2</sup>

5. Postponement of payment. — Under Section 210 of the old Code, there was a conflict of opinion as to whether the Court could make an order postponing the payment under a decree.<sup>1</sup> The introduction of the words "shall be postponed" in this rule makes it clear that such an order can be passed.

A judgment-debtor who has enjoyed the benefit of the arrangement for delay in execution by virtue of an order passed under this rule cannot subsequently resile from such arrangement.<sup>2</sup>

6. Order for payment by instalments. — A decree payable in instalments on a certain condition (e. g., that the defendant should mortgage certain property by way of security) is not illegal on that ground.<sup>1</sup> As to the construction of decrees for payment of money in instalments, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 2 above.

7. Sufficient reason. — The Court has a discretion, under this rule, to order payment of the decree amount in instalments. But such discretion should, as in the case of the exercise of all discretions under the Code, be exercised in a judicial and not in an arbitrary manner.<sup>1</sup> The onus is on the defendant to show that he is entitled to the indulgence under this rule.<sup>2</sup> Where he has opposed the claim on frivolous grounds and effected a fraudulent conveyance of his property, subsequent to the institution of the suit, he deserves no consideration at the hands of the Court, especially where the interest agreed upon between the parties is moderate.<sup>3</sup> Nor should a decree be passed the effect of which is to stay execution unconditionally,<sup>4</sup> or to make the instalments extend over a long period without guaranteeing satisfaction or making any provision for the payment of interest.<sup>5</sup> Again, the mere fact that the defendant is unable to pay or is hard pressed or embarrassed,<sup>6</sup> or that his estate is under the management of the Court of Wards,<sup>7</sup> or that he is expecting to get a cross decree against the plaintiff in a pending litigation which would enable him to claim a set-off,<sup>8</sup> is not a sufficient reason to enable the Court to order payment by instalments or to postpone payment.

Where, however, the rate of interest is exorbitant or unconscionable,<sup>9</sup> or where the decree for immediate payment will deprive the defendant of his means of livelihood,<sup>10</sup> or where the defendant has made payments towards principal and interest, which exceed the principal sum,<sup>11</sup> a decree for instalments can be properly passed. Again, a lender who abandons his proper remedy in order to avoid the consequence of the original contract is not entitled to the relief prayed for under this rule, if it would be a hardship to the judgment-debtor.<sup>12</sup>

8. "Notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable."—Where an instalment bond provided for payment by instalments, with a default clause to the effect that the whole sum would be due immediately on default, and a suit was brought for the whole amount on default, it was held by the Bombay High Court under Section 210 of the old Code, that the Court had no jurisdiction to ignore the express contract of the parties as to the consequences of such default and pass a decree for instalments.<sup>1</sup> The introduction of the words "notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable" in the present rule now makes it clear that the Court has a discretion to pass a decree for instalments notwithstanding the contract between the parties. In their Statement of Objects and Reasons, the Special Committee observe as follows :

"The Committee have added words to sub-rule (1) of this rule in order to override the ruling of the Bombay High Court in the case of Raghu Govind v. Dipchand (I. L. R. 4 Bombay 96), as the practice inculcated by that ruling seems to prevail only in the Presidency of Bombay and not in the rest of India."

9. "With or without interest."—The granting or refusal of interest, and the rate at which it is to be granted on the instalments ordered to be paid, are in the discretion of the Court.<sup>1</sup> Where no interest is provided for in an instalment decree, it must, under the provisions of Section 34 of the Code, be deemed to have been refused, and cannot be granted by the executing Court.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, interest is provided for in the decree, but the rate is not mentioned, the Court can, in execution, grant the usual court rate of interest.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Rangoon has held in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that where a decree allows interest, to disallow it in passing an order under this rule would be without jurisdiction.

10. Order for instalments after decree — Sub-rule (2). — As has been seen in Note 2 ante, no order for instalments can be made after the passing of the decree under this sub-rule, unless the decree-holder gives his consent thereto. But the consent need not be an express one. It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that the non-opposition by the decree-holder after notice to him may amount to consent within this rule.

An order for postponement or for instalments under this sub-rule does not amount to a variation of the decree itself<sup>2</sup> and can be made in execution proceedings<sup>3</sup> or even when an appeal is pending from the decree.<sup>4</sup> Nor does the rule direct the decree to be amended by virtue of such order.<sup>5</sup> Where default is committed in the payment of instalments ordered to be paid, the Court can grant relief against forfeiture,<sup>6</sup> though it cannot alter the terms of the decree either with regard to the decretal amount or the rate of interest which is to be paid thereon.<sup>7</sup>

Where parties agree after decree that the decretal amount should be paid by instalments and the Court, accepting the compromise, passes an order striking off the execution proceedings, the Court must be deemed to have passed an order under the provisions of this sub-rule.<sup>8</sup> But, unless recognized by the Court in some form, the arrangement between the parties will not, by itself, amount to a direction by the Court under this rule<sup>9</sup> and cannot be enforced in execution.<sup>10</sup> Where the Court has recognized the compromise between the parties for payment by instalments, it cannot, on default of payment in any of the instalments, refuse to execute the decree and drive the plaintiff to a separate suit.<sup>11</sup>

12. Limitation for application under sub-rule (2).—An application under sub-rule (2) for postponement or for payment in instalments of the decree amount should be made within six months of the decree, under Article 175, Schedule I of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> But, if an order for instalments is actually passed on a time-barred application, it is not a nullity.<sup>2</sup> It must be assumed that the Court by oversight decided the question of limitation wrongly.<sup>3</sup> Where there has been an appeal from a decree, the time for the application for an order for instalments runs only from the date of the decree of the Appellate Court, even though the latter confirmed the judgment of the lower Court and dismissed the appeal.<sup>4</sup>

13. Limitation for execution of decree passed under this Rule.—See the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Notes to Article 182, clause 7.

14. Appeal.—An order passed under this rule refusing to allow the payment of the decretal amount in instalments is not appealable under O. 43 R. 1. It must be regarded as a matter separate from and not forming part of the decree.<sup>1</sup> An order granting a decree for instalments or postponing the time for payment of the decretal amount under sub-rule (1) will of course be incorporated in the decree itself and can therefore be attacked in an appeal against the decree.<sup>2</sup> If, however, it is not so incorporated, the order will not be appealable.<sup>3</sup> An order for instalments made under sub-rule (2) must necessarily be one made after the decree and on the consent of the decree-holder. No appeal can lie against such consent order.<sup>4</sup> In Rangoon, however, by virtue of the amendment of sub-rule (2), an order can be passed after decree for payment in instalments, after notice to the decree-holder and without his consent. The order not being a consent order, and being one in execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 47 is appealable as a decree.<sup>5</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The provisions of Section 244, clauses (a) and (b) of the Code of 1882, which enacted that any question relating to the ascertainment of mesne profits as to which the decree directed an enquiry, were to be determined by the executing Court, have been omitted under the present Code. The result is that such an enquiry is no longer a proceeding in execution but is one in suit.<sup>1</sup> The substantial change under the new Code is, as pointed out by Sir John Wallis, C. J., "that the award of mesne profits in all cases is to be by a preliminary decree and that when ascertained, they are to be embodied in a final decree, whereas under Sections 211 and 212 (of the old Code) they were to be ascertained in execution."<sup>2</sup> In other respects this rule corresponds to Sections 211 and 212 of the old Code, except that sub-clause (ii) in clause (c) has been newly added for the benefit of the judgment-debtor.

2. The Explanation to Section 211 of the old Code which contained the definition of 'mesne profits' has been re-enacted in Section 2 clause (12) of the present Code.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule deals with the decree to be passed in a suit for possession of immovable property and for rent or mesne profits, past and future, against a person in wrongful possession of such property. It does not apply to suits for mesne profits alone<sup>1</sup> or for damages which are not mesne profits.<sup>2</sup> But a suit for a declaration of title and in the alternative for possession and mesne profits is within this rule.<sup>3</sup>

In so far as this rule enables the Court to pass a decree for future mesne profits (i. e., profits accruing subsequent to the institution of the suit) it is an exception to the general rule that a Court has no jurisdiction to give the plaintiff a decree on a cause of action that had not accrued to him at the date of the suit.<sup>4</sup> The object of enabling the Court to pass such a decree is to avoid multiplicity of suits.<sup>5</sup> But the rule is only a directory and not a mandatory one. It does not compel the plaintiff to claim future mesne profits. Nor is the Court bound to pass a decree for such mesne profits.<sup>6</sup> (See Note 13 infra). Ordinarily, a decree for mesne profits can only follow a decree for possession and when the plaintiff fails to obtain a decree for possession, a claim for mesne profits should not be allowed.<sup>7</sup> In cases falling within this rule, the Court may pass —

- (1) a decree for possession of the immovable property ; (this is a final decree, and subject to just objections, is capable of being executed.)
- (2) either a final decree for past mesne profits, or rent<sup>8</sup> or a preliminary decree for such profits, directing an enquiry as to the amount thereof, and
- (3) a preliminary decree, directing an enquiry as to the amount of future mesne profits.

In the undermentioned case<sup>9</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that in the case of past mesne profits, it is optional with the Court to direct an inquiry into such mesne profits and that the Court can at once pass a final decree without directing any enquiry; but that in the case of mesne profits subsequent to the institution of the suit, it is obligatory on the Court to direct an enquiry and to pass only a preliminary decree in the first instance and then a final decree. But the same High Court has in a later decision<sup>10</sup> dissented from this view and held that where it is unnecessary to have any enquiry, it is open to the Court to dispense with such enquiry even in the case of mesne profits subsequent to the institution of the suit, and at once pass a final and executable decree in respect of such profits.

When a Court passes a preliminary decree under this rule and directs an enquiry as to mesne profits, it should, at the same time, decide the basis upon which the mesne profits are to be assessed.<sup>11</sup>

Where an enquiry is directed as mentioned above, a final decree in respect of such mesne profits is to be passed in accordance with the result of such enquiry.<sup>12</sup>

A decree ordering the delivery of possession and directing an enquiry as to mesne profits will thus be partly preliminary and partly final.<sup>13</sup> Where a decree is passed for past and future mesne profits without directing an enquiry, the decree is not preliminary but final.<sup>14</sup>

As to the proper way of framing a decree under this rule, see Form No. 33, Appendix D, Schedule I.<sup>15</sup>

interest. It will not apply, for instance, to a suit by a member of a Hindu joint family, for a partition of the joint property inasmuch as the plaintiff has no specific interest in such property until decree,<sup>1</sup> and the defendants cannot be said to be in wrongful possession of any property of the plaintiff. Where, however, the family has been living under a clear arrangement that the members are entitled, not as an ordinary Hindu family, but in specific and definite shares, the right to mesne profits will arise if the enjoyment of those shares is, in any way, disturbed.<sup>2</sup>

Apart from this rule, however, a member of a joint Hindu family who is excluded from participation in the profits of the family property may be entitled to an account of the management of the property from the persons in possession and to a share of such profits. Such a right is not a right to mesne profits received by a person in wrongful possession, but is appurtenant to the plaintiff's right under Hindu law in his share of the lands.<sup>3</sup> In fact a member of a Hindu family suing for partition and for profits is really suing for an account of the profits received by the manager or the persons in possession, so that the proceeds so received by the latter, which are also divisible property, may be divided and his share therein also given to him.<sup>4</sup>

4. Enquiry as to mesne profits is no longer a proceeding in execution. —

The assessment of mesne profits is, under the present rule, a proceeding in the suit, and it has nothing to do with the execution department.<sup>1</sup> The enquiry is a continuation of the suit which results in a final decree.<sup>2</sup> No application for the ascertainment of mesne profits can be entertained in the execution department under the present Code.<sup>3</sup> But, if the Court passing the decree erroneously gives a direction to the plaintiff to apply for the ascertainment of mesne profits in execution, is such a direction ultra vires and is the executing Court bound to ascertain such profits? The High Court of Calcutta held in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that such a direction is ultra vires and that the executing Court can decline to carry out the direction. But in a recent case<sup>5</sup> the same High Court has held that such a decree might be a wrong decree, but is valid so long as it is not corrected by proper proceedings. The High Courts of Bombay<sup>6</sup> and Madras<sup>7</sup> have, on the other hand, held that the decree is not a nullity but that the case was one of a mere irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction, and that the executing Court is bound to enquire into the mesne profits as per the direction in the decree. It has been held by the Allahabad High Court<sup>8</sup> that a direction by the trial Court to the executing Court to ascertain mesne profits is a nullity.

Applying the principle laid down by the Judicial Committee in Lachminarain v. Balmakund<sup>9</sup> that when once a preliminary decree has been passed the suit cannot be dismissed unless and until the decree is varied or reversed in appeal, the High Courts of Madras<sup>10</sup> and Patna<sup>11</sup> have held that a suit cannot be dismissed for default in prosecuting an application for the ascertainment of mesne profits under this rule.

After a preliminary decree, the practice is that the suit is adjourned to a definite date for further hearing.<sup>12</sup>

5. Mesne profits.—The expression “mesne profits” is defined by Section 2, clause (12), ante as :

“The profits which a person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might, with ordinary diligence, have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession.”

The object of awarding a decree for mesne profits is to compensate the person entitled to be in possession for his having been kept out of possession and thus deprived of the profits of the property.<sup>1</sup> Hence, it is only a person who is entitled to actual possession that can claim mesne profits.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, the very foundation of the cause of action for mesne profits is wrongful possession of the defendant.<sup>3</sup> No decree

- (3) The possession of a defaulter after the confirmation of the sale of the property under the Bengal Revenue Sales Act.<sup>13</sup>
- (4) The possession of a person against whom a decree for possession has been passed.<sup>14</sup>
- (5) The possession of the vendee after the pre-emptor has become entitled to possession, that is, immediately on depositing the purchase-money.<sup>15</sup>

Where A, the manager of a joint Hindu family, alienates the family property for no necessity to X, and at the instance of B, another member of the family, the sale is held not binding on him, is X liable for any mesne profits and if so from what date? If, as has been seen in Note 3 ante, B can have no specific interest in the family property until partition and consequently cannot sue the manager for past mesne profits under this rule, it is conceived, he cannot also on the same grounds claim mesne profits from a purchaser from the manager until partition. It will also follow that after the institution of a suit by B for partition and mesne profits, his share becomes a specified interest from that date and mesne profits can be awarded against the purchaser from that date. This is the result arrived at in the undermentioned cases,<sup>16</sup> but the grounds of the decision therein, it is respectfully submitted, are not correct. These cases proceed on the view that possession under a voidable sale is rightful possession until set aside and that therefore mesne profits can be awarded only from the institution of the suit where the plaintiff repudiates the transaction. Where a transaction is held not binding on a person and is therefore set aside against him, it must be deemed to be not binding on him from the very beginning of the transaction and not merely from the date of suit. In Satgur Prasad v. Harnarain Das,<sup>17</sup> where A sued B for setting aside a deed executed by A to B on the ground of undue influence and fraud, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that if the document was set aside, the defendant would be liable for mesne profits from the date when he got into possession under the deed, and not merely from the institution of the suit. It has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>18</sup> that, after the above decision of the Privy Council, it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that, where a person is in possession of property under a voidable transaction and a suit is brought against him to avoid the transaction and to get possession, there is no right to claim mesne profits prior to the date of the suit and that it must depend upon the circumstances of each case whether the plaintiff has been guilty of such conduct as to disentitle him to past profits.

Extent of liability.—The period for which mesne profits can be awarded is clearly confined to the period during which the defendant was in possession<sup>19</sup> or to the period during which he was active in keeping the plaintiff out of possession.<sup>20</sup> Thus, if the defendant is deprived of possession by virtue of an order of attachment under

A transferee from the defendant pendente lite is liable for mesne profits<sup>23</sup> but his liability starts only from the time he entered into possession.<sup>24</sup> Where a preliminary decree gives the plaintiff mesne profits before suit but does not specify the exact date from which the mesne profits are to be assessed, the decree entitles the plaintiff to mesne profits before suit for such period as the law entitles him to, i. e., for three years before the suit.<sup>25</sup>

Principles relating to assessment.—"Mesne profits," observed Lord Hobhouse in delivering the judgment of the Board in Grish Chunder v. Shoshi Shikreswar, [I. L. R. 27 Calcutta 951 (1967) P. C.], "are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case."<sup>26</sup> The assessment of mesne profits is therefore a matter for the exercise of judicial discretion in each case.<sup>27</sup> The question to be decided is the amount of profits which the wrongdoer while in possession received or which without wilful default he might have received.<sup>28</sup> The test is, as pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, not what the plaintiff has lost by his exclusion but what the defendant has or might reasonably have made by his wrongful possession.<sup>29</sup> What the plaintiff might have made, or the character of possession before trespass, can only be relevant as evidence of what the defendant might with ordinary diligence have received.<sup>30</sup> A trespasser cannot say that he kept the land waste and that therefore he is not liable for mesne profits.<sup>31</sup>

The principles by which the Courts should be guided in awarding and assessing mesne profits are that the possession which has been wrongfully retained should not be a source of profit to the wrongful possessor, and that the person wrongfully kept out of possession is put in the same position financially as if right had been done.<sup>32</sup>

Where the trespasser is in actual possession, the mesne profits should be awarded on the basis of the actual profits received or which might have been received with ordinary diligence less the deductions referred to in the undermentioned case.<sup>33</sup> Where, however, the trespasser is not in actual possession, but has himself leased the property to third persons, he will be liable only to the extent of the rent which he actually received from his lessee, unless it can be shown that he might, with ordinary diligence, have

B trespasses upon the land belonging to A and subsequently lets it out to C for a rental of Rs. 800 per annum. C gets a gross profit of Rs. 700 and the expenses of cultivation amount to Rs. 150. A sues B and C for possession and mesne profits. B will be liable to pay A Rs. 800, the rent which he received from C, and C will be liable for Rs. 250, the net profit realised by him after deducting the expenses of cultivation and after deducting the rent paid to B. But B and C cannot be made liable jointly and severally, for the total of the profits realised by both of them together.<sup>37</sup>

Where two or more persons are in wrongful possession of the plaintiff's land, a decree for mesne profits may be passed jointly and severally against all the trespassers who may have jointly kept the plaintiff out of possession for any particular period, leaving them to have their respective rights adjusted in a separate suit for contribution; or the respective liabilities of such trespassers may be ascertained in the plaintiff's suit against them, and a decree on the basis of such several liabilities may be passed as against the respective trespassers in plaintiff's favour.<sup>38</sup>

(2) The cost of cultivation.<sup>41</sup>

It was held in certain decisions<sup>42</sup> that the expenses of collecting rents and profits cannot be deducted unless the defendant entered upon the property under a bona fide claim of right. This view, however, has been held by the Calcutta High Court in a recent case<sup>43</sup> not to be good law after the decision of the Privy Council in Secretary of State for India v. Saroj Kumar Acharya.<sup>44</sup> So, it has been held by the Calcutta High Court<sup>45</sup> that even where the dispossession is wanton and malicious, in calculating the amount of mesne profits, collection charges are to be deducted from the gross realization. The Allahabad High Court<sup>46</sup> has held that it is only where there has been a gross and contemptuous trespass that no deduction should be allowed for collection charges; but that where the defendant is a tenant holding over after the expiry of the term of his lease under the mistaken impression that he was entitled to a renewal of the lease, he is entitled to claim a deduction on account of collection charges. A deduction of 10 per cent., it has been held, can be allowed as collection charges where there is no specific evidence on the point.<sup>47</sup> But where the defendant has elected to let in evidence as to the actual charges of collection and the result of such evidence shows that the collection charges were less than 10 per cent., the defendant is not entitled to a deduction of 10 per cent.<sup>48</sup>

It has been held that in the case of endowed lands, the judgment-debtor is entitled to a deduction of the expenses incurred by him in carrying on the worship of

Notes 6-6

Onus of proof. — It is for the plaintiff who comes into Court with a claim for mesne profits to establish first his right to immediate possession.<sup>52</sup> The onus of proving the amount of profits actually received is on the person receiving them; but the burden of proving the profits that the person in occupation might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, is on the person claiming them.<sup>53</sup> If the plaintiff lets in prima facie evidence to show that the profits were somewhere about the sum he alleges, the burden of proving that they were less, shifts to the defendant.<sup>54</sup>

6. Interest forming part of mesne profits. — There was no definition of 'mesne profits' in the Code of 1859. The definition in the Code of 1877 did not include interest on mesne profits as part of mesne profits. But the Code of 1882 as well as the present Code includes interest as part of mesne profits.<sup>1</sup> But this does not mean that the Court is obliged, in every case, to award interest.<sup>2</sup> It may refuse interest having regard to the circumstances of the case.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that mesne profits are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case.<sup>4</sup> Under the old Code, where mesne profits were left to be ascertained in execution, the executing Court could grant interest even though the decree was silent in respect thereof.<sup>5</sup> Under the present Code, however, the executing Court is not empowered to ascertain the mesne profits and cannot award any interest where both the preliminary and the final decrees are silent on the matter.<sup>6</sup> The reason is that the duty of the executing Court is simply to carry out the decree and not to add to it or vary it in any way. But when the preliminary decree is silent as to interest, the Court can award interest in the final decree.

If mesne profits are payable month to month or at intervals of other periods, then interest also should be calculated according to such periods.<sup>7</sup> The rate of interest usually awarded by the Court is six per cent.<sup>8</sup> In the undermentioned decision,<sup>9</sup> the Calcutta High Court made a distinction between the period before the delivery of possession of the property to the plaintiff and the period after such delivery and held that while in respect of the former period a higher rate of interest should be paid, in respect of the latter period it was enough if the usual court-rate allowed on money decrees was paid. But this view has been criticised by the Privy Council<sup>10</sup> which has held that there is no reason for making any such distinction and that in the absence a statutory provision or a special contract there is no ground for awarding interest on mesne profits at a higher rate up to the date of delivery of possession and at a lower rate subsequently. As to the period for which the interest should be calculated, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>11</sup> Where under a redemption decree accounts are directed to be taken as to the mesne profits payable by the defendant and it is also directed that the plaintiff should pay interest on the mortgage money from the date on which it fell due to the date on which it was deposited in Court, it is proper that the plaintiff should be charged with counter interest on the amount thus due as interest from him.<sup>12</sup> claim in this suit be decreed with costs and mesne profits" the plaintiff will be entitled to such profits up to the date of his re-admission into the land.<sup>5</sup> In a case where a right to mesne profits is found in the judgment but no such direction is found in the decree (which ought to have been drawn up in accordance with the judgment), it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>6</sup> that there is nothing wrong in the Court assessing mesne profits on an application for such ascertainment without a formal amendment of the decree, and passing a final decree on such assessment.

10. Notice of relinquishment — Clause (c). — The relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through Court absolves him from further liability in respect of future mesne profits.<sup>1</sup> The mere filing of a petition without notice<sup>2</sup> is not enough to escape liability unless the decree-holder waives the notice.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> it was held that notice of relinquishment given at a time when it was too late for cultivation was not sufficient to absolve the defendant from liability.

11. Three years from the date of the decree. — The period of three years mentioned in sub-clause (iii), clause (c) should be reckoned from the date of the preliminary decree, and where the same has been appealed from, from the date of the appellate decree.<sup>1</sup> The words "whichever event first occurs" clearly indicate that the maximum period for which future mesne profits can be awarded is three years from the date of the decree finally passed.<sup>2</sup> If the decree without specifying any period simply awards possession with wasilat from a particular date, the decree-holder is ordinarily entitled to mesne profits up to the date of re-delivery of possession to him,<sup>3</sup> unless the period of three years elapses before such re-delivery.<sup>4</sup>

12. Limitation. — See Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Articles 109 and 181 and Notes thereto.

14. Order after preliminary decree determining period and mode of accounting, if a decree. — An order passed in supplemental proceedings after the preliminary decree with regard to the mode of accounting and the period for which the defendant is liable for mesne profits amounts, according to the High Court of Calcutta,<sup>1</sup> to another preliminary decree, but according to the High Court of Allahabad,<sup>2</sup> only to an interlocutory order in a pending suit. For a fuller discussion, see Note 10 to Section 2, clause (2).

15. Appeal. — Under the old Code the ascertainment of mesne profits was done in execution and the order relating thereto was appealable as having the force of a decree under Section 244 (Section 47). Under the present Code, the ascertainment is made in the suit itself and the result of it should be embodied in a final decree which is appealable as such.<sup>1</sup>

When the decree of the trial Court dismissing a suit for possession and mesne profits is reversed in appeal, the Appellate Court should not remand the case for enquiring into the mesne profits but should pass a preliminary decree for possession directing an enquiry into mesne profits under this rule.<sup>2</sup> Vide also the amendment made to this rule by the High Court of Madras.

1. Analogous law. — This rule corresponds to Section 34 and Part I, Schedule I of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, (15 Geo., V, Ch. 23). The main difference between Part I, Schedule I and this rule consists in the addition of the words "and as to the priorities of debts and liabilities" after the words "contingent liabilities respectively." See Note 8 infra.

2. Administration suits. — "Administration" means the management of the estate of a deceased person who has left no executor.<sup>1</sup> It consists in —

- (i) Payment of the funeral expenses of the deceased.

- (ii) Collection, realisation and preservation of assets.
- (iii) Payment of debts and legacies.
- (iv) Acts in respect of adverse claims to assets.
- (v) Dealings with creditors and legatees.
- (vi) Distribution finally among the heirs and next of kin.<sup>2</sup>

The object of an administration suit is to have the estate administered under a decree of Court. In such a suit the whole administration and settlement of the estate are assumed by the Court; the assets are marshalled and a decree is made for the benefit of creditors and other persons entitled to the property.<sup>3</sup>

Thus, the suit is, in essence, one for an account and application of the estate of the deceased, for the satisfaction of the dues of all the creditors.<sup>4</sup> It cannot be dismissed at the preliminary stage except where the plaint discloses no cause of action or the suit is premature.<sup>5</sup>

An administration suit is not a suit relating to immovable property and, therefore, the Court is not incompetent to administer properties or to deal with questions of title in respect of properties situate outside its jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup> Again, the jurisdiction of the Court, as to such a suit, does not depend upon the fact whether the deceased is one to whose estate the Succession Act applies.<sup>7</sup>

Though sub-section (1) does not expressly prohibit the filing of an administration suit in respect of the property of a living person, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that such a suit is not maintainable.<sup>8</sup>

Before the Court takes upon itself the administration of the property, the preliminary decree for administration should be passed.<sup>9</sup> The Court may also make an order for grant of maintenance pendente lite but this power has to be exercised with caution.<sup>10</sup> Where a preliminary decree has been passed under this rule, the Court can stay proceedings taken by another decree-holder and direct him to come in and prove his claim in the administration suit.<sup>11</sup> It has been held that a creditor who has neglected to come in under the administration decree cannot subsequently sue the creditors who have proved their debts and received dividends, for a re-distribution of the assets and for a pro rata refund by such creditors.<sup>12</sup>

3. Hindu Law.—An administration suit is filed only in respect of the estate of the deceased and therefore if the property of a Hindu passes by survivorship, there is no estate of the deceased left for administration and a suit for administration is not maintainable.<sup>1</sup>

4. Mahomedan Law.—Under the Mahomedan law, the funeral expenses of the deceased should be defrayed first from out of the assets, then his debts and then the legacies. The residue is to be thereafter distributed amongst the heirs of the deceased.<sup>1</sup> A suit by the heirs or the creditors or the legatees of a deceased Mahomedan for the enforcement of their claims against the estate of the deceased, becomes essentially a suit for administration,<sup>2</sup> though in such cases partition of the estate may be an incident thereof,<sup>3</sup> and even the heirs of the deceased who are not parties to such a suit are bound by the proceedings and cannot claim anything but what remains after the debts of the deceased have been paid.<sup>4</sup>

5. Who may file an administration suit. — A suit for administration of the estate may be instituted by any person interested in the estate. Thus, the following persons may maintain a suit for administration —

- (i) Any person entitled to a share in the deceased's estate, such as next of kin.<sup>1</sup>
- (ii) A legatee or an annuitant.<sup>2</sup>
- (iii) A creditor of the deceased. But the creditor should sue on behalf of himself and on behalf of all the creditors.<sup>3</sup>
- (iv) An executor or administrator, where there are disputes between the heirs or the legatees and where there is a doubt as to the manner in which he should administer the estate.<sup>4</sup>
- (v) The legal personal representative of the deceased.<sup>5</sup>

An order for administration will not be made in a suit therefor, unless the plaintiff proves his claim or establishes his right to bring the suit.<sup>6</sup> But it is not obligatory on the Court to pass a decree for administration, if the defendant before decree satisfies the plaintiff's claim. It may dismiss the suit.<sup>7</sup>

5a. Against whom administration suit can be filed. — A suit for administration is maintainable against persons who were in possession of the property during the lifetime of the deceased as agents or managers and who continued to be in possession after his death.<sup>1</sup> In an administration suit where a legatee sues the executor for payment of a legacy and for administration of the estate of the deceased, the executor, if there is one, is the only necessary party and not the other legatees.<sup>2</sup> The next of kin and the intermeddler with the estate of the deceased are proper parties to an administration suit.<sup>3</sup>

7. Decree in administration suits. — In drawing up decrees in administration suits the forms prescribed in the Code should be followed as far as possible.<sup>1</sup> For forms of preliminary decree, see Schedule I, Appendix D, Forms Nos. 17 and 19, infra, and for forms of final decrees, see Forms Nos. 18 and 20, infra. In a suit by a creditor for administration, it cannot be held that the other creditors are represented by the plaintiff in the sense that they are, in effect, parties to the suit.<sup>2</sup> But a decree for the administration of the estate of a deceased person is a decree in favour of all creditors and persons entitled to the effects of the deceased, and therefore a creditor who has attached the property of the deceased is not entitled to any priority in respect of his claims and will only rank among other creditors.<sup>3</sup> But the pendency of an administration suit will not debar a secured creditor from enforcing his security.<sup>4</sup> After the passing of the preliminary decree it is not proper for the Court to sanction a compromise to which all parties to the suit are not parties,<sup>5</sup> or to discharge the receiver appointed by the Court and direct him to make over the estate to the plaintiff.<sup>6</sup> So also, a supplementary decree cannot be passed after the preliminary decree has been passed, the only other decree that can be passed in the case after the preliminary decree being the final decree.<sup>7</sup>

Although a Court in pursuance of a decree in an administration suit is competent to direct one of the parties to the suit to restore or hand over to the administrator or receiver assets belonging to the estate which are in the possession of such party, it is not open to the Court in an administration suit to direct a debtor to pay a debt (which is disputed by the alleged debtor) to the administrator or the receiver.<sup>8</sup>

The Code makes no provision as to when a final decree in an administration suit should be passed or as to the contents of such decree; this must depend upon the circumstances in each case.<sup>9</sup>

8. Estate insufficient to pay all the debts — Sub-rule (2). — Where the estate of the deceased, in respect of which administration by Court is sought, is insufficient to pay all the debts of the deceased in full, sub-rule (2) will apply. Under that sub-rule, the law of insolvency in respect of the following heads should be observed in the administration of such estates —

(i) as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors (see Sections 28 and 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Section 48 and clauses 9 to 17 of Schedule II of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909),

(ii) as to the debts and liabilities of the estate provable (see Sections 45 and 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Sections 46 and 48 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909), and

(iii) as to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities (see

O. 30 R. 13 Section 34 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Section 46 of the Presidency
Notes 8-13 Towns Insolvency Act).

The object of this sub-rule is not to apply all rules of insolvency to insolvent estates but only the rules in respect of the three heads mentioned above.<sup>1</sup>

9. Rights of secured creditors. — See Note 8 above.

10. Provable debts and liabilities under the Insolvency Act. — The dividends due to the creditors should, in an administration suit, be calculated on the amount of the debt at the date of the preliminary decree and not at the date of proof.<sup>1</sup> Unsecured creditors are entitled to interest up to the date of the preliminary decree and not up to the date of payment,<sup>2</sup> but secured creditors are entitled to interest from the proceeds of the sale of secured property up to the date of payment.<sup>3</sup> The general principle governing the position of creditors of an estate under administration by the Court is that creditors will, on due cause shown, be let in at any time, while the fund is in Court, except where they have been guilty of remissness in the assertion of their claim and other creditors are prejudiced thereby.<sup>4</sup> See Sections 45 to 50 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and Schedule II, Rules 2, 9, 11, 15, 23 to 27 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909.

11. Barred debt. — A creditor whose claim is barred before the preliminary decree cannot come in and claim to be paid out of the estate.<sup>1</sup> If a debt is due to the deceased by the next of kin, but is barred by limitation, it has been held in England that an executor can retain a share, inasmuch as the debt still existed though only the remedy is barred.<sup>2</sup> This rule has also been followed in India.<sup>3</sup>

12. Court-fees. — A suit for administration is in the nature of a suit for an account and the plaint is chargeable with court-fee under Section 7 (iv) (f) of the Court-fees Act, 1870.<sup>1</sup> A creditor who comes in with a claim after a preliminary decree has been passed in the administration suit need not pay any court-fee on such claim.<sup>2</sup>

13. Appeal. — An order directing an account to be taken in an administration suit was not a decree under the old Code and was not appealable.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code, a preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken will of course be appealable under Section 96 of the Code.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" are new. See Note 8, infra.

2. Sub-rule (2) is new.

2. Pre-emption. — The right of pre-emption is the right of a person to purchase property before opportunity to purchase it is offered to others.<sup>1</sup> Such a right may, however, be defeated by waiver or acquiescence on the part of the claimant.<sup>2</sup>

The doctrine of pre-emption does not apply to execution sales, apparently because the would-be pre-emptor can, in such a case, as well have bid at the auction.<sup>3</sup>

The right of pre-emption arises only on a sale of immovable property.<sup>4</sup>

Where a plaintiff having a right to pre-empt joins with himself, in a suit for pre-emption, a stranger, he forfeits his right to pre-empt,<sup>5</sup> but not so where the other persons joined are members of the plaintiff's family.<sup>6</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

O. 20 R. 14
Notes 5-7

5. Pre-emption by contract. — Pre-emption can be claimed on the basis of a contract between the person claiming to pre-empt and the vendor, if the vendee has notice of such contract.<sup>1</sup> (See Transfer of Property Act, Section 40.)

Thus, a right of pre-emption in respect of a property may be conferred on a mortgagee thereof.<sup>2</sup> The price in such cases may or may not be fixed beforehand.<sup>3</sup> It has been held that the right cannot be enforced against an execution purchaser of the equity of redemption.<sup>4</sup>

6. Shall specify a day before which purchase-money shall be paid. — It is necessary under this rule that the decree should specify a day before which the purchase-money shall be paid.<sup>1</sup> It is not a compliance with the rule to say that the money should be paid within a certain period; the date by which the amount should be paid should be specified.<sup>2</sup>

Where the vendee has paid off encumbrances on the property the amount should be included in the "purchase money" unless he has paid off the encumbrance in bad faith or improvidently.<sup>3</sup>

7. Extension of time. — The general principles embodied in O. 20 R. 3 apply to pre-emption decrees under this rule and hence Section 148 does not enable the Court to enlarge the period fixed by the decree for paying the purchase-money.<sup>1</sup> But where the last day allowed to the plaintiff to deposit the purchase money is a holiday, the money may be deposited on the next court-day on general principles of law.<sup>2</sup>

Effect of appeal on time fixed for payment. — The mere presentation of an appeal does not operate as a stay of proceedings in the lower Court (Order 41 Rule 5). Hence, the time for payment fixed by a pre-emption decree is not extended by the fact that an appeal has been preferred against the decree,<sup>3</sup> though the Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, enlarge the time.<sup>4</sup> Where the appeal is dismissed or the decree of the lower Court is varied and the appellate decree is silent about the extension of time, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether the time fixed by the original decree is to be calculated from the date of the appellate decree. See Note 9 to Section 148 ante and the undermentioned case.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, the Appellate Court increases the sum to be paid by the plaintiff in a pre-emption suit and he deposits the excess amount ordered within a reasonable time after the appellate decree, the payment is a valid one.<sup>6</sup>

Notes 7-8

Effect of failure to deposit within the time allowed. — On the plaintiff's default in paying the purchase-money within the time allowed, the suit should be dismissed,<sup>7</sup> though the decree does not contain a specific provision to that effect.<sup>8</sup> But where the plaintiff has appealed against the very condition in the decree that he should pay the purchase-money within a certain period, the Appellate Court should not dismiss the suit simply on the ground of non-payment within the time so fixed.<sup>9</sup>

Where a suit for pre-emption by a son in his own individual capacity is dismissed owing to his failure to pay the purchase-money within the time allowed, a fresh suit by his father, for pre-emption, in assertion of his own individual right is not barred.<sup>10</sup>

8. Plaintiff's title, when accrues. — The pre-emptor's title to the property accrues from the date of the payment of the purchase-money into Court and not from the date of the sale or of the decree.<sup>1</sup> A registered instrument is not necessary for passing the title.<sup>2</sup> The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" have been newly inserted in this rule to make this clear and to supersede the opinion expressed by the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that a registered instrument is necessary for passing title to the pre-empted property.<sup>4</sup> It has been held that where, at the time of the deposit in Court, there are crops on the land, they also pass to the pre-emptor.<sup>5</sup>

Although the rule says that on payment of the purchase-money into Court the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, this does not apply to the following cases :

- (a) Where the property is in the possession of a usufructuary mortgagee.<sup>6</sup>
- (b) Where the pre-emptor is already in possession of the property.<sup>7</sup>

9. Payment into Court. — The payment of purchase-money into Court may be made in currency notes.<sup>1</sup> But Government promissory notes are not "money" and the deposit thereof is not valid.<sup>2</sup> A payment made out of Court to the vendee is sufficient compliance with the decree, provided the vendee certifies to the Court within the period allowed for payment the fact of his receipt of the money,<sup>3</sup> but not otherwise.<sup>4</sup>

A payment is not valid if it is not a payment of the full amount stated in the decree, however small may be the sum by which it falls short.<sup>5</sup>

Where the decree directs the payment of the purchase-money and costs within a specified time, the payment of the purchase-money alone within the time limited is not enough; the costs also must be deposited within that time.<sup>6</sup> But this is not so where, though costs are awarded, no time limit is fixed for their payment.<sup>7</sup>

The plaintiff does not forfeit his right of pre-emption by raising the purchase-money by a mortgage of the property sought to be pre-empted.<sup>8</sup>

On payment into Court the money stands to the credit of the vendee and the pre-emptor's rights are not affected by the fact that a creditor of his attaches the money and is allowed by the Court to remove it.<sup>9</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>10</sup>

10. Tender of money, if sufficient. — A tender of the purchase-money to the Court within the time limited is sufficient compliance with the decree, although, through the laxity of the Court officials or other such cause, the actual deposit is made

11. "On or before the day referred to." — See Note 7 above.

12. Right to rents and profits. — The rights of a pre-emptor are different from those of an ordinary purchaser. Under a pre-emption decree the right to possession of the property and the consequential right to mesne profits accrue to the pre-emptor only from the date when he pays the amount of the purchase-money finally declared by the Court. Till then the original purchaser retains possession and is entitled to the rents and profits.<sup>1</sup> As to whether the vendee is entitled to the crops on the land existing on the date of payment, see Note 8 above.

13. Vendor's title in pre-emption suits. — A pre-emptor is not entitled in a pre-emption suit to put the vendor to proof of his title to the property which he purports to sell. The principle of pre-emption is substitution. A pre-emptor is, therefore, bound to take the title which the vendee was ready to take.<sup>1</sup>

14. Set-off of costs against purchase-money. — The rule does not provide for cases where costs, instead of being awarded against the pre-emptor, were awarded in his favour by the decree. Under the doctrine of equitable set-off, he is entitled to deduct such costs when depositing the purchase-money.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that when the decree directs the purchase-money to be deposited within a specified time but does not require the costs awarded to the defendant to be deposited, the plaintiff is not bound to deposit such costs although he deducts from the purchase-money the costs awarded to him.<sup>2</sup>

15. Rival pre-emptors — Sub-rule (2). — Sub-rule (2) is new and prescribes the form of decree to be passed where there are rival pre-emptors. Under the old Code, Courts decided such cases on general principles suited to the emergencies of each case.<sup>1</sup> The present rule enables rival claimants to pre-emption to join as plaintiffs in a suit for pre-emption and to obtain in that suit a decision not only as to their right to pre-empt but also as to their rival claims.<sup>2</sup> But where the plaintiffs do not ask the Court to adjudicate upon their respective rights inter se, a joint decree may be passed and if the amount is deposited in compliance with the decree, the defendant has no concern in the way in which the property is to be shared by the plaintiffs; but the mere fact that a joint decree is passed in favour of all has not the necessary result of passing title to all the joint decree-holders even if only one of them pays the amount. In order to determine in what proportion the joint plaintiffs are to share the property, the circumstances under which the payment was made must in each case be enquired into.<sup>8</sup>

16. Appeal. — A plaintiff, who has obtained a decree for pre-emption conditional on his paying a certain sum within a certain period, may appeal against the decree whether or not he has deposited the money in Court within the time limited.<sup>1</sup> A vendee does not forfeit his right of appeal against a pre-emption decree merely because he has withdrawn the money deposited by the plaintiff.<sup>2</sup> A plaintiff depositing purchase-money in Court under a pre-emption decree is entitled to a refund of the amount on the reversal of the decree in appeal.<sup>3</sup> A decree with a condition that unless the purchase-money is paid within the time fixed the suit shall stand dismissed, is a complete decree and a subsequent order dismissing the suit is not a decree against which an appeal can be preferred.<sup>4</sup> Further, an order passed on an application for payment of the pre-emption money in compliance with a decree under Rule 14 is not appealable under Section 47 of the Code as it is not an order relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree.<sup>5</sup> adjudication of the specific rights of the parties. The words "may pass a preliminary decree" show that the passing of such a decree is in the judicial discretion of the Court. While, on the one hand, it will be an improper exercise of the discretion to pass a preliminary decree where the shares of the parties in, and the fact and date of dissolution of, the partnership are admitted,<sup>1</sup> on the other hand, where such facts are not admitted, the Court ought to pass a preliminary decree defining and declaring the rights of the parties before giving a final adjudication in the suit.<sup>2</sup> In Ramchunder Shaha v. Manick Chunder Banikya,<sup>3</sup> Pontifex, J., observed as follows :

"At the first hearing of the suit, really what the Court had to determine was, whether there had been a partnership, and what were its conditions; was it dissolved, or ought it to be dissolved; and who were the parties interested in the partnership, and in what shares; and upon determining these questions, it ought, in the first instance, to have directed that accounts should be taken as set forth in Form No. 192 (now Form No. 21, Appendix D), subject, of course, to any such alterations as the nature of the case might require. It is only after taking these accounts and obtaining the report of the officer of the Court, or, if there is no such officer, when the Judge himself has arrived at a decision on the accounts, that a final decree should be made according to Form No. 193 of the Fourth Schedule of the Code (now Form No. 22 of Appendix D)."

If, however, the Court has passed an order defining and declaring the said rights, the mere fact that no formal decree has been drawn up in those terms will be a mere irregularity not vitiating the trial.<sup>4</sup>

Under Section 265 of the Contract Act as it originally stood, a partner had to apply to the District Court to wind up the business of the firm to provide for the payments of its debts and to distribute the surplus according to the shares of the partners respectively, and there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a suit for such relief in the ordinary Court lay.<sup>5</sup> The Section was amended by the Contract Amendment Act (IV of 1886), and under that Section a suit for dissolution of partnership could be brought in the ordinary Courts like any other suit.<sup>6</sup> See now the Partnership Act (IX of 1932).

2. Preliminary decree directing the taking of accounts.—Besides making the declarations as to the rights of the parties referred to in Note 1 above, the Court should, in the preliminary decree, direct an account to be taken of the dealings and transactions of the partnership, of the credits, property and effects due and belonging to it, and should, if need be, appoint a receiver for realising the partnership property.<sup>1</sup>

As to the nature of the rights conferred by such a decree, see the undermentioned case.<sup>2</sup> Although it is desirable that the preliminary decree should state who is to be the accounting party, yet the Court can, even subsequently, decide the question.<sup>3</sup>

The ordinary form for the preliminary decree is given as Form No. 21 in Appendix D. This form should ordinarily be followed unless there is any special reason for modifying it. The form is applicable also where the Court is asked to declare that a dissolution has taken place and an account is still required.<sup>4</sup>

3. Mode of taking accounts.—The Court may itself take the accounts of the partnership or appoint a commissioner for the purpose. In the latter case the Court may give directions, if any are required, as to the mode of taking accounts. It may call upon either party to furnish a statement of particulars relating to the business and its transactions.<sup>1</sup> All the account books and other documents relating to the partnership and in the possession of either party should be produced.<sup>2</sup> Sufficient time should be given to the parties for the purpose and evidence should be taken if necessary.<sup>3</sup> A commissioner taking accounts has no power to decide questions relating to the terms of the partnership, its duration or the shares of the partners.<sup>4</sup> In a suit for dissolution of partnership and the settlement of accounts, ordinarily the partnership business must be wound up so that all questions between the parties in respect of the partnership may be finally decided, and a procedure which leaves outstanding such questions or is calculated to give rise to fresh questions is not proper.<sup>5</sup>

As to the power of the Court to go into the accounts of firm anterior to a date on which there has been a settlement of accounts between the parties, see the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup>

4. "Fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved."—The preliminary decree should fix a day on which the partnership should stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved. The fixing of the day is a judicial act and should be done arbitrarily. Ordinarily, if a notice of dissolution has been given by one of the partners, the dissolution will be declared as and from that date.<sup>1</sup> Otherwise and in the absence of any other circumstance, the dissolution should be ordered to date from the plaint.<sup>2</sup> It can be ordered to date from the judgment only in exceptional cases.<sup>3</sup>

5. Defendant's right to what is found due to him.—If, on the taking of accounts, it is found that any balance is due to the defendant, the Court can pass a decree in his favour for the amount.<sup>1</sup>

6. Court-fee in partnership suits. — The plaint or memorandum of appeal in a partnership suit is chargeable with an ad valorem court-fee, the valuation being fixed under Section 7, clause (iv) (f) of the Court-fees Act.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 6-8

The defendant in such a suit is not bound either to value his claim or to pay any court-fee. If, however, on the taking of accounts any amount is found due to him, he is bound to pay court-fee thereon before a decree for the amount is passed in his favour.<sup>2</sup>

7. Appeal. — An appeal lies from a preliminary decree passed under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But mere directions given to the commissioner in the matter of taking accounts are not decrees and are not appealable.<sup>2</sup>

8. Letters Patent Appeal. — An order appointing the Official Receiver as the receiver in a partnership suit was held by the Rangoon High Court to be a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 13 of the Letters Patent and as such appealable.<sup>1</sup> The same High Court has, however, held that orders by way of directions to the commissioner in the matter of taking accounts are not "judgments" within the meaning of the said Clause of the Letters Patent and hence not appealable.<sup>2</sup>

R. 16. [S. 215A.] In a suit for an account of pecuniary transactions between a principal and an agent, and in any other suit not hereinbefore provided for, where it is necessary, in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such accounts to be taken as it thinks fit.

1. Scope of the Rule.— The rule applies to the following kinds of suits, viz. —

- (1) suits for accounts between principal and agent;<sup>1</sup>
- (2) suits in which plaintiff has a right to a rendition of accounts from the defendant;<sup>2</sup> and
- (3) suits in which it is necessary that an account should be taken in order to ascertain the amount due to or from any party.<sup>3</sup>

The purpose of a preliminary decree in such suits is merely to ascertain whether the defendant is liable to account to the plaintiff,<sup>4</sup> and the preliminary judgment, therefore, need not be exhaustive or specify all details.<sup>5</sup>

2. "Shall pass a preliminary decree."— Where the plaintiff has established that the defendant was his agent<sup>1</sup> or that the defendant is otherwise liable to account to him,<sup>2</sup> it is the duty of the Court to pass a preliminary decree directing an account to be taken of the transactions between the parties. But no such decree need be passed if the liability to account is not established,<sup>3</sup> or if the necessity for accounts is not made out.<sup>4</sup>

A preliminary decree in a suit contemplated by this rule finally declares the liability of the defendant for such sum as may be found due<sup>5</sup> but does not terminate the suit.<sup>6</sup>

In a suit for accounts, it is a better practice for the Court to express its directions specifically in the decree rather than to insert a general reference to its judgment in the decree.<sup>7</sup>

The proceedings under a preliminary decree for accounts to obtain a final decree for money are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution.<sup>8</sup>

| 1. Scope of the Rule.2. Settled accounts. | 3. Omission to give directions in preliminary decree. |

1. Scope of the Rule.—The rule is new and corresponds to O. 33 R. 3 of the Rules of the Supreme Court in England. It, however, enacts no new provision of law but only recognises an already existing practice in the matter of taking accounts. It is in the discretion of the Court to give special directions or not under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Under the English practice the Court may treat the account books as prima facie evidence in partnership cases.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, account books kept by a trustee may be ordered to be taken as prima facie evidence against the cestui que trust if the latter has had access to these books.<sup>3</sup> In other cases special directions should be obtained from the Court,<sup>4</sup> and such directions will be given if the ordinary proof of accounts is not available owing to lapse of time or other causes,<sup>5</sup> or if the accounts are beyond the control of the accounting party.<sup>6</sup>

2. Settled accounts.—In proceedings by way of taking accounts, a settled account may be set up or pleaded in the absence of any special directions in the matter, in the preliminary decree.<sup>1</sup>

3. Omission to give directions in preliminary decree.—Though the necessary directions in the matter of taking accounts are generally given in the preliminary decree, yet the omission of such directions in the decree will only amount to a mere irregularity.<sup>1</sup> In fact this rule contemplates such directions being given subsequently also.

Their Lordships of the Privy Council have held that in a decree directing accounts to be taken, it is a better practice for the Court to express its directions specifically in the decree rather than to insert a general reference to its judgment in the decree.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — Sub-rule (1) refers to partition decrees relating to an "estate assessed to Government revenue" referred to in Section 54 of the Code, while sub-rule (2) deals with partition decrees relating to any other immovable property or to moveable property. In the former case the rule does not contemplate the passing of a preliminary and of a final decree.<sup>1</sup> The Court has merely to pass a decree declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property, the actual partition so as to affect the Government revenue, being left to be made by the Collector.<sup>2</sup> In the latter case, i. e., a case coming under sub-rule (2), the Court may pass a preliminary decree if the separation cannot be made conveniently without further inquiry : see Note 5, infra. Where the decree does not contain any direction as required by sub-rule (1), the decree is defective, and unless the defect is rectified the parties cannot ask for the transmission of the proceedings to the Collector.<sup>3</sup>

Where in a suit for partition, a decree has been passed under sub-rule (1), an application to the Court by the parties for the transmission of the papers to the Collector is not one for execution.<sup>4</sup>

2. Jurisdiction of Court and Collector. — See Section 54, Note 7, ante. As has been seen in that Note, where the Collector disregards the directions in the decree, the Court has the power to interfere and set right his action.<sup>1</sup>

3. Moveable property. — Where in a suit for partition of moveable property the plaintiff files a list of properties, and the defendant either denies that they are liable to partition or that they exist, it is incumbent on the Court, before passing a preliminary decree, to determine the following points<sup>1</sup>—

- (1) whether such properties exist, and if so in whose possession ;
- (2) whether they are partible ; and
- (3) what is their value.

4. Joint Hindu family property. — See the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

5. Preliminary decree. — In cases coming under sub-rule (2), the Court may pass a preliminary decree. It is not obligatory to do so in every case. For instance, it is not necessary to pass a preliminary decree if the shares can be ascertained without difficulty in execution.<sup>1</sup> But where a partition cannot be conveniently made without further enquiry, a preliminary decree may be passed declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property leaving the actual partition to be made later on.<sup>2</sup> It has been held that it would be premature to decide in the preliminary decree whether certain property in the defendant's possession about which partition is claimed is available for partition or not, and that the question should be left to be decided at the enquiry subsequent to the preliminary decree.<sup>3</sup> After a preliminary decree has been passed in a partition suit, the proper course for the plaintiff desiring an absolute separation of his share is to apply for a final decree and not to bring a fresh suit for that purpose.<sup>4</sup> There is no limitation for such an application inasmuch as the rule does not contemplate any such application being made by the party, and it is the duty of the Court to pass the final decree after the necessary enquiries.<sup>5</sup> In fact the Court cannot, after a preliminary decree has been passed in a partition suit, dismiss it for default in depositing the fee for a commissioner to make a final partition ; all that the Court can do in such a case is to adjourn the proceedings sine die.<sup>6</sup>

Any party to the suit whose interest it is that further proceedings be taken, may move the Court to pass a final decree ; but ordinarily it is the plaintiff who moves.<sup>7</sup>

Under the old Code it was not necessary to pass first a preliminary decree and then a final decree in a partition suit.<sup>8</sup> It was, however, usual to pass an interlocutory order declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property and then a decree. See the undermentioned cases.<sup>9</sup> As to whether there can be more than one

6. "Giving such further directions." — These words include also directions for inquiry as to future mesne profits or interest, and it is in the preliminary decree that such directions should be given. Where such decree is silent as to future mesne profits or interest, can the final decree award the same or direct an inquiry in respect of the same? As regards mesne profits it has been held that the final decree cannot award it or direct an enquiry in respect of it. The reason is that Rule 12 and this rule should be read together and inasmuch as, under Rule 12, the final decree can only provide for mesne profits where an inquiry into the same has been directed by the preliminary decree, the same principle will also apply to cases coming under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But it has been held by the Madras High Court in a recent decision<sup>2</sup> that a Court can pass a final decree for mesne profits in a partition suit although there has been no preliminary decree in respect of such profits. It has also been held by the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>3</sup> that where a preliminary decree passed on compromise between the parties in a suit for partition omits to make any mention of mesne profits, still it is open to the Court to direct an enquiry into mesne profits where it finds that the intention of both the parties is that mesne profits should be paid to each other. In any case where the final decree directs such an enquiry, there is no want of jurisdiction and the executing Court cannot go behind it.<sup>4</sup> As to the maintainability of a separate suit for mesne profits where the decree in the partition suit is silent on the point, see Section 11, Note 125 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>5</sup>

As regards interest, where the preliminary decree in a partition suit directs accounts to be taken but is silent as to interest, it has been held by the Bombay High Court<sup>6</sup> that it is competent to the Court to award by its final decree, interest in a proper case. The learned Judges base their decisions on certain English cases, according to which a Court has "power on further directions to order payment of interest on a sum found due from a defendant although the decree declaring the liability contains no direction for payment of interest or the statement of claim does not ask for it." It was also pointed out that the case of taking an account under the present rule is similar to the case of taking an account in an administration suit under O. 20 R. 13 and that, if the forms of preliminary and final decrees in administration suits (Appendix D, Forms 17 and 18) are looked at, it will be clear that the Legislature does recognize that even where the preliminary decree does not contain any direction as to interest, yet, in the final decree, interest may be awarded.

7. Final decree. — Where a preliminary decree for partition has been passed under this rule, the decree cannot be made effective without a final decree.<sup>1</sup> Where, subsequent to the preliminary decree, one of the co-sharers dies and the other parties become entitled to increased shares, the final decree may award them the increased shares.<sup>2</sup> In working out preliminary decrees for partition, the Court may, instead of making an actual division of all the property, give one coparcener a charge over the share of another for any difference in favour of the former.<sup>3</sup> A decree for partition is a joint decree in favour of all the shareholders and therefore execution proceedings taken by one of them are sufficient to keep the decree alive in favour of all.<sup>4</sup> It has been held by the Patna High Court<sup>5</sup> that where, along with the preliminary decree in a partition suit the Court passes an executable order for costs in favour of the plaintiff, it is open to the latter to apply to have such order incorporated in the final decree although limitation for the execution of such order independently may have expired. It has been held that after a preliminary decree has been passed, it is always open to the parties before the final decree, upon proper procedure, to bring in further property for partition.<sup>6</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>7</sup>

8. Stamp for final decree. — A final decree for partition is an instrument of partition within Section 2 (15) of the Stamp Act, and is chargeable with stamp duty under Schedule I, Article 45 of that Act.<sup>1</sup>

9. Appeal. — Under the present Code a preliminary decree in a partition suit is appealable under Section 96 and, if not appealed against, cannot be questioned in the appeal from the final decree [vide Sections 2 (2), 96 and 97]. Under the old Code there was only one decree in a partition suit though the decree might be preceded by an interlocutory order declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property. As to the appealability of such order and other connected questions under the old Code, see the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> which are not of any practical

1. "Where defendant has been allowed a set-off."—The rule applies only where the defendant has been allowed a "set-off" against the plaintiff's claim; and not in any other case. Thus, the rule does not apply to a case where in determining the defendant's liability for mesne profits deductions are made for costs or expenses of cultivation.<sup>1</sup>

2. Appeal from decree relating to set-off. — Under the second paragraph of Section 216 of the old Code corresponding to sub-rule (2) of the present rule, the forum of appeal in relation to the defendant's claim of set-off depended upon the sum claimed by him and not upon the valuation of the suit made by the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> This has been amended under the present rule so as to give effect to the view that appeals from decrees relating to set-off should lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim of the plaintiff would lie.<sup>3</sup>

A preliminary order disposing of a claim of set-off made by the defendant is not a decree and is not appealable by itself but can be attacked in an appeal from the decree.<sup>3</sup>

3. Decree for defendant claiming set-off. — Where the amount due to the defendant by the plaintiff is found to exceed that due to the plaintiff by the defendant, the Court may not only dismiss the suit, but may pass a decree in favour of the defendant against the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup>

The question has arisen as to whether a decree may be passed in favour of the defendant in a suit for accounts, where, on taking accounts, it is found that the balance is in defendant's favour. In such a case, it was observed by Phillips, J., in the undermentioned Madras case<sup>2</sup> that there is really no "set-off" pleaded to which the present rule may apply. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>3</sup> and Calcutta<sup>4</sup> have, on the other hand, held that a decree may be passed in favour of the defendant in such a case under O. 20 Rr. 15 and 16. In one of the Calcutta cases<sup>5</sup> it was even said that it was a case of equitable set-off and that Rule 19 itself might apply.

4. Applicability of Rule to equitable set-off—Sub-rule (3).—Order 8 Rule 6 provides only for a legal set-off being allowed. But the present rule applies also to equitable set-off and provides for a decree being passed giving effect to such set-off.<sup>1</sup> As to the distinction between the two types of claims, see Notes under Order 8 Rule 6. from such liability on the ground that the decree-holder is dead.<sup>2</sup>

The rule does not apply to decrees that are inexecutable as where a compromise decree provides that on default in payment, the decree-holder shall have the right to file a suit.<sup>3</sup> Nor does the rule apply to money payable under an order, though such orders are executable, under the provisions of Section 36, like decrees. Thus, where a party is ordered to pay the costs of the day to the opposite side, he cannot deposit the costs in Court under this rule.<sup>4</sup> Under Section 11 of the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920), the provisions of the Code relating to execution of decrees are applicable to execution of orders under that Act.

4. Payment into Court. — Where a payment under a decree has to be made only into Court, as in the case of pre-emption decrees under O. 20 R. 14, and the Court is closed on the last day for making such payment, the maxim lex non cogit ad impossibilia<sup>1</sup> will apply and the payment can be made on the day the Court re-opens.<sup>2</sup> It has been held by all the High Courts except the High Court of Allahabad that the same rule will apply even where the decree amount may be paid to the decree-holder or into Court, inasmuch as the judgment-debtor is entitled to choose the method of payment.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Allahabad<sup>4</sup> is of the opinion that in such cases the judgment-debtor cannot get the time for payment extended by choosing to pay the amount only in Court.

An arbitrator is not an officer of the Court and a payment to him is not a payment into Court.<sup>5</sup> Where a receiver appointed in an administration suit was not authorized to receive certain payments to be made by X but the latter made the payments to the receiver who misappropriated them, it was held by the Privy Council that X was not discharged from liability, by reason of such payments.<sup>6</sup>

The words "all money payable under a decree" do not mean the entire amount payable under the decree. Therefore, even if a portion of the decretal amount is paid into Court, it will be a valid payment and the decree-holder can take out execution only for the balance.<sup>7</sup>

5. Who should make payment. — A payment into Court under this rule can be made only by the judgment-debtor, his agent, or his representative. A payment made by a stranger will not have the effect of satisfying the decree unless the decree-holder consents thereto.<sup>1</sup> But a payment made by the mortgagee of a party liable to pay is effective, though he is not a party to the suit.<sup>2</sup> In execution of a decree for money obtained by A against B, a receiver was appointed to collect certain amounts due to B by C. C paid the amount into the hands of the receiver who absconded and did not pay the money into Court. It was held that the payment by C to the receiver did not discharge the judgment-debtor from liability under the decree.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 5-9

6. Effect of payment. — A payment into Court towards a decree debt operates as a discharge of the decree debt to that extent<sup>1</sup> and where interest has been awarded on the decree amount, it will cease to run on the sum deposited.<sup>2</sup> But if, after having made the payment, the judgment-debtor prevents the sum reaching the hands of the decree-holder, he will be liable for interest until the money becomes available to the decree-holder.<sup>3</sup>

If money is paid into Court under process of execution and the decree-holder or his agent is present, the Court should cause it to be paid to him immediately.<sup>4</sup>

7. Decree directing payment to decree-holder. — Even where the decree directs the payment to be made to the decree-holder, payment into Court is a valid compliance with the decree<sup>1</sup> unless perhaps the Court directs that payment should not be made otherwise than by payment to the decree-holder.<sup>2</sup>

8. Payment out of Court to decree-holder. — A payment made to the decree-holder out of Court also discharges the decree.<sup>1</sup> But the decree-holder is not bound to accept a sum in part satisfaction of his decree and the refusal to receive it will not deprive him of his right to interest.<sup>2</sup> Where a payment out of Court is made through post before a certain fixed date but does not reach the decree-holder within that date, the payment is not effective.<sup>3</sup>

The language of the rule is only permissive and does not prohibit a payment to an agent or representative of the decree-holder, and hence a payment out of Court may be made to the decree-holder's agent or representative, or in the case of members of a Hindu joint family, to the manager of the family.<sup>4</sup>

The term "decree-holder" in clause (b) of this rule used in the singular includes the plural also.<sup>5</sup> Where, therefore, the decree is in favour of two or more persons jointly, a payment out of Court, in order to be binding on all, must be made to all the joint decree-holders.<sup>6</sup> See also Notes to Order 21 Rule 15.

9. Notice of payment. — The question of notice of payment into Court to the decree-holder is material only where the decree awards interest. Where no interest has been awarded by the decree and the decretal amount is paid into Court, it operates as a discharge of the decree, even if no notice is given to the decree-holder.<sup>1</sup> But if the decree awards interest, then the decree-holder is entitled to interest till the date of

1. In sub-rule (1) after the words "payable under a decree" the words "of any kind" have been added. See Note 4, infra.

2. The words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" which occurred in the old Code in sub-rule (3) after the word "recognized" have been omitted. See Note 27, infra.

3. The words "or if any payment is made in pursuance of an agreement of the nature mentioned in Section 257A" after the words "to the satisfaction of the decree-holder" have been omitted. Section 257A of the old Code has also been omitted. It ran as follows:

"Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment debt shall be void unless it is made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable.

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment debt, which provides for the payment, directly or indirectly, of any sum in excess of the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void unless it is made with the like sanction.

Notes 1-2

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of the Section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment debt; and the surplus, if any, shall be recoverable by the judgment-debtor."

The omission of Section 257A from the present Code renders the under-mentioned decisions<sup>1</sup> now merely of academic interest. The effect of the omission is that the legality of such arrangements between parties after decree must be tested like other agreements.<sup>2</sup>

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — The object of this rule is to ensure that the Court executing the decree shall not be troubled with any disputes between the parties with regard to any payment or adjustment unless the same has been duly certified or recorded.<sup>1</sup> Sub-rule (1) contemplates a certification by the decree-holder and a record by the Court of the payment or adjustment; sub-rule (2) contemplates an application by the judgment-debtor. In this case notice is to be given to the decree-holder and the Court should give a judicial decision whether the payment or adjustment should be recorded as certified.<sup>2</sup> Lastly, sub-rule (3) imposes a bar upon the Court executing the decree and prevents it from recognising any payment or adjustment which has not been certified or recorded as certified as required by the rule.<sup>3</sup>

The prohibition under sub-rule (3) will apply only when the parties to a transaction entered into for the purpose of satisfying or adjusting a decree stand to one another, at the date of such transaction, in the relation of judgment-debtor and judgment-creditor.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where A, a transferee decree-holder, applied for execution of the decree and B, the judgment-debtor, objected on the ground that he had transferred certain immovable property to A in consideration of his paying the judgment debt to the original decree-holder and that A having discharged the debt had got the decree transferred to himself, instead of entering up satisfaction of the decree and had fraudulently applied for execution, it was held that there must be an enquiry into the truth of B's allegations.<sup>5</sup> But there is nothing in the wording of this rule to limit the payment to the decree-holder only. Thus, where a compromise decree directed the payment of money to a third party and the payment was not certified to the Court, it was held that it could not be relied upon in execution.<sup>6</sup>

This rule does not apply to a compromise which is entered into between the parties to a mortgage suit after a final decree, and which is pleaded in bar of an application for a personal decree against the mortgagor under O. 34 R. 6. The reason is that there is no adjustment of the mortgage decree in such a case; nor is the Court to which the application for personal decree is made, a Court executing the mortgage decree.<sup>7</sup>

Section 71 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Bombay) expressly excludes the application of sub-rule (3) of this rule to payments out of Court made in proceedings under the Act.<sup>8</sup> As to whether this rule applies to proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>9</sup> Sub-rule (3) of this rule has been repealed, so far as the Punjab is concerned, by Section 36 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, VII of 1934.<sup>10</sup> Section 80 of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) deals with certification under this rule.

This rule clearly contemplates a stage in the execution proceedings when the matter lies only between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder and when no other interests have come into being. When once a sale in execution has been effected, a third party's interest intervenes which cannot be disregarded. Therefore, after a sale is duly held the Court cannot refuse to confirm the sale on the ground that the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor say that the decree has been satisfied out of Court, and the only method by which the sale can be set aside is by the procedure prescribed in O. 21 R. 89.<sup>11</sup> But, it has been held that where the adjustment has been made before the sale and an application for recording the adjustment is made after the sale, the adjustment may be recorded and the sale may be set aside.<sup>12</sup>

The principle that an adjustment cannot be recorded under this rule to the detriment of a third party was applied in the undermentioned case<sup>13</sup> in which it was held that an adjustment cannot be recorded under this rule when such recording will defeat the rights of the Government to court-fees under O. 33 R. 10. See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>14</sup> After a decree has been satisfied and the decree-holder has certified such satisfaction, there is no subsisting decree and a sale held in ignorance of the satisfaction is void and liable to be set aside.<sup>15</sup> But if the satisfaction is not certified, the sale is not vitiated and cannot be impeached.<sup>16</sup>

This rule applies only to the adjustment of a decree or order. Hence it does not apply to the adjustment of a claim for restitution under Section 144 before such claim is allowed by the Court.<sup>17</sup>

The executing Court is not precluded from recognizing a compromise entered into between the parties after the decree, though such a compromise does not amount to an adjustment of the decree.<sup>18</sup>

3. "Money payable under a decree." — A mortgage decree is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule even though it contains a further direction for the sale of the mortgaged properties on default of payment. The adjustment of such a decree out of Court must be certified under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But where a mortgagee decree-holder is in possession of the mortgaged properties under the original contract of mortgage or by virtue of the terms of the decree, income received by the mortgagee from the mortgaged property is not "money payable under a decree" and does not therefore require to be certified.<sup>2</sup> Where, in a suit for possession by A against B, his tenant who set up a right to hold the land under a mirasi tenure, the Court declared in favour of B and directed payment of rent as before, it was held that rents paid by B to A out of Court were not "moneys payable under the decree".<sup>3</sup>

The words "money payable under a decree" do not mean any money which the party may pay if he chooses, but money which is recoverable by a party in execution against the party liable to pay it. Thus, where a decree merely provided that if one party paid within a certain time a certain sum of money to the other party, the latter was to reconvey certain property to the former and that if default was made in payment, the latter was to enjoy the property with absolute rights, it was held that it was not a decree under which payment of money could be compelled in execution, and that this rule did not apply, so as to bar the Court from recognizing an uncertified adjustment out of Court.<sup>4</sup>

As to adjustments or payments made between the dates of preliminary and final decrees in mortgage suits, see Order 34 Rule 5, Note 14.

An award under the Arbitration Act when filed in Court is a decree for the purposes of Section 47 of the Code and this rule consequently applies to adjustments of such awards.<sup>5</sup>

4. "Decree of any kind." — Under the old Code, the High Court of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> and the Chief Court of Punjab<sup>2</sup> held that Section 258 of that Code applied to any kind of decree and not merely to money decrees. The High Court of Madras,<sup>3</sup> on the contrary, held that Section 258 was applicable only to decrees under which money is payable and not to other kinds of decrees. Under the present Code, the High Courts of Bombay,<sup>4</sup> Calcutta,<sup>5</sup> Lahore<sup>6</sup> and Patna<sup>7</sup> have held that the addition of the words "of any kind" after the word "decree" in sub-rule (1) makes it clear that the provisions of this rule are not confined to money decrees but apply to every kind of decree.

The High Court of Madras<sup>8</sup> has held that the effect of the change is not to make the rule applicable to all kinds of decrees, whatever be the nature of the relief granted, but that the rule applies only to cases where money is payable under the decree, whether there are other reliefs or not, inasmuch as the words "the decree is otherwise . . . ." can only mean the decree under which any money is payable. The effect of the additional words according to that High Court is that where the decree provides for payment of money as well as other reliefs, such as possession or partition of immovable property, an adjustment of such a decree cannot be recognized unless certified in the manner provided by this rule.<sup>9</sup>

5. "Is paid out of Court." — This rule deals only with voluntary payment out of Court. Where a judgment-debtor pays the amount decreed to the officer of the Court under pressure of process, the payment does not require to be certified under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

6. "Or the decree is otherwise adjusted." — An adjustment of a decree is an agreement which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or in part, and results in a satisfaction of the whole or a portion of the decree in respect of the particular relief or reliefs granted by the decree.<sup>1</sup> But a transaction by which the parties agree to vary the mode by which the reliefs granted by the decree are to be realised in execution in that entered into between the parties can be enforced in execution is, it is submitted, not correct. It is not necessary that the judgment-debtor must have carried out all the terms of the arrangements made by him with the decree-holder; a completed contract by which he promises to do something at a future date can be accepted by the decree-holder as a legal and immediate adjustment in satisfaction of his decree.<sup>6</sup> But an inchoate agreement, which if completed would bar the execution of the decree, cannot be pleaded as an adjustment within the meaning of this rule.<sup>7</sup> The reason is that an inchoate agreement is an agreement not yet concluded by the parties and therefore the judgment-debtor cannot claim that the decree against him has been adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder while the matter is still in the stage of negotiation. Similarly, where the decree-holder has agreed to accept the doing of certain acts by the judgment-debtor as satisfaction of the decree, the adjustment is not complete till such acts are done.<sup>8</sup>

There is no question of the "adjustment" of a decree when it is transferred to one of the judgment-debtors.<sup>9</sup>

Where there is a dispute as to whether a decree has or has not been adjusted by a compromise, the executing Court will have to determine whether there was a compromise, whether the compromise amounted to an adjustment and what the effect of the adjustment is on the decree.<sup>10</sup>

The adjustment contemplated by this rule is one to the satisfaction of the decree-holder. Hence, the acceptance of the decree-holder is necessary for an adjustment under this rule.<sup>11</sup> An arrangement which, although not consented to by the decree-holder, is binding upon him by operation of law cannot be an adjustment under this rule.<sup>12</sup>

Notes 6-9

The question whether an executing Court can entertain an objection to the execution of the decree based on an arrangement between the parties prior to the decree has already been discussed in Section 47, Note 31, ante. An adjustment of a decree pending an appeal from it is not a 'pre-decree' arrangement but an 'adjustment' within the meaning of this rule.<sup>13</sup>

See also Section 47 Note 41.

7. Adjustment in part.—A decree may be adjusted in part and the judgment-debtor is entitled to apply for a certificate of part satisfaction.<sup>1</sup> Where there is a money decree against two or more defendants, an agreement discharging one or some only of the judgment-debtors is an adjustment of the decree in part and should be certified.<sup>2</sup>

Where a decree has been adjusted in part, it can be executed as to the remaining portion.<sup>3</sup>

8. Oral adjustments.—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay, Calcutta, Lahore and Patna and by the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Nagpur and Sind that evidence to prove an oral adjustment subsequent to the decree is not inadmissible by reason of Section 92 of the Evidence Act.<sup>1</sup> They proceed on the view that the words "as between the parties to any such instrument" in that Section suggest that the Section applies to dispositive documents between contracting parties and that a decree is not an "instrument" between parties in the sense in which that expression is used in that Section. But the High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> has held that Section 92 of the Evidence Act is not confined in its operation to dispositive instruments but applies to decrees also and that therefore no evidence in proof of an oral agreement in adjustment of the decree is admissible.

9. When and with whom payment or adjustment should be made.—The adjustment under this rule must be to the satisfaction of the decree-holder and, therefore, an adjustment to which the decree-holder is not a party cannot be recorded by the executing Court.<sup>1</sup> The term "decree-holder" in this rule includes his assignee and the latter can certify a payment even before his transfer is recognized under O. 21, R. 16.<sup>2</sup> The judgment-debtor also can apply to record a payment made by him to the transferee.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that it is the transfer and not the Court's recognition that passes the title to the decree. But the contrary view has been taken in the under-mentioned decisions<sup>4</sup> in which it has been held that until the transfer of the decree is recognized under O. 21 R. 16, the transferee is not a decree-holder. Where an order recognizing the transfer of a decree is cancelled and before the order of cancellation is set aside in appeal the judgment-debtor pays the decretal amount to the original decree-holder, the payment is binding on the transferee decree-holder.<sup>5</sup>

A judgment-creditor has a right to absolve his judgment-debtor from liability at any time before other persons have acquired a right to realize the debt. Therefore, after a decree has been certified in Court as having been satisfied, it is not open to any creditor of the decree-holder to attach the decree on the ground that the satisfaction was certified collusively in order to defraud his creditors.<sup>6</sup> There is also nothing in this rule to prevent the holder of a decree which is attached, to enter satisfaction of his decree after the attachment, if the payment or adjustment had been made before the attachment.<sup>7</sup> As to the validity of payments or adjustment made after attachment of the decree, see Notes to Order 21 Rule 53.

10. Payment to one of several joint decree-holders. — See Notes to O. 21, Rule 15, infra.

11. Adjustment by guardian of minor party. — The provisions of O. 32, R. 7 apply to a compromise entered into even after a decree has been passed, and an adjustment of a decree to which a minor is a party requires the sanction of the Court.<sup>1</sup> A payment or adjustment certified to the Court without the leave of the Court is not binding on a minor decree-holder and cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree.<sup>2</sup>

12. "The decree-holder shall certify." — It is the duty of the decree-holder to report to the Court any payment or adjustment made out of Court.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that when once a Court is seised of an application to enter up satisfaction of a decree, it is bound to make an enquiry and see whether the decree has been satisfied. The Court will not be justified in permitting the decree-holder to withdraw his petition.<sup>2</sup>

Where a judgment-debtor pays the amount due under the decree out of Court, he is not bound to wait till the decree-holder fails to certify the payment<sup>1</sup> or till the decree is actually drawn up,<sup>2</sup> but may himself inform the Court of such payment and apply for its being recorded as certified. Where such application is resisted by the decree-holder on the ground that no such payment or adjustment was made, the Court cannot straightway dismiss the application.<sup>3</sup> It is bound to investigate and decide any question upon which the parties may not be agreed, upon such materials as they may legally place before it.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the words "to show cause" do not mean merely to allege cause, nor even to make out that there is room for argument, but both to allege cause and to prove it to the satisfaction of the Court.<sup>5</sup>

The dismissal for default of an application under sub-rule (2) does not bar a fresh application by the judgment-debtor for the same purpose, and he is entitled to have an adjudication on the merits subject, of course, to any objection that may be open to the decree-holder.<sup>6</sup>

A certificate of payment or adjustment should be filed in the Court which has to execute the decree.<sup>7</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned cases<sup>8</sup> that, where an agreement or adjustment has been brought to the notice of the Appellate Court by the judgment-debtor when an appeal from the decree is pending before it and the same is not objected to by the decree-holder, there is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of sub-rule (2). The High Court of Madras<sup>9</sup> has dissented from this view and has held that the filing of a certificate of satisfaction in the wrong Court and obtaining an order recording it cannot be treated as legally valid. Where a decree has been transferred to another Court for execution, the transferee Court is the only Court which has the power to enquire into an application under this rule by the judgment-debtor.<sup>10</sup> A Collector to whom a decree is transferred for execution under Section 68 is not a "Court whose duty it is to execute the decree" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>11</sup>

But the surety cannot plead an uncertified satisfaction or adjustment by the judgment-debtor inasmuch as the latter himself could not have pleaded it and the surety cannot be in any better position.<sup>3</sup>

17. Certification, form of. —

Certification by decree-holder. — There is no particular form in which the decree-holder is required to certify a payment or adjustment.<sup>1</sup> The certification may be done orally,<sup>2</sup> or by statement made in a subsequent execution application,<sup>3</sup> or in a statement in answer to the objections of the judgment-debtor,<sup>4</sup> or in a petition filed by him,<sup>5</sup> or by way of admissions.<sup>6</sup> An intimation by him to the Court that the decree is satisfied is also a sufficient certification.<sup>7</sup> Where a decree for sale was passed in favour of a mortgagee in possession, but the decree failed to provide for the taking of accounts of the profits that might thereafter be received by the mortgagee, and the decree-holder intimated to the Court in his application for sale that the net profits should go in reduction of the decree amount, it was held by the High Court of Madras<sup>8</sup> that the application could be treated as an intention to certify adjustment of the decree and that an enquiry may be directed as to the amounts collected by him. The High Court of Bombay<sup>9</sup> has, however, held that a certification of payment or adjustment without specifying the amount of the payment or without mentioning the terms of the adjustment is not a sufficient compliance with the rule. The certification must be of payment of money due under the decree. Hence, an admission that certain sums of money were received coupled with a statement that they were received on account of interest not allowed by the decree itself but paid in consequence of a separate agreement entered into after the passing of the decree, does not amount to a certification within the meaning of this rule.<sup>10</sup>

Application by judgment-debtor. — An application by the judgment-debtor to certify a payment or adjustment cannot be said to comply with the rule where there is no prayer for the issue of a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified.<sup>11</sup>

According to the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>12</sup> Bombay<sup>13</sup> and Rangoon,<sup>14</sup> where a judgment-debtor contests an application for execution on the ground of payment or adjustment, the statement of objection can be treated as an application under sub-rule (2) provided it is made within 90 days of such payment or adjustment. The High Courts of Calcutta<sup>15</sup> and Madras<sup>16</sup> have, on the other hand, taken a contrary view and have held that to so treat the objection would be to ignore the express language of the rule. The Patna High Court held in the undermentioned decision<sup>17</sup> that an objection to execution can be treated as an application under sub-rule (2). But, in later decisions, the same High Court has held that that sub-rule only applies to cases where the judgment-debtor applies for the recording of satisfaction before the starting of execution proceedings against him and not where he sets up the contention of payment or adjustment, pending the execution proceedings.<sup>18</sup>

18. Limitation for certification.—The period of limitation for an application by the judgment-debtor under sub-rule (2) is 90 days from the time when the payment or adjustment was made (see Article 174, Limitation Act). Where a judgment-debtor alleges that the decree-holder had fraudulently kept him from exercising his right to apply under sub-rule (2) by promising that he would himself certify the payment or adjustment, the judgment-debtor cannot claim an extension of time under Section 18 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908).<sup>1</sup> The reason is that Section 18 does not deal with the exercise of the right to apply, but only to cases where a person has been fraudulently kept from the knowledge of his right. An order granting a time-barred application to record satisfaction of a decree is, however, not a nullity, but is valid and binding unless set aside in appeal or other appropriate proceedings.<sup>2</sup>

There is no express Article of the Limitation Act applicable to certification by the decree-holder. Such certification is not an application within the meaning of Article 181 of the Limitation Act and therefore can be made at any time.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 27, infra. In Shri Prakash Singh v. Allahabad Bank,<sup>4</sup> it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that even if the document by which the decree-holder certifies is styled as an application, and is in the form of a petition, it cannot alter the real nature of the procedure, and convert what is really no more than a certificate, into an application within the meaning of Article 181.

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Rangoon and the Chief Court of Oudh, following the decision of the Privy Council in Shri Prakash Singh's case, that a certification by the decree-holder is not an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution, within the meaning of Article 182, clause 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>5</sup> The High Court of Allahabad,<sup>6</sup> on the other hand, held that it is a step-in-aid of execution provided the payment or adjustment was actually made. But in a recent decision<sup>7</sup> the High Court of Allahabad also has followed the view of the above-mentioned High Courts and held that the prior decisions of that Court are no longer good law in view of the decision of the Privy Council in Shri Prakash Singh's case.

Although there is thus no period of limitation for a certification by the decree-holder under this rule, when once it is brought to the notice of the executing Court that a certain alleged payment or adjustment has not been certified or recorded under this rule, the Court must refuse to recognize such payment or adjustment and the defect cannot be cured by the decree-holder subsequently certifying the payment or adjustment.<sup>8</sup>

19. "Shall record the same."—Where a decree-holder certifies a payment or adjustment, the Court is bound to record it in accordance with his statement. It has no power to proceed to satisfy itself before recording the satisfaction that such statement is true.<sup>1</sup> But the judgment-debtor will be entitled to show when an application for execution is made that no such payment or adjustment was made or that if it was made, it did not operate to extend the period of limitation for execution.<sup>3</sup>

Where the payment or adjustment is pleaded by the judgment-debtor under sub-rule (2), the Court is not bound to record the same as certified without requiring proof of it merely because the decree-holder does not appear to show cause why it should not be recorded as certified.<sup>3</sup> After a payment or adjustment is recorded, it is not necessary that a fresh or amended decree should be drawn up.<sup>4</sup>

Sub-rule (3), which provides that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree, does not require that the payment or adjustment must be both certified and recorded. Thus, where a certificate by the decree-holder was not recorded by the Court as provided in this rule, the judgment-debtor does not lose his protection merely because the Court fails to perform the duty cast upon it to make the record.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 19-22

An order recording the adjustment of a decree, brought about by the fraud practised by one party upon another can be vacated under the inherent powers of the Court.<sup>6</sup> But the Court ought not to exercise such powers to vacate the order unless it is prejudicial to one of the parties.<sup>7</sup>

See also Note 2 supra.

20. Notice.—Sub-rule (1) does not contemplate the issue of a notice to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> But when the judgment-debtor applies under sub-rule (2), the Court is bound to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified.<sup>2</sup> An order allowing a certification without notice to the decree-holder is bad in law<sup>3</sup> and an application will lie to set aside such an ex parte order.<sup>4</sup>

21. Uncertified payment or adjustment not to be recognized by Court executing the decree.—The prohibition in sub-rule (3) against the recognition of an uncertified payment or adjustment is limited to a "Court executing the decree" and will not extend to a Court, which is not executing the decree, when dealing with such a matter.<sup>1</sup> The object of the prohibition is to compel the judgment-debtor to be careful to apply to the Court to have recorded as certified any payment he may have made on account of the decree, if he desires that it should be recognized by the executing Court as against the decree-holder executing the decree.<sup>2</sup>

Where the liability of the judgment-debtor under a decree is only a conditional one, as for instance, where a decree provides that the decree-holder is to execute the decree only in the event of the judgment-debtor failing to comply with a particular condition, it will be open to the latter to prove, where execution is taken out, that the condition has been complied with; sub-rule (3) has no application to such a case.<sup>3</sup>

22. "Court executing the decree."—The third clause of Section 258 of the Code of 1877 as well as Section 206 of the Code of 1859 provided that a payment or adjustment made out of Court shall not be recognized by "any Court executing the decree" unless it had been certified or recorded as certified.<sup>1</sup> Section 258 was amended in 1879 by Section 36 of Act XII of 1879 by omitting the words "executing the decree" after "any Court" and the Section as amended was re-enacted in the Code of 1882. This gave rise to a conflict of opinion as to the effect of the amendment. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>2</sup> Calcutta<sup>3</sup> and Madras<sup>4</sup> and the Chief Court of the Punjab<sup>5</sup> held that the amendment had not the effect of altering the law as it stood before the amendment and that an uncertified payment or adjustment could be recognized by a Court other than a Court executing the decree. A contrary view was taken by the High Court of Bombay.<sup>6</sup> Owing to this conflict of opinion the Section was again amended by Section 27 of the Amending Act VII of 1888 which again restricted the prohibition to the Court executing the decree, thus restoring the law to the state in which it was prior to the amendment of 1879.<sup>7</sup> The rule is now in the same form.

23. Court acting under O. 21 R. 16. — Can a judgment-debtor, who is debarred under this rule from pleading an adjustment of the decree with the decree-holder for failure to have it certified, nevertheless plead the same when opposing an application by the assignee of the decree under O. 21 R. 16? The High Court of Bombay<sup>1</sup> held that he can. The High Court of Madras also held the same view in the undermentioned decisions.<sup>2</sup> These cases proceed on the view that when an application is made under O. 21 R. 16 by a transferee decree-holder, it is heard by the Court as a Court which passed the decree and not as a Court which is executing the decree. The said Madras decisions have, however, now been overruled by a Full Bench decision<sup>3</sup> according to which the judgment-debtor cannot plead such an uncertified adjustment and evade the operation of this rule. This view is based on the ground that an application under O. 21 R. 16 is an application for execution and, therefore, the Court which passed the decree when dealing with such an application does not cease to be an executing Court as well. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>4</sup> Calcutta<sup>5</sup> and Rangoon<sup>6</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Nagpur<sup>7</sup> and Sind<sup>8</sup> have taken the same view. It was held that though the adjustment was not certified, the suit based upon it was maintainable.<sup>2</sup>

25. Suit by decree-holder based on uncertified payment or adjustment. — Where a judgment-debtor executed a bond in favour of the decree-holder in adjustment of the decree against him, it was held that, in a suit by the decree-holder upon the bond, the uncertified adjustment can be proved.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the adjustment of a decree out of Court, if not certified to the Court under this rule, is ineffectual only so far as the execution of the decree is concerned. Similarly, where the plaintiff brought a suit under O. 21 R. 63 to establish his right to certain attached property on the allegation that the property attached had been transferred to him in satisfaction of a decree held by him against the judgment-debtor, it was held that it was unnecessary that such transfer should be certified under the provisions of this rule.<sup>2</sup>

Rule 11 (e). Is B entitled to claim an investigation of the question under Section 47 ? The answer is, no. Although the question is one relating to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 47, it is taken out of the purview of that Section by virtue of the particular provision contained in this rule specifically dealing with such questions.<sup>1</sup>

27. Effect on limitation. — It has been already mentioned in Note 22 ante, that Section 258 of the old Code provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree as a payment or adjustment of the decree. Consequently it was held that such a payment could however be relied upon by a decree-holder for the purpose of extending the period of limitation for execution under Section 20 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> The words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" have now been omitted in the present rule with the result that the executing Court cannot recognise an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever.<sup>2</sup>

Now suppose a decree-holder makes an application for execution of his decree more than three years after the date of the decree or after the last starting point of limitation, and mentions in the application a part payment made by the judgment-debtor. Can the Court executing the decree recognize the payment, and hold that by virtue of such payment the decree is not time-barred? The High Courts of Madras,<sup>3</sup>

Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> Bombay,<sup>5</sup> Lahore,<sup>6</sup> Patna,<sup>7</sup> Rangoon<sup>8</sup> and Nagpur<sup>9</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>10</sup> have held that it will amount to a sufficient certificate and the payment can therefore be recognized, provided the payment is as a matter of fact made and provided also the application for execution is within three years of such payment (as otherwise Section 20 of the Limitation Act will not apply). The said decisions proceed on the view that nothing is prescribed in this rule as to the time within which or the manner in which the decree-holder must certify a payment or adjustment. See also Notes 17 and 18, supra. The High Court of Allahabad, on the other hand, held the contrary view in a series of cases. In one class of cases<sup>11</sup> it was held that this rule contemplates a formal proceeding consisting of two steps —

first, an application by the decree-holder informing the Court of the payment, and, secondly, a formal order of the Court recording the payment, and therefore a statement as to payment in an execution application is not such a certificate as is contemplated by this rule and would not save limitation. It was held in another class of cases<sup>12</sup> that where the decree will be time-barred if the payment sought to be certified by the decree-holder is ignored, such a payment cannot be certified. In a recent Full Bench ruling, however,<sup>13</sup> the same High Court has impliedly overruled these cases and fallen in line with the other Courts. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>14</sup> has followed the earlier view of the High Court of Allahabad. It is submitted that in view of the general trend of opinion, the said decision cannot be accepted as correct.

28. Operation as estoppel. — It is not open to the executing Court to enquire into the fact of payment or adjustment of a decree which has not been certified or recorded within the period allowed by law, on the ground that the decree-holder is estopped from denying such payment or adjustment.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that sub-rule (3) enacts a special law for a special purpose and the general law of estoppel cannot be allowed to override the special law.

29. Remedies of the judgment-debtor. — Where a judgment-debtor satisfies the decree by a payment or adjustment made out of Court, which is not certified to the Court in time, and the decree-holder applies for execution of the decree in spite of the satisfaction, what is the remedy of the judgment-debtor in such a case? It is clear that the judgment-debtor cannot maintain a suit for a declaration that the decree has been satisfied and is consequently incapable of execution.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that such questions relate to the satisfaction of the decree, a separate suit in respect of which is barred by Section 47. If the properties of the judgment-debtor are sold in execution in such circumstances, no separate suit will, for the same reason, lie to set aside the sale.<sup>2</sup> As to whether a suit for damages will lie against the decree-holder, see Note 30 below.

30. Suit for damages. — Where a decree-holder whose decree has been satisfied by payment out of Court fails to certify satisfaction to the Court and executes the decree and realises the money a second time, the judgment-debtor may sue him for the recovery of the money paid out of Court.<sup>1</sup> Such a suit will not be barred by Section 47 for the question in the suit, as observed by Turner, C. J., in Viraraghava v. Subbakkha, I. L. R. 5 Madras 397, "relates not to the execution of a decree, but to a contract which formed no subject of inquiry in the suit and could not form a subject of inquiry in execution of the decree."

The cause of action for the suit is failure of consideration or breach of an express or implied promise or of a statutory duty to certify the payment.

There is a difference of opinion as to when the cause of action for such a suit arises — whether it arises as soon as the application for execution is presented, or only after the amount is actually recovered in execution. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>2</sup> and Patna,<sup>3</sup> the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>4</sup> and the undermentioned decisions<sup>5</sup> of the High Court of Madras have held that the cause of action arises only when damage is actually sustained, that is, when the money is recovered a second time. In the undermentioned cases,<sup>6</sup> however, the High Court of Madras has held that the cause of action arises when the decree-holder fails to fulfil his duty and applies for execution, and that an execution need not actually be levied and money realised a second time before the suit can be maintained. Where the decree-holder has not applied for execution at all, nor realised anything over and above the payments alleged to have been made by the judgment-debtor towards the satisfaction of the decree, the judgment-debtor has no cause of action to sue the decree-holder merely because the payment out of Court has not been certified.<sup>7</sup>

Where the decree-holder transfers the decree after it is satisfied by an uncertified payment or adjustment and the assignee executes the decree, he is not liable to repay the decretal amount realised in execution of the decree, even though he has knowledge of the payment or adjustment.<sup>8</sup> The reason is that there is no privity of contract between the parties.

Where an application by the judgment-debtor under sub-rule (2) for recording a payment out of Court is dismissed by the executing Court on a consideration of the merits, the judgment-debtor cannot maintain a suit for recovery of the amount alleged to have been paid twice over, for, such a suit will be barred on general principles of res judicata.<sup>9</sup>

31. Restitution of uncertified payment on reversal of decree in appeal. — V obtained a decree against G for Rs. 89. G appealed against the decree and pending appeal made a payment of Rs. 60 to the decree-holder which was not certified to the Court. The decree was reversed in appeal and G applied for refund of the amount he had paid. It was held that G was entitled to recover on the ground that "the decree having been reversed, the payment, whether certified or not, could only be regarded as made without consideration and entitling the defendant to have it restored."<sup>1</sup>

32. Criminal proceedings. — Sub-rule (3) has no application to a case where a Criminal Court is investigating a charge under Section 210 of the Penal Code of fraudulently executing a decree.<sup>1</sup> The prohibition in sub-rule (3) only means that the Court cannot consider the alleged adjustment in the course of the execution of the decree in question. The sub-rule does not prohibit the Court executing the decree from holding an enquiry under Section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code into an alleged payment or adjustment with a view to file a complaint against the decree-holder for an offence under Section 210, Penal Code.<sup>2</sup> Any other interpretation would make Section 210, Penal Code, a mere nullity and there could never be any prosecution for such an offence. Where, on the objection of the judgment-debtor, the Court dismisses an application for execution on the ground that the decree has been satisfied by a payment out of Court, the decree-holder is not guilty of an offence under Section 210, Penal Code, because the decree has not been caused to be executed.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 32-33

33. Appeal and revision. — An order on an application by the judgment-debtor under sub-rule (2) recording or refusing to record, as certified, a payment or adjustment made out of Court, is the determination of a question between the parties relating to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 47 and hence, is appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> No appeal lies against an order refusing to set aside a dismissal of an application for default<sup>2</sup> or an order refusing to review an order rejecting an application under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree-holder certifies a payment made out of Court, but the Court in spite of it orders execution to proceed on the ground that the payment is not proved, the Court fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law, and the order is therefore revisable by the High Court under Section 115.<sup>4</sup> A Judge declining to proceed with an application for execution, on the ground of an uncertified payment or adjustment out of Court, acts with material irregularity and his order is open to revision.<sup>5</sup>

1. Sale of property situate in more than one jurisdiction. — As has been seen in Note 8 to Section 17, ante, it is a general principle of law that no Court can execute a decree in which the subject-matter of the suit or of the application for execution is property situate entirely outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. This rule is an exception to that general rule.<sup>1</sup> Even before this provision was enacted in this Code, it was held by the Calcutta High Court<sup>2</sup> that where property attached in execution of a decree forms one estate and is situate within the territorial jurisdiction of two or more Courts, any one of such Courts has jurisdiction to sell the entire estate. But where the Court to which the decree is to be sent is situate in a different district, it should be sent to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed. Where this procedure is not followed and the decree is sent direct to the Court subordinate to the District Court in another district, that Court cannot execute the decree.<sup>2</sup> It should not, however, dismiss the application, but should send the papers back to the Judge who sent them for adopting the correct procedure.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned cases<sup>4</sup> it was held that the failure to send the decree through the District Court is a mere irregularity which can be waived.

The High Court of Madras<sup>5</sup> has framed a rule — Rule 161A of the Civil Rules of Practice — under which the transferee Court is to return the papers to the transmitting Court, if no steps are taken by the decree-holder within six months from the date of transfer. This rule is one of convenience made with the object of inducing decree-holder to take early steps to execute the decree; and a violation thereof does not render the proceedings taken after six months void ab initio.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The documents required to be transmitted by the Court sending the decree for execution to another Court are —

- (1) a copy of the decree,
- (2) a certificate as required by clause (b), and
- (3) a copy of any order for execution that may have been passed.<sup>1</sup>

As to the form of certificate of non-satisfaction, see Appendix E, Form No. 4.

Where a Court, upon an application for transfer of the decree for execution to another Court, places a wrong construction on the decree and mentions in the certificate that a particular amount is due, the statement is ultra vires and the judgment-debtor need not have it amended by the transferor Court.<sup>2</sup> In sending the certificate of non-satisfaction, the Court which passed the decree is not called upon to consider whether the decree is still capable of execution; that is a question for determination by the transferee Court when a proper application for execution is presented to it.<sup>3</sup>

When once an order is made sending a decree to another Court for execution, that by itself is sufficient to entitle the decree-holder to apply to the Court to which the decree is sent for execution.<sup>4</sup> Where an application for execution has already been made to the Court which passed the decree, a fresh application for execution need not be made to the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution.<sup>5</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup>

2. Certificate, effect of not sending. — The omission to send the certificate as required by clause (b) of this rule is a mere irregularity and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution to entertain the application for execution.<sup>1</sup> Nor is it a ground for an application under O. 21 R. 90 to set aside a sale.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, it has been held that a mere mistake in the certificate of non-satisfaction as to the number of the suit or the names of the judgment-debtors will not affect the jurisdiction of the execution Court to proceed with the execution.<sup>3</sup>

3. Presumption as to compliance with the Rule. — Where the validity of an attachment effected by the transferee Court is attacked on the ground that no copy of the decree was sent by the Court which passed the decree, it lies upon the judgment-debtor to prove that it was not transmitted, the maxim applicable being omnia presumuntur rite esse acta — all things are presumed to have been rightly and duly performed.<sup>1</sup> Where a decree was passed by a Judge in the capacity of a Small Cause Judge and an application for execution of the decree was filed before the same Judge acting on the original side, it was held that even though there was no formal order of transfer, the provisions of this rule were sufficiently complied with.<sup>2</sup>

4. Copy of any order. — The words "copy of any order for the execution of the decree" in clause (c) mean a copy of any subsisting order and not a copy of an order for execution in the previous execution application.<sup>1</sup>

5. Small Cause Courts. — This rule applies to proceedings in the Small Cause Courts in the mofussil and if there is no sufficient property within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court to satisfy the decree, it may be sent to another Court.<sup>1</sup>

5a. Notice to judgment-debtor. — Where the application for transmission of the decree for execution to another Court is made when the decree is already under execution in the Court which passed it, notice should be given to the judgment-debtor and the transfer should not be ordered unless there is sufficient cause to order simultaneous execution.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 17 to Section 39 ante.

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it" which occurred in the old Section have now been omitted. See Note 4.

2. Without any further proof. — As soon as a copy of the decree which is sent for execution to another Court is filed in the Court to which it is transmitted, it has the same effect as a decree of that Court.<sup>1</sup>

3. Jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree. — See Section 42, Note 1.

4. Executing Court, whether can question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree. — Section 225 of the old Code contained the words "or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it." There was a conflict of decisions as to whether the transferee Court can go into the question of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree, if it sees any reason to do so.<sup>1</sup> The said words have now been omitted and it has been held that the transferee Court has no power under the present Code to question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree under execution.<sup>2</sup> But it has been held that where the decree was passed against a dead person, it is a nullity and objection to the decree on this ground can be taken in the transferee Court.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> it was held that the transferee Court is not debarred from taking cognizance of objections as to jurisdiction of which the Court which transferred the decree could take cognizance. See also Note 1 to Section 42, ante.

This rule dispensing with the further proof of jurisdiction than the certificate of the transmitting Court, applies only to the decrees of British Indian Courts and not to foreign decrees transmitted to British Indian Courts for execution under Section 44; the reason is that Section 44 "does not remove the decree of a Native State falling within its purview from the category of foreign judgments. It merely allows the procedure by which such a judgment can have effect given to it in British India." Notwithstanding the Section, such a decree still remains a foreign judgment, and its effect is removed by showing want of jurisdiction in the Court which passed it. The Court executing the decree is, therefore, not precluded from ascertaining whether a foreign Court had jurisdiction merely because that Court has itself decided an issue upon that point in its own favour.<sup>5</sup> signed by the sheristadar "by order" of the District Judge, is a valid endorsement complying with the provisions of this rule and is not vitiated by the absence of the signature of the Judge.<sup>2</sup>

Where an Assistant Judge is invested with all the powers of a District Judge within any part of the district of such Judge, he is the "District Court" in such part for the purposes of this rule.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Competent jurisdiction." — There is a conflict of opinion as to the meaning of the expression "Court of competent jurisdiction." It was held by the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that the expression refers to territorial competence and therefore if the attached property is transferred from the jurisdiction of the transferee Court to some other Court, the sale by the transferee Court after the transfer of the property from its jurisdiction, is not valid even though the Court had jurisdiction over such property at the time of the transfer. But in a recent case<sup>2</sup> the same High Court has held that the expression means "competent to sell in execution."

R. 9. [S. 227.] Where the Court to which the decree is sent for execution is a High Court, the decree shall be executed by such Court in the same manner as if it had been passed by such Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction.

Execution by High Court of decree transferred by other Court.

[1877, S. 227.]

Synopsis

1. Scope.
2. Ordinary original civil jurisdiction, meaning of.
3. Limitation.

1. Scope. — It has been held in a very early case of the Calcutta High Court<sup>1</sup> that the functions of the High Court, in respect of the execution of a decree of another Court, are limited to effecting execution and to the matters arising out of the proceedings in execution, and that the question whether or not the applicant had a right to obtain execution, must be judged by the Court in which the record was.

Where a decree is transferred under this rule to the High Court for execution, the High Court cannot make the decree payable in instalments.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that though the decree could be executed as if it was passed by itself, still the High Court is not the Court which passed the decree, which Court alone can act under O. 20 R. 11, ante.

2. Ordinary original civil jurisdiction, meaning of. — See Notes to Clause 12 of the Letters Patent of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras High Courts.

3. Limitation. — The period of limitation applicable to the execution of a decree transmitted by one Court to another for execution depends upon the character of the Court which passed the decree and not on the character of the Court executing it.<sup>1</sup> The manner of execution mentioned in this rule refers to the procedure under which the execution is to be had, and has no reference to the law of limitation; it simply applies the High Court machinery to the execution of the decree.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a decree passed by the Calcutta Small Cause Court was transferred to the High Court at Calcutta for execution, it was held that the period of limitation applicable to the decree was Article 182 of the Limitation Act and that it was not governed by the law of limitation relating to decrees of the High Court.<sup>3</sup>

1. Successive applications for execution. — The Code does not bar a succession of applications for execution.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where an application for execution is withdrawn by the decree-holder without leave to apply again having been granted by the Court, a second application is not barred; Section 141 cannot be invoked so as to apply O. 23 R. 1, since that Section does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, O. 2 R. 2 does not apply to proceedings in execution,<sup>3</sup> and when a decree gives reliefs of a different character, such as a decree for possession and a decree for costs, there is nothing which prevents separate and successive applications for execution as regards each of them.<sup>4</sup>

A decree in a suit for money, for principal and interest, is a single money decree and it is not permissible to levy execution thereof piecemeal. The rule is that a party having a right to execute a decree for money presently payable must enforce the whole decree at the same time and if enforcement is sought for a lesser sum, he must be taken to waive his right to levy execution for the balance.<sup>5</sup> According to the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur, where an application for execution of part of a decree is made, the judgment-debtor is bound to raise an objection at once and if he fails to do so, the piecemeal execution will not be invalid and a subsequent application is not barred inasmuch as O. 2 R. 2 does not apply to applications in execution.<sup>6</sup>

A subsequent application for execution in respect of reliefs different from those claimed in a prior application cannot be said to be one in continuation of the prior application.<sup>7</sup>

2. Who may apply for execution. — It is only the decree-holder whose name is on the record that is entitled to apply for execution of the decree.<sup>1</sup> A defendant in a partition suit in which a decree has been passed is in the position of a decree-holder, and will be entitled to apply for execution.<sup>2</sup> In the case of decrees in representative suits, a person not on the record, but who was represented in the suit by the decree-holder on record, can apply to be brought on the record and to execute the decree.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, the representatives of a deceased decree-holder can apply to be brought on the record and to execute the decree.<sup>4</sup>

Where an application was made by the guardian ad litem of a minor after the latter had attained majority, but the latter ratified the application subsequently, it was held that the ratification rendered the application valid from the date of the ratification.<sup>5</sup>

Fresh vakalatnama, if necessary for execution proceedings. — Proceedings in execution are proceedings in continuation of the suit, and therefore a fresh authority is not required for a pleader to appear, act and plead on behalf of the decree-holder in execution proceedings, if he was authorized by a vakalatnama in the suit itself.<sup>9</sup> But an application for execution filed by a vakil who has no vakalat from the decree-holder at all is not one in accordance with law.<sup>10</sup>

Where an agent is authorized to apply for execution of a decree, he is also entitled to appeal against an order refusing to execute the decree.<sup>11</sup>

Joint application for execution. — Persons entitled to separate amounts under a decree may join in one application. Where, in such a case, one of them subsequently withdraws from the application, it may continue in the name of the other persons.<sup>12</sup>

6. Court to which the decree is sent for execution. — Where a decree is transferred to another Court for execution under Section 39 and the records are not sent back to the transferor Court, an application made to the Court which passed the decree is not an application made to the proper Court within the meaning of Article 182, clause 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> See also Section 42 Note 3. A transfer made in an irregular manner is not null and void and if the irregularity is not objected to, an application made to the transferee Court is in order.<sup>2</sup> Where a decree is transferred to another Court for execution, the mere fact that the transfer is made on the ground that the judgment-debtor has immovable property within the jurisdiction of such Court does not deprive such Court of the power to entertain an application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor.<sup>3</sup>

Where an order has been made by the Court which passed a decree for transfer to another Court, the decree-holder is entitled to apply for execution to the transferee Court, even before the copy of the decree has been received by the latter from the former Court.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the order of transfer is a judicial order and therefore takes effect from the date on which it was passed.

6a. Time of presentation of application for execution. — It is in the discretion of the Judge or officer appointed in that behalf to accept an application for execution beyond office hours.<sup>1</sup>

7. Executing Court cannot go behind the decree. — See Note 8 to Section 38.

8. Application for execution. — It has been already seen in Note 5 to Section 38, ante, that where a decree is reversed, modified or affirmed in appeal, the only decree capable of execution is the appellate decree. Therefore, if a decree of a lower Court is confirmed on appeal while execution proceedings are pending, a fresh application for execution is necessary.<sup>1</sup>

When a decree follows an attachment before judgment, O. 38 R. 11 does not exempt the plaintiff from making an application as required by this rule.<sup>2</sup>

An application under Section 39 for transfer of a decree is not an application for execution;<sup>3</sup> but is only an application to take some step-in-aid of execution.<sup>4</sup> It is necessary, however, even for this purpose that the application for transfer should have been made to the Court having jurisdiction in the matter.<sup>5</sup>

Where a decree-holder makes an application praying for a relief not granted by the decree, it is not an application which will save limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>6</sup> But an application which is merely incorrect in some respects would be one furthering execution.<sup>7</sup>

Where a decree is transferred for execution to another Court, it is the application for execution that initiates the proceedings in execution. The receipt of the decree on transfer is a mere ministerial act.<sup>8</sup>

9. Dismissal of application for default.—A Court has inherent power to dismiss an application for execution when the applicant fails, through his own laches, to put the Court in a position to proceed with the application.<sup>1</sup> But such dismissal does not bar a fresh application for execution.<sup>2</sup>

As to whether a Court has power to restore to the file an application dismissed for default, see Notes to Order 9 Rule 9.

Notes 1-2

1. Legislative changes.—Sub-rule (1) corresponds to Section 256 of the old Code and sub-rule (2) to Section 235. Sub-rule (3) is new and empowers the Court executing the decree to call upon the decree-holder to produce a certified copy of the decree.<sup>1</sup>

The following are the points of difference between sub-rule (1) and Section 256 —

- (1) Section 256 provided for immediate execution only where the amount decreed did not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees. This rule fixes no such limit.
- (2) Under Section 256 the Court could order immediate execution only by the issue of a warrant. Under this rule the order may be made even prior to the preparation of a warrant.
- (3) Under this rule execution cannot issue against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor as was possible under the old Code.
- (4) Under the old Code execution could be ordered if the judgment-debtor was "within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court." Under this rule it can be ordered only if he is within the precincts of the Court.

The following are the important alterations in sub-rule (2) —

- (1) The words "together with particulars of any cross-decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed" in clause (g) are new.
- (2) The words "and sale, or by the sale without attachment" in clause (j), sub-clause (ii) are new.
- (3) Sub-clause (iv), clause (j) is new.

2. Scope of the Rule.—An application for execution should be in writing except in the case dealt with under sub-rule (1), when it may be oral. Sub-rule (2) says what particulars a written application for execution shall contain. But every omission to comply with the said requirements is not necessarily such a defect as will vitiate the execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> Informalities of an immaterial character will not vitiate the proceedings.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the omission to mention the amount of costs<sup>3</sup> or giving a wrong suit number,<sup>4</sup> or making a mistake in the name of the judgment-debtor,<sup>5</sup> or omitting to state the names of all the persons interested in the decree,<sup>6</sup> or wrongly calculating the pleader's fee,<sup>7</sup> or the failure to draw up the petition in a tabular form,<sup>8</sup> is only an irregularity of an immaterial character which will not vitiate the proceeding. Where, however, the omissions relate to material particulars, the application cannot be considered to be one in accordance with law and cannot save limitation.<sup>9</sup> Whether an omission is material or not will depend upon the particular facts of each case.<sup>10</sup>

Where an application for execution complies with the requirements of O. 21, Rules 11 to 14, it is in accordance with law. Although in the absence of a succession certificate the decree-holder may not be entitled to realize the fruits of his decree, yet, the want of a succession certificate will not make the application for execution itself one not in accordance with law.<sup>11</sup> See also Note 2 to Order 21 Rule 10.

Where an application for execution is made, which is not in proper form or is otherwise defective, it is the duty of the Court to dispose of the application either by giving the decree-holder an opportunity to amend his application or by rejecting it.<sup>12</sup>

This rule prescribes the form for an application for execution. There is no particular form in which an application for the transfer of a decree for execution to another Court should be made. Such application need not contain the particulars mentioned in this rule. Where the application gives sufficient particulars of the decree sought to be transferred to indicate with precision the decree which the Court is to transfer, the application is one in accordance with law.<sup>13</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

2b. "Decree for payment of money." — A decree, to come within the description of a decree for the payment of money, need not state the exact amount due. A decree under which the amount due has to be ascertained subsequently may be a decree for the payment of money.<sup>1</sup>

See also Note 6 to Section 73 ante.

3. Immediate execution — Sub-rule (1) — Privilege from arrest. — S. 135 ante deals with exemptions from arrest. But sub-section (3) thereof provides that "nothing in sub-section (2) shall enable a judgment-debtor to claim exemption from arrest under an order for immediate execution . . ."<sup>1</sup>

4. Verification of application. — The application for execution should be signed and verified by (a) the applicant, or (b) some other person acquainted with the facts of the case. Where there are several applicants it is not necessary that all of them should verify the application, even though some of them are not acquainted with the facts of the case.<sup>1</sup> Where an application for execution is verified by a person other than the decree-holder, all that is necessary is that the Court should be satisfied that he is acquainted with the facts of the case.<sup>2</sup>

Although this rule permits the signing and verification of an application for execution by some person other than the decree-holder, the application itself must be that of the decree-holder or his recognized agent or pleader.<sup>3</sup>

An application not signed and verified as required by this rule is a defective application which ought to be rejected.<sup>4</sup> Where the period of twelve years from the date of a decree expired when the Court was closed and the decree-holder presented an unverified petition for execution on the re-opening day, it was held by the High Court of Madras<sup>6</sup> that the petition ought to be rejected and not to be allowed to be amended.

5. Who may apply for execution. — See Notes to Order 21 Rule 10.

6. Date of the decree to be given—Clause (c). — The date of the decree is the date on which the judgment was pronounced.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to O. 20 R. 7. An error in the date of the decree or the omission to give it in an application for execution is not a material irregularity and will not affect the validity of the application.<sup>2</sup> It can be amended even after the period of limitation for execution has expired and the amendment so made will relate back to the date of the application.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree was, by mistake, dated 16th February 1929 instead of 11th February and the decree-holder was misled thereby and applied for execution on the 15th February 1932, it was held that the decree ought to be regarded as having been passed on the 16th February 1929 on the principle actus curie neminem gravabit — an act of the Court shall prejudice no man.<sup>4</sup>

7. Whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree—Clause (d). — It has been already mentioned in Note 5 to Section 38 that where an appeal is preferred against a decree and the decree is modified, reversed, or confirmed, it is the decree of the Appellate Court that is capable of execution. This clause requires that the application should state any modifications or reversals, etc., which the decree of the Appellate Court may have introduced in the decree of the lower Court.<sup>1</sup>

An omission to mention the particulars required by this clause does not render the application one not "in accordance with law."<sup>2</sup>

8. Payment or other adjustment—Clause (e). — The applicant for execution is bound to mention in the application any payment or adjustment made between the parties after decree.<sup>1</sup> Where a portion of the decretal amount has been deposited in Court with notice to the decree-holder, the latter must mention such fact in his application and can execute the decree only for the balance.<sup>2</sup> The non-mention of an uncertified payment out of Court in an application for execution does not, according to the High Court of Madras,<sup>3</sup> render it an application not "in accordance with law" within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>4</sup> has held that where the decree-holder deliberately omits to mention a certified adjustment, the application is not one "in accordance with law."

12. Mode in which the assistance of the Court is required — Clause (j). —

An execution application which does not specify the manner in which the assistance of the Court is required is not an application in accordance with law.<sup>1</sup> So also is an application asking for a relief which the Court cannot grant inasmuch as the Court is asked to do something which it is not competent to do.<sup>2</sup>

The words "otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require" in clause (j) show that the modes of execution mentioned above are not exhaustive.<sup>3</sup> But where the decree-holder prays for a particular mode of execution, he cannot ask the Court to give a different mode of execution upon that application.<sup>4</sup>

This rule should be read with Section 51 ante and O. 40 R. 1, infra; and an order for the appointment of a receiver by way of execution of a decree must be deemed to be made under O. 40 R. 1 and must satisfy the requirements thereof.<sup>5</sup>

Where the property sought to be attached is inalienable under the law, the Court has no power to attach it; the reason is that attachment will be futile in such a case.<sup>6</sup>

13. Certified copy of decree to be filed — Sub-rule (3). —

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. Failure to annex inventory — Effect of.

1. Scope of the Rule.—This rule applies to moveables in the possession of third parties. When a third party has some moveables belonging to himself and others belonging to the judgment-debtor, an inventory is obviously necessary before an attachment can be made.<sup>1</sup> But, where a decree is passed under Section 52 of the Code against the legal representatives of a deceased debtor and the moveable property attached is in their possession, the rule has no application.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that the legal representatives themselves are the judgment-debtors and therefore the property sought to be attached cannot be said to be property belonging to, but not in the possession of, the judgment-debtor. No inventory is necessary where the property sought to be attached is in the possession of the judgment-debtor himself.<sup>3</sup>

2. Failure to annex inventory—Effect of.—Where a decree-holder fails to annex to the application for execution of his decree an inventory of the property to be attached with a reasonably accurate description of the same as required by this rule,

Local Amendment

RANGOON

The following shall be substituted for Rule 13:

"R. 13. (1) When application is made, for execution of a decree relating to immovable property included within the cadastral or Town Survey and the decree does not contain a plan of the property, or for execution of decree by the attachment and sale of such property, the application must be accompanied by a certified extract from the latest kwin or town map, with the boundary of the land in question marked with a distinctive colour. The particulars specified in the annexed instructions, which have been issued regarding the filling up of forms of process concerning immovable property, must also be furnished so far as they are not given in the plan. In the case of other immovable property, a plan is not required, but such of the particulars in the annexed instructions as can be given must be supplied:—

1. If the property to be sold is agricultural land which has been cadastrally surveyed and of which survey maps exist, the area, kwin number, latest holding number (if different kinds of holdings, e.g., rice land and garden holdings are numbered in different series, the kind of holding must be stated), field numbers (if the property does not coincide with one complete holding), year of kwin map from which the holding number is taken and revenue last assessed upon the land, must be given.

2. In the case of other agricultural land, the area and village tract within which it falls, distance and direction from nearest town or village and boundaries should be specified.

(In this case, it was held that it was not right to hold an application not in accordance with law merely because it did not contain an inventory of the property sought to be attached without considering whether such property was in the possession of the judgment-debtor or not.)

3. In the case of land in large towns the area, block or quarter, name or number, the lot number (if there are separate series of lots, the series should be stated, and where the land forms part only of a lot, particulars regarding that part), the holding number in the latest town survey map, if any, and year of the map, the rent or revenue last assessed on the land, must be given.

4. In the case of buildings situated in a large town when the land on which such buildings stand is not affected, the name or number of the street, or, if the street has neither name nor number, the quarter or block name or number, the number of the building in the street or if it has no number, the lot number must be given.

5. In the case of immovable property situated in a small town or village, such of the particulars in paragraphs 3 and 4 above as can be given should be given.

6. The purpose to which land or buildings are put, the material and age of buildings, all incumbrances and municipal taxes should be stated.

7. The judgment-debtor's share or interest in the property should be specified.

(2) The cost of the certified extract should be reckoned in the costs of the application."

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes. | 2. Specification of property.

1. Legislative changes. — This rule corresponds to the first paragraph of Section 237 of the old Code, except that the words "and in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers" have been newly added in clause (a).

The second paragraph of Section 237 requiring the list of properties to be verified has been omitted from this rule and reproduced in sub-rule (3) of Rule 66 of this Order.<sup>1</sup>

2. Specification of property. — The rule applies only to execution of money decrees, and not to decrees made upon a charge or a mortgage.<sup>1</sup>

The object of requiring the boundaries and numbers to be specified is to easily identify the property.<sup>2</sup> Clause (b) imposes a duty on the decree-holder to specify the judgment-debtor's share or interest, to the best of his belief.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the share is undivided it should be so specified.<sup>4</sup>

An application which does not contain the particulars required by this rule cannot be treated as an application in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act, unless the defects are remedied by amendment under Rule 17.<sup>5</sup> See also Notes to Rule 17, infra.

2. Applicability of the Rule.

3. Application for time to produce certified extracts is a step-in-aid of execution.

1. Legislative changes. — Section 238 of the old Code corresponding to this rule provided that "the application shall be accompanied by an authenticated extract from "the register of such office."<sup>1</sup> The present rule leaves it to the option of the Court to require the applicant to produce a certified extract.

2. Applicability of the Rule. — Where an application for sale is made in pursuance of a mortgage decree, a preliminary attachment of the mortgaged properties is not necessary, and therefore this rule does not apply to such a case; and a Court cannot dismiss the application for failure to produce the certified extract.<sup>1</sup> This rule applies to the proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, 1908, Section 210, as amended by Act VI of 1920, Section 50.

3. Application for time to produce certified extracts is a step-in-aid of execution.—An application by a decree-holder for time to produce the certified copies or extracts required by this rule is a step-in-aid of execution.<sup>1</sup>

1. The words "or his or their representatives" in Section 231 of the old Code, after the words "one or more of such persons" have been omitted as unnecessary in view of the provisions of Section 146, ante.
2. The words "unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary" are new. See Note 6.

2. Scope of the Rule. — There are two rules of general application governing the execution of joint decrees in favour of several persons —

(1) One of the decree-holders alone cannot apply for execution of his share only of the decree, leaving the other decree-holders to take out execution for their shares.<sup>1</sup>

(2) One of the decree-holders alone cannot execute the whole decree so as to bind the other decree-holders by the result of such execution.

The first rule is based on the principle that the judgment-debtor should not be harassed by a number of applications for execution. As observed by Sir Barnes Peacock, C. J., in Haro Shankar Sandyal v. Tarak Chandra Buttacharjee, 11 Suth. W. R. 488 at page 490 :

"Suppose there was a decree for a lac of rupees, it could not be contended that the decree-holder could assign it to a lac of assignees, so as to give to each of them power to take out execution for one rupee, his portion of it. Otherwise, there might be a lac of executions under the decree, a lac of seizures and a lac of sales under each one of which there can be no doubt that the judgment-debtor would suffer loss. If this were allowed, the judgment-debtor must necessarily be ruined."

Notes 2-3

The second rule is based on the principle that the interests of the other decree-holders should not be jeopardised, and also on the principle that all persons representing a single and indivisible right must be parties before the right can be adjudicated upon. See Note 7 to O. 1 R. 1.

This rule is an exception to the second of the two rules abovementioned, in that it provides that one of several joint decree-holders can execute, under certain circumstances, the whole decree. In order, however, to prevent the interests of the other decree-holders from being jeopardised, the Court is given power, and is indeed bound, to make such order as is necessary to safeguard such interests.<sup>2</sup>

3. "Where a decree has been passed jointly." — A decree directing the defendant to pay a certain sum of money to several persons specifying their shares therein is not a joint decree, even though the amount is made payable as an entire sum.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Patna has, however, in the undermentioned case,<sup>2</sup> expressed an obiter dictum that a decree does not cease to be a joint decree merely because the shares of the decree-holders in the decretal amount have been determined by the decree. According to the High Courts of Lahore and Madras, where a suit is filed in the name of a firm, the decree passed in the suit in favour of the firm must be held to be a decree passed jointly in favour of all the partners, since a firm name is only a compendious method of writing the names of all the partners.<sup>3</sup> But the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind has held that unless a declaration of the names of all the partners has been made under O. 30 R. 2, the decree in favour of the firm cannot be said to be a joint decree.<sup>4</sup>

This rule can apply only where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one.<sup>5</sup> Where a portion of a decree is transferred to another, either by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee is in the position of a joint decree-holder and the Court has got the inherent power to grant him relief in

4. "Any one or more of such persons may apply for the execution of the whole decree." — As has been seen in Note 2 above, this rule makes an exception to the general rule that all decree-holders must join in an application to execute the joint decree, and permits one or more of several joint decree-holders to apply for execution of the whole decree,<sup>1</sup> unless the decree imposes a condition to the contrary.<sup>2</sup> But it does not confer an unconditional right on one of the decree-holders to execute the decree. It is within the discretion of the Court to allow such execution and the Court will act only if it sees sufficient cause for allowing such a course to be taken.<sup>3</sup> It may allow other decree-holders to intervene in a pending execution, if it is not being properly conducted.<sup>4</sup> It is also in the discretion of the Court whether or not notice should be given to the other decree-holders or to the judgment-debtor before making an order for execution under this rule.<sup>5</sup> Where one of several decree-holders applies for execution and the others do not object to execution being granted to him, it is not for the judgment-debtor to say that sufficient steps have not been taken to safeguard the interests of the other decree-holders.<sup>6</sup>

When one of several joint decree-holders executes a decree, he executes the decree prima facie for the benefit of all, unless there is a direction by the Court or in the decree itself which permits execution for the benefit of the executing creditor alone.<sup>7</sup> Therefore, where one decree-holder executes a joint decree and realizes the amount due under it, the realization is made on behalf of, and for the benefit of, all the joint decree-holders and they are entitled to recover their respective shares from him by a separate suit.<sup>8</sup>

The High Court of Lahore has held in the undermentioned cases<sup>9</sup> that it need not be stated in the body of the application that it is being made for the benefit of all the decree-holders, and that when the application is for execution of the entire decree, it should be assumed that the person applying is attempting to execute it on behalf of all the decree-holders. But the High Court of Patna has held that such an application is invalid and must be disallowed.<sup>10</sup>

The omission on the part of the decree-holder to state in his application the names of all the persons who are interested in the decree is not such a defect as would invalidate the execution proceedings.<sup>11</sup>

Where an application for execution is made by two persons the execution proceedings do not terminate automatically on the death of one of them. The surviving

O. 21 R. 15
Notes 4-8

5. Application by one of several decree-holders for execution in respect of his share of the decree. — It has been seen in Note 2 above that it is not open to one of several joint decree-holders to apply for execution in respect of his share only of the decree, and that the rule is based on the principle that the judgment-debtor should not be harassed by a multiplicity of applications by different decree-holders. Where, therefore, there is no possibility of the judgment-debtor being harassed by different applications, the bar against one of the decree-holders applying for execution will not apply. Thus, where some of the joint decree-holders apply for execution with regard to a certain portion only of the decree giving up the rest and the other decree-holders, being made parties, do not object to such a giving up by the applicants, the execution asked for may be allowed and the other decree-holders cannot subsequently apply for execution of the balance of the decree.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where one of the joint decree-holders intimates to the Court satisfaction of his share in the decree, this rule does not bar an application by the others for execution for the balance remaining due under the decree.<sup>3</sup> So also, where A and B jointly obtain a decree for money or for possession of immovable property against C, and C as judgment-debtor either purchases his share in the decree or inherits such share from A, the result would be the extinguishment of the decree pro tanto and B can, therefore, execute the decree in respect of his share.<sup>3</sup>

6. Unless the decree imposes a condition to the contrary. — This rule is not applicable to the case of joint decree-holders where the execution of a joint decree is made dependent upon all the decree-holders joining in the application.<sup>1</sup>

7. Execution against one of the joint judgment-debtors — Limitation. — See Article 182 of the Limitation Act.

8. Payment by judgment-debtor out of Court to one of several decree-holders. — One of several joint decree-holders cannot, as a general rule, give a valid discharge of the entire decree without the concurrence of others. A payment, therefore, to one of several decree-holders out of Court is valid only to the extent of the share of that decree-holder,<sup>1</sup> unless it can be proved that the decree-holder who granted the discharge was an agent of the other decree-holders, or otherwise had legal authority to bind them by his acts.<sup>2</sup> On the same principle one of two or more joint decree-holders is not competent, without being authorized by the other or others, to certify a payment made to him under O. 21 R. 2 so as to operate as a satisfaction of the entire decree, and the others are not debarred from executing the decree as to their shares.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that "when one of two or more joint decree-holders takes it upon himself to certify satisfaction of the whole decree, it is clear that no provision can be made by the Court for safeguarding the interests of the other decree-holder or decree-holders; and that if a Court was bound to recognize such an adjustment out of Court, the remaining decree-holders might be driven to another suit to recover money for which a decree had already been passed in their favour."<sup>4</sup>

Where the joint decree-holders are partners or members of a Hindu coparcenary, a payment to one of them or a certificate by him under O. 21 R. 2 cannot, according to the High Court of Madras,<sup>5</sup> be treated as satisfaction of the decree even in part. This view is based on the ground that a decree debt in favour of a firm or of a coparcenary is only one asset out of the numerous other assets and that one of the decree-holders cannot legally claim any definite share in the particular decree debt. The same High Court has also held that the fact that the decree-holder receiving payment is a partner or is the managing member of the joint family is not enough to clothe him with authority to act as the agent of the other decree-holders in receiving such payment.<sup>6</sup> The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> and Patna<sup>8</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>9</sup> have, on the other hand, held that a karta of a joint Hindu family has legal authority to act on behalf of the family and that a payment to, or a certificate by him will bind the other decree-holders. It has been held by the High Court of Lahore<sup>10</sup> and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind<sup>11</sup> that one partner is the agent of the others and that where a decree is obtained in the name of a firm, one of the partners can receive the entire money due under the decree and certify the payment.

Notes 8-11

Although a payment to one of two joint decree-holders of the whole decree amount does not, even when certified, absolve the judgment-debtor from liability to the other decree-holder, such decree-holder is not bound to proceed against the judgment-debtor in execution, but may sue to recover his share from the other decree-holder.<sup>12</sup>

See also Note 8 to Order 21 Rule 1, ante.

9. Defective application under the Rule, if can be amended. — It has been held by the High Court of Patna in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that where in an application for execution of a decree by one of several joint decree-holders, it is not stated that the application is for the benefit of all the decree-holders, the application is invalid and cannot be allowed to be amended. It proceeds upon the view that the requirements of this rule go to the root of the execution of the decree and that while Rule 17 of this Order empowers the Court to allow a defect in the requirements of Rules 11 to 14 to be amended, it does not include this rule. But the High Court of Allahabad<sup>2</sup> has taken a contrary view that there is nothing in Rule 17 which deprives the Court of its powers to allow amendments in relation to matters required to be mentioned by this rule. The Calcutta High Court also holds a similar view.<sup>3</sup>

10. Appeal. — The question whether an appeal lies from an order passed under this rule depends upon the consideration whether the question decided is one within Section 47 of the Code. Thus, an order allowing or refusing execution in favour of one of the decree-holders when an objection is raised by the judgment-debtor is one falling under Section 47 and, therefore, appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> But no appeal will lie against an order refusing to allow execution in favour of one joint decree-holder on the objection of another joint decree-holder<sup>2</sup> or against an order protecting the interests of the non-applying decree-holder.<sup>3</sup>

11. Limitation. — An application for execution by one of several joint decree-holders is an application in accordance with law and will afford a fresh starting point of limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras that although this rule does not allow one of such decree-holders to apply for partial execution of a joint decree, yet such an application may keep alive the right to execute the decree.<sup>2</sup> But the High Court of Allahabad and Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh have taken the contrary view that such an application is not one in accordance with law and, therefore, will not save limitation.<sup>3</sup>

Where there is a decree in favour of two or more joint decree-holders and one of them is a minor, can the minor decree-holder apply to execute the decree on behalf of all, more than three years after the last starting point of limitation but within three years of his attaining majority? There is a conflict of opinion on this question. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>4</sup> Bombay,<sup>5</sup> Calcutta<sup>6</sup> and Lahore<sup>7</sup> that the ex-minor decree-holder can apply to execute the whole decree, even though the other decree-holders would be barred by limitation. 1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree," are new. See Note 7, infra.
2. The words "if that Court thinks fit" which occurred in the old Section 232 before the words "the decree may be executed in the same manner . . . ." have been omitted. See Note 11, infra.
3. The words "decree for money" in the second proviso have been changed into "a decree for the payment of money . . . ." See Note 17 infra.

2. Decree. — The provisions of this rule in the first paragraph as well as in the first proviso are not restricted to money decrees, but apply to mortgage decrees also. As to the applicability of the second proviso, see Note 17, infra.

3. Where a decree has been transferred. — The principle of this rule is that no one can execute a decree except the decree-holder or a person to whom the decree has been transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law.<sup>1</sup> A third person cannot, therefore, apply for execution of a decree unless there is a transfer to him of the decree by the original decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> Where on the death of A, the plaintiff in a suit, his widow B continues the proceedings as his legal representative and obtains a decree, C claiming to be the real heir of A cannot apply to execute the decree inasmuch as there is no transfer of the decree by B in his favour.<sup>3</sup> The rule is, however, intended primarily for those cases where the applicant for execution does not appear as decree-holder in the decree and he applies for execution on the basis of a transfer of the decree;<sup>4</sup> it does not, therefore, apply where the applicant is one whose name is already in the decree as one of two persons in whose favour the decree has been passed and who claims on the death of the other decree-holder to execute the decree as the surviving decree-holder.<sup>5</sup>

A transfer in writing of the property dealt with by the decree is not a transfer of the decree itself and the transferee cannot apply under this rule.<sup>6</sup> It has, however, been held by the High Court of Rangoon<sup>7</sup> that it is a matter of construction of the deed of transfer whether the decree also was intended to be transferred by the transfer of the property, and the words of the rule relating to the transfer of a decree cannot be construed so as to apply to a case where there was no decree in existence at the time of the assignment. The assignee of a decree to be subsequently passed cannot apply for execution under this rule.<sup>8</sup> Thus, a person who obtains a transfer, pending suit, of the property forming the subject-matter of the suit is not entitled to execute the decree subsequently passed unless his name has been substituted in place of his vendor under O. 22 R. 10.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, the assignee of a preliminary decree who has not taken steps to be impleaded in the suit cannot apply to execute the final decree in the suit.<sup>10</sup>

The High Court of Bombay has, however, held in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that the effect of the transfer was, in equity, to vest in the transferee, the interest in the decree which was afterwards obtained and that the decree must be taken to have been transferred by operation of law. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>12</sup> has dissented from the above reasoning of the High Court of Bombay and has held that the words "by operation of law" cannot be invoked so as to make an assignment in writing, an assignment by operation of law.

When a decree is assigned, what is really transferred is not the decree alone, but the interest of the decree-holder in the decree as may be finally determined. Therefore, an assignment of the decree of the trial Court carries with it the right to execute the decree passed in appeal.<sup>13</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case<sup>14</sup> that the transferee of a decree for future maintenance is entitled to apply for execution in respect of the amounts that fall due from time to time and that Section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act will not apply when the cause of action has merged in the decree. But the High Court of Madras<sup>15</sup> has held that only that portion of the maintenance decree which related to the arrears of maintenance already accrued due can legally be transferred.

4. Transfer by assignment in writing. — An assignee of a decree under an oral transfer has no locus standi to apply for execution under this rule.<sup>1</sup> In order to enable a transferee to apply, the transfer must be effected by an instrument in writing.<sup>2</sup> A mere contract for sale of a decree without an assignment in writing in favour of the purchaser is not enough.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Patna<sup>4</sup> has held that a release of his rights by a decree-holder in favour of another does not operate as an assignment. But the High Court of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> has held that a release may operate as an assignment of the decree.

It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta and Lahore that a decree for sale of immovable property is itself not immovable property and, therefore, an assignment of such a decree does not require to be registered.<sup>6</sup> But the High Court of Bombay has taken a contrary view.<sup>7</sup> In any view a personal decree against a defendant is transferable without registration even though the decree may be a mortgage decree as against the other defendants.<sup>8</sup>

The rule does not require any particular form of writing.<sup>9</sup> In the under-mentioned case,<sup>10</sup> an order of the Court acting on behalf of the decree-holders and directing the sale of the decree by auction to the highest bidder, was held sufficient to constitute an assignment in writing for the purposes of this rule. But, the assignment of certain funds recoverable under a decree is not an assignment of the decree.<sup>11</sup>

5. Transfer by operation of law. — Ordinarily transferees by operation of law would include the following persons<sup>1</sup> :

- (1) In the case of a deceased decree-holder, his legal representatives.
- (2) In the case of an insolvent debtor the Official Assignee or Official Receiver.
- (3) The purchaser of a decree at a court-sale.

The following are also some of the instances of transfer by operation of law :

(1) A obtains a decree against X. B, his son, sues A for partition and obtains a decree for 1/5th share of the decree obtained by A. B is entitled to apply for execution as transferee by operation of law.<sup>2</sup>

(2) A, a trustee, obtained a decree for rent against certain tenants. A filed another suit and obtained therein a declaration that the trust was incapable of being executed. It was held that thereafter the original owner of the properties could apply to execute the decree for rent without actual assignment.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Where, on the revocation of a probate of a will, the minor son of the testator succeeds to the estate, he is entitled to execute the decree obtained by the executrix.<sup>4</sup>

(4) A mortgagee who has obtained a final decree for foreclosure against the mortgagor who in turn has obtained a decree for possession of the immovable properties comprised in the mortgage, is an assignee by operation of law.<sup>5</sup>

(5) Where a mortgage is foreclosed and a pre-emptor obtains a decree for pre-emption of the same properties, he is a transferee of the foreclosure decree.<sup>6</sup>

(6) A holder of a certificate of administration granted under Section 3 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 is a transferee by operation of law.<sup>7</sup>

For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>8</sup>

The words 'operation of law' cannot apply to a case where a person has become the owner of a decree by some transaction inter vivos.<sup>9</sup> If a decree obtained by a member of a joint Hindu family is allotted to another member at a family partition, the latter is not a transferee by operation of law and, therefore, must get an assignment in writing from the decree-holder to enable him to apply under this rule.<sup>10</sup> The High Court of Lahore has held in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that where three brothers obtained a joint decree in their favour and at a family partition the decree was allotted to the share of one of the brothers, he could apply under this rule to execute the whole decree and that Rule 15 ante would not apply to such a case. A person does not become a transferee by operation of law from a decree-holder by merely obtaining another decree against him.<sup>12</sup> Thus, where R, the widow of G, obtained a decree in respect of a debt due to the estate of G and in a separate suit against R, D obtained a declaration that he was adopted to G, and that he was entitled to his estate, it was held that D was not an assignee by operation of law and was not therefore entitled to

The Official Liquidator of a company is merely an agent of the Court for the purposes of the liquidation of the company; he is not a transferee of any decree that may have been passed in favour of the company.<sup>16</sup>

6. Benamidar. — A obtains a decree against B and transfers it to C benami for D. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> that D is the person entitled to execute the decree, that C, not being the real transferee, cannot apply under this rule, and that a mere application by him for execution cannot be held to be one in "accordance with law" for the purposes of limitation, but that it will be one in "accordance with law" if, with the permission of the Court, he is allowed to execute the decree.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, the High Courts of Madras,<sup>3</sup> Lahore<sup>4</sup> and Patna<sup>5</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>6</sup> have held that the "transferee" referred to in this rule is the transferee named as such in the transfer, and that the real owner is not entitled to apply. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> and the Chief Court of Lower Burma<sup>8</sup> have also held that the benamidar is entitled to apply, without deciding whether the real owner can or cannot do so. The Calcutta High Court also has held in a recent case, a similar view.<sup>9</sup>

Where the transferee of a decree dies and thereupon his heirs and a person alleging that the transferee was only a benamidar for him apply separately to execute the decree, the Court has got power under Section 47, sub-section (3) to enquire who is the representative of the deceased and the question of benami can be gone into in execution proceedings.<sup>10</sup>

7. Part transfer of a decree. — Under Section 232 of the old Code it was held that the transferee of the interest of any one of several joint decree-holders in the decree could apply to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup> This principle has been given effect to in the present Code by adding in this rule the words "or if a decree has been passed jointly.....in the decree" (see Note 1 supra). Similarly, there is nothing in this rule or elsewhere which prohibits the transferee of a portion of the decree from applying under this rule.<sup>2</sup> The only qualification in such a case is that the transferee is in the position of a joint decree-holder and can execute the decree only subject to general provisions of law analogous to Rule 15 supra.<sup>3</sup> But the High Court of Bombay has, in the undermentioned case,<sup>4</sup> taken the contrary view that a transferee of a part of a decree is not entitled to execute his part of the decree, nor even the whole decree, since he cannot be regarded as a joint decree-holder. See also Notes to O. 21 R. 15.

8. Pledge of decree. — The transfer of a decree by way of a mortgage is an "assignment in writing" of a fractional interest in the decree and the mortgagee is, therefore, entitled to apply under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

9. Assignment of rent decrees under the Tenancy Acts. — Section 148, clause (o) of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) provides that, notwithstanding anything contained in Section 232, Civil Procedure Code (of 1882), an application for the execution of a decree for arrears of rent shall not be made by an assignee of the decree, unless the landlord's interest in the land has become vested in him.<sup>1</sup> The word "assignee" in that Section refers only to purchasers for consideration and does not include a person in whom the legal estate is vested by an act of the owner, as for instance, a trustee, who has no independent interest in the property.<sup>2</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that a Court executing a rent decree cannot refuse execution when the assignment had been recognised by the Court before the Tenancy Act came into force.

A provision similar to that in Section 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has been made also by Section 198 (k) of the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913). By Schedule II, List II of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) it is provided that no application for the execution of a decree shall be made by an assignee of the decree unless the assignor's interest in the land to which it relates has become and is vested in such assignee.

10. Transfer, when takes effect. — The transfer of a decree made by an instrument in writing takes effect from the date of such instrument, irrespective of its recognition by the Court on an application made to it under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Subsequently two days before sale, A reported that the decree had been satisfied by payment. D intervened and objected to the record of satisfaction being made. It was held that if his transfer was true, he was a representative of A and the matter must be enquired into: Dwar Buksh v. Fatik Jali, I. L. R. 26 Calcutta 250.

Thereupon O, claiming under an assignment of the decree in writing from M prior to R's attachment, sued R for the recovery of the money drawn by him. It was held that O's title to the decree was complete on the date of the assignment and therefore prevailed as against R's attachment: Co-operative Town Bank of Padigan v. Raman Chettiar, I. L. 11. Rights of the transferee. — Section 232 of the old Code contained the words "and if that Court thinks fit, the decree may be executed." It was, therefore, held that the executing Court had a discretion to allow or to refuse an application made by the transferee.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code, those words have been omitted and the transferee's right to execution does not depend upon the discretion of the Court.<sup>3</sup>

Where a transfer is recognized by the Court on an application under this rule, the transferee is entitled to execute the decree as if the application were made by the original decree-holder.<sup>3</sup> The absence of consideration for the assignment of a decree is immaterial and will not deprive the assignee of his rights to execute the decree, provided the assignment is not a sham transaction.<sup>4</sup>

Note 11

It has already been mentioned in Notes to O. 21 R. 10 ante that the person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is the person entitled to execution. Therefore, where the transferee of a decree does not apply under this rule for execution, the executing Court is bound to allow execution at the instance of the transferor, even after the date of the transfer, till the transfer is recognized by the Court.<sup>5</sup>

The assignee of a decree can transfer it to another although the name of such assignee has not been substituted on the record.<sup>6</sup>

As to the right of the transferee to apply for execution, where the decree has been attached by the holder of a decree against the transferor, see Notes to O. 21 R. 53, infra.

Where an ex parte decree was assigned and the assignee did not take any step under this rule and thereafter on an application made by the defendant as against the original decree-holder alone the ex parte decree was set aside, it was held that the transferee could not proceed with the execution until he got an order cancelling the order setting aside the ex parte decree.<sup>7</sup>

12. Application for execution must be made to the Court which passed the decree. — An application by the transferee of a decree under this rule can be entertained only by the Court which passed the decree; the Court to which the decree has been transferred has no jurisdiction to entertain the same.<sup>1</sup> The reason is, as stated in Sheo Narain Singh v. Hurbans Lall, (1870) 14 W. R. 65 (66), that :

"It would lead to the greatest difficulties, if in one Court one party was recognised as being the holder of, and having the control over, a decree, and at the same time in another Court another party was recognised as being in that position."

Where, however, an application under this rule is made to the transferee Court and it recognises the transfer, it is only an irregularity which may be waived by acquiescence and if the judgment-debtor has, as a matter of fact, waived it, he cannot subsequently turn round and question the jurisdiction of the executing Court.<sup>3</sup>

As to whether a transferee can continue the execution proceedings initiated by the original decree-holder without a fresh application, see Note 19 infra.

Where a decree is passed in favour of a company which afterwards goes into liquidation, the Official Liquidator is not a transferee of the decree and hence, he can apply for the execution of the decree to the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution.<sup>3</sup>

Under the rules framed under the Act, the award is transferred to the Court to be enforced as if it was a final decree passed by such Court — Though Registrar is himself a Court for certain purposes, in the absence of any rules in the matter, the executing Court must be presumed to be empowered to recognize the transfer—In any case, where assignment was recognized after due notice to judgment-debtor it is only an irregularity.)

14. Notice to transferor and judgment-debtor. — The provisions of this rule as to notice are imperative; the giving of notice of the application, to the assignor and to the judgment-debtor, is an indispensable condition of jurisdiction and the failure to give it renders all the proceedings in execution void as against them.<sup>1</sup> It has, however, been held that if the persons directly interested waive their right, acknowledge the validity of the assignment and raise no objection so far as the execution proceedings are concerned, non-compliance with the technical requirements of this rule will not render an execution sale a nullity.<sup>2</sup> Under the amendment of this rule by the Lahore High Court, notice to the judgment-debtor is not necessary.<sup>3</sup>

Where the assignee applied under this rule for notices to the assignor and the judgment-debtor and also for attachment of a certain property, and the notice as well as the warrant of attachment were issued together, it was held that the attachment was illegal inasmuch as the objections of the judgment-debtor were not heard at that time.<sup>4</sup> Where, in an application under this rule by the assignee of a mortgage decree, notice is given only to the mortgagor and not to the subsequent mortgagee who was also a judgment-debtor under the decree, the latter will not be bound by such execution and the auction-purchaser will acquire only the rights of the mortgagor, but not those of the subsequent mortgagee.<sup>5</sup>

The notice that is to be given under this rule is of the application for execution and not of the assignment.<sup>6</sup> But a written notice is not always necessary; if the judgment-debtor is present in Court at the time the order on the application is made, and has thus notice of the application, the fact that no written notice was given will not vitiate the proceedings.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 14-18

The object of issuing notice under this rule is to determine once for all and in the presence of all the parties the validity of the instrument of transfer. It is therefore not necessary that notice must be issued on every subsequent application by the transferee under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

Where the Court which passed the decree substitutes the name of the alleged transferee of the decree on the record and transfers the decree to another Court for execution, the latter Court must presume that the Court passing the decree has complied with the provisions of this rule.<sup>9</sup>

If the judgment-debtor is dead when the assignee applies for execution, the notice required by this rule may be served on his legal representatives.<sup>10</sup> If the original decree-holder becomes insolvent, the Official Receiver will be entitled to notice.<sup>11</sup>

In the case of a transfer by operation of law, it is not necessary that the notice referred to in the first proviso to this rule should be given.<sup>12</sup>

15. Objections to be heard. — After the service of the notice mentioned in the first proviso to this rule, the Court is bound to hear the objections, if any, of the transferor and of the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> As has been already mentioned in Note 11, it is not a valid objection that the assignment is not supported by consideration.<sup>2</sup> Nor can the judgment-debtor raise the plea that the decree is not valid.<sup>3</sup> As to the right of the judgment-debtor to plead an uncertified payment or adjustment, see Note 23 to O. 21 R. 2.

A held a decree against B and B had a decree against A. A attached in execution of his decree the decree which B had against him. Thereafter, B assigned the decree to C. C applied under this rule. It was held that A could take objection to the execution of the decree on the ground that under Section 64 ante, the assignment of the decree to C was void.<sup>4</sup>

An assignment of a decree is not valid as against the judgment-debtor until the debtor has had notice of the assignment and, therefore, any payment made to the original decree-holder before notice is valid as against the transferee.<sup>5</sup>

The failure of the judgment-debtor to object to the validity of the assignment when an application under this rule is made will preclude him, under general principles of res judicata, from raising such objection at a subsequent stage of the proceedings.<sup>6</sup>

16. Transfer of decree for payment of money against two or more persons to one of them.— It is a general principle of law that when one of the persons jointly liable under a decree unites in himself the two opposite characters of creditor and joint debtor in respect of the whole decretal debt, the effect is to extinguish the liability of all the co-judgment-debtors under the decree.<sup>1</sup> The second proviso to this rule is based on this general principle, and provides that, in such a case, the transferee cannot enforce the decree by execution against his co-debtors.<sup>2</sup> On the same principle, where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons and the interest of one of such decree-holders devolves upon a judgment-debtor, the decree is extinguished pro tanto.<sup>3</sup> When the alleged transferee of a decree for money is found to be the benamidar of one of the judgment-debtors, the Court is bound, under the second proviso to this rule, to refuse to allow the assignee to execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors.<sup>4</sup> But it has been held that where the judgment-debtor did not raise the objection when notice was issued to him under the first proviso to this rule, he cannot subsequently raise the objection.<sup>5</sup> But an agreement between the decree-holder and some of the judgment-debtors that the decree-holder should execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors and pay the amount realized to them in consideration of the fact that they have paid the amount in advance, does not fall under the prohibition in this rule.<sup>6</sup>

This proviso does not make the assignment of a decree in favour of one of several judgment-debtors invalid in law; it only provides that the transferee is not entitled to enforce his rights by execution.<sup>7</sup> His remedy is, therefore, to sue his co-judgment-debtors for contribution having regard to the proportion in which they were bound inter se to satisfy the decree.<sup>8</sup>

The words "decree for the payment of money against two or more persons" mean a decree against two or more persons jointly.

Illustration

A decree directed that N should pay Rs. 90 and Rs. 11-5-3 as costs, and A should pay Rs. 30 with Rs. 3-12-4 as costs. A afterwards took an assignment of the decree in writing and applied to execute it against N to the extent of Rs. 90 and costs. It was held that the decree for money so far as it related to Rs 90 and costs was not a decree against several persons, but against one person N, and therefore A could execute it.<sup>9</sup>

The second proviso to this rule does not apply to the converse case of the decree-holder acquiring a share in the estate of one of the judgment-debtors. The decree-holder is, however, bound to give credit for a proportionate amount of the decree.<sup>10</sup>

The proviso applies whether the transfer of the decree is by act of parties or by operation of law.<sup>11</sup>

It has been held by the Rangoon High Court that where a decree for the payment of money has been passed against two or more persons and one of them dies, his legal representative does not become a "judgment-debtor" and the transfer of the decree to him is not a transfer to which proviso 2 applies.<sup>12</sup>

17. "Decree for the payment of money." — The second proviso to this rule does not apply to decrees other than money decrees.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it does not apply to mortgage decrees for sale and therefore, an assignment of a mortgage decree in favour of one of the judgment-debtors does not extinguish the decree.<sup>2</sup> But, in such cases, the decretal amount that can be recovered from the other judgment-debtors will be reduced proportionately.<sup>3</sup>

The expression "decree for money" in Section 232 of the old Code (corresponding to this rule) was interpreted by the High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta to mean a personal decree for the payment of money. Thus, a decree against a legal

The High Court of Allahabad<sup>6</sup> has in the undermentioned case held that the substitution of the expression "for the payment of money" for the words "for money" in the proviso is intended to emphasise the fact that the proviso is confined to cases of personal decrees. On the other hand, the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>7</sup> has held that this is an unduly narrow interpretation of the rule and that it is immaterial whether the assignee decree-holder is one against whom a personal money decree has been passed or one who has been directed to pay the decretal debt out of the assets in his hands.

For meaning of "decree for payment of money," see Note 6 to Section 73 ante.

It was held that A, by attaching S's decree, did not become an assignee thereof, that the prohibition in this rule did not therefore apply to such a case and that A was entitled to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup>

19. Application for substitution by transferee. — A transferee from a decree-holder can only apply under this rule to execute the decree; an application merely for recognising him as transferee is legally incompetent and must be rejected.<sup>1</sup> It is not also necessary for the validity of the proceedings that the substitution of the name of the transferee is actually made.<sup>2</sup> All that is necessary is that the transferee should merely file his application for execution of the decree setting out either in it or in an affidavit filed in support thereof that he is such a transferee; thereupon the Court orders the application for execution to proceed or rejects it.<sup>3</sup> But, although a separate application by the transferee of a decree merely for substitution in place of the original decree-holder is not formally required under the Code, the prayer for such substitution is necessarily implied in an application by him for execution of the decree under O. 21 R. 16 and the substitution of his name is, in practice, generally made before the execution is proceeded with.<sup>4</sup>

Where, during the pendency of execution proceedings, the decree-holder dies or transfers the decree by an assignment in writing, can the transferee apply under this rule to continue the execution proceedings? It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Sind and Peshawar that it is open to the transferee either to apply for continuing the proceedings in execution or to make a fresh application.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that a pending execution application does not abate by reason of the death or devolution of any interest of the decree-holder and, therefore, the transferee can apply by virtue of Section 146 and this rule. Similarly, where the decree-holder dies while his application is pending in a Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution, his legal representatives may either apply to the Court which passed the decree for fresh execution after bringing their names on the record, or may apply to the executing Court for continuing the proceedings, subsequently producing from the Court which passed the decree the necessary order under this rule.<sup>6</sup> According to the High Court of Allahabad,<sup>7</sup> however, the transferee must apply, whenever he does apply, for fresh execution, even when the application by his predecessor is pending.

Though an application by the transferee merely for substitution of his name is not competent, still it is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act so as to give a fresh starting point of time.<sup>8</sup> In cases governed by Article 183 of the Limitation Act, the order of the Court allowing the transferee to execute the decree after recognition of his transfer will operate as a revivor and be a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>9</sup> The mere issue of a notice under this rule without a decision of the Court that the decree is executable will not, however, operate as a revivor.<sup>10</sup>

Section 47, sub-section (3) provides that a question as to whether any person is, or is not the representative of a party shall, for the purposes of Section 47, be determined by the Court, i. e., the Court executing the decree. The provision in Section 244 of the old Code corresponding to this sub-section was introduced in that Section by the Amending Act, VII of 1888 and ran as follows :

"If a question arises as to who is the representative of a party for the purposes of this Section, the Court may either stay execution of decree until the question has been determined by a separate suit, or itself determine the question by an order under this Section."

It was held in cases arising before the date of the amendment that a question as to the validity of the transfer of a decree entitling the transferee to execute the decree was not one within S. 244 and that a suit raising such question was not barred.<sup>1</sup> In one class of cases arising after the date of the said amendment it was held that where an application by the transferee under S. 232 of the old Code (O. 21 R. 16) was rejected, the transferee could not be considered to be the representative of the decree-holder and that the question of the validity of the transfer not being thus "between the parties or their representatives" was not one within S. 244 and could be agitated in a separate suit by the transferee.<sup>2</sup> In a second class of cases it was held that the above amendment left two courses open to the Court, namely, of either determining the question in execution itself or of referring the parties to a separate suit, and that a mere dismissal of an application under S. 232 did not bar a suit by the transferee for declaration of his right.<sup>3</sup> In a third class of cases it was held that the bar of suit in respect of questions falling within the first sentence of S. 244 could not be reasonably extended to cases falling under the amendment, and a suit was, therefore, not barred.<sup>4</sup>

In view of the present sub-rule (3) it is now clear that a suit raising such a question for the purposes of execution is barred.<sup>5</sup> The High Court of Lahore<sup>6</sup> has, however, taken a contrary view relying on Bommanapati Veerappa v. Chintakunta Srinivasa, I. L. R. 26 Madras 264, a decision under the old Code. It is submitted that the decision cannot be accepted as correct. But, where the dispute as to the validity of the assignment of the decree is one purely between the decree-holder and the person claiming to be the assignee, the question being purely one between a party and his own representative, does not fall under Section 47 and a separate suit to agitate the question is not barred.<sup>7</sup> See Notes 5 and 27 to Section 47.

Where a transfer of a decree is not recognized by the executing Court, the transferee is entitled to sue the assignor for refund of the money received by him for the assignment.<sup>8</sup> But the assignee is not entitled to treat the assignment in his favour

Sub-rule (2). See Note 3.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "may allow it to be amended" have been replaced by the words "may allow the defect to be remedied." The object is to make the rule clear and comprehensive so as to include cases of defects such as omission to file a copy of the decree.

2. Sub-rule (2) is new. See Note 3, infra.

2. Procedure on receiving an application for execution. — Sub-rule (1) prescribes the procedure to be followed on receiving an application for execution of a decree. It casts a duty upon the Court to ascertain whether such of the requirements of Rules 11 to 14 as are applicable have been complied with or not. If they are not complied with, the Court can either reject the application at once or allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time fixed.<sup>1</sup> If it does neither, it cannot, after the period of limitation for execution has expired, reject the application without giving the decree-holder an opportunity to amend the application.<sup>2</sup> Under this rule the executing Court has got a discretion to allow the necessary amendments.<sup>3</sup>

3. Amendment and limitation. — This rule contemplates the amendment of defects in the execution application before admission and registration. But supposing the Court overlooks the defects and registers the application, can they be subsequently amended during the pendency of the application? The answer to this depends upon the question whether the decree is or is not barred by limitation on the date of the amendment. If there is no bar of limitation, the amendment can, according to the Patna High Court, be allowed.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that a substantive fresh application can be entertained on that date, and that there is nothing which prevents the Court from treating the amended application as a fresh application for execution.<sup>2</sup> A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has, on the other hand, held in Asgar Ali v. Troilokyanath, I. L. R. 17 Calcutta 631 (F. B.), that "Section 245 by implication excludes the power of the Court to amend after admission and registration." It was held by the Patna High Court in Ram Sumran v. Ram Bahadur, AIR 1923 Patna 224, that the said observations should be understood only as referring to the particular case before the Full Bench where the decree was barred on the date when the defect (viz., omission to file a list of property) was sought to be amended. The decision in Asgar Ali's case was distinguished by the Calcutta High Court itself in a recent decision<sup>3</sup> in which it was held that even after an execution application is registered, the Court has jurisdiction to allow an amendment of the application, provided the period of limitation for the application for execution has not expired.

Where, however, on the date when the defect is sought to be amended the decree would be barred by limitation, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether or not an amendment can be allowed. On the one hand, the High Court of Calcutta<sup>4</sup> holds that no amendment is permissible on the ground that the Court is not empowered under the rule to allow such an amendment. The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>5</sup> also has held that an application for execution cannot be allowed to be amended after the period of limitation for the application has expired. On the other hand, the High Court of Madras<sup>6</sup> holds that the Court can allow such an amendment under sub-rule (1) and that such amendment relates back to the date of the application. The reasoning of the Madras High Court is that the law casts a duty upon the Court to notice the defects in the application before admission and if the Court had done its duty properly, the defects could have been remedied within time, and that the decree-holder should not be made to suffer for the failure of the Court to do its duty. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>7</sup> Lahore<sup>8</sup> and Patna<sup>9</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar<sup>10</sup> have also allowed the defects to be amended, though the decree had become barred on the date of the amendment. The Bombay High Court<sup>11</sup> has also held that the Court has power to allow an application for execution to be amended even after the expiry of the period of limitation for such application.

Sub-rule (1) refers only to the requirements of Rules 11 to 14. Consequently the rule does not apply where the defect in the execution application is one which has no

Notes 3-5

Effect of amendment. — In the absence of any provision under the old Code corresponding to sub-rule (2), there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an amendment took effect only from the date of the amendment or from the date of the application, and whether the original application which was defective could be considered as being in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 179, clause 4 of the Limitation Act of 1877 (Article 182, clause 5 of the present Limitation Act of 1908) so as to operate as a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>14</sup> Under sub-rule (2) of this rule it is now clear, that the application, though defective, when presented should be deemed to be in accordance with law when the defect is subsequently amended and the amendment dates back to the original date of the application.<sup>15</sup> The effect of the sub-rule is to preclude the judgment-debtor from raising any objection at a later stage on the ground that the application was not in accordance with law at the time it was presented.<sup>16</sup> If, however, the Court without giving an opportunity to amend rejects the application, the rejected application cannot be considered to be in accordance with law.<sup>17</sup> Similarly, where the subsequent application is not one for amendment of the original application but is really an independent application for execution asking for a relief not included in the original application, sub-rule (2) cannot apply and the subsequent application cannot be deemed as presented on the date of the original application.<sup>18</sup>

As to whether an application returned for amendment and not re-presented is one in accordance with law, see Note 4 below.

4. Non-compliance with the order of amendment within the time fixed.

— Sub-rule (1) empowers the Court to fix a time for the amendment of the execution application. If the party fails to amend within the time fixed or such further time as the Court may extend, the proper course is to reject the application.<sup>1</sup> If, notwithstanding the decree-holder's failure to amend the defect within the time fixed, the Court does not reject the application, it is not precluded from allowing a fresh application for amendment at a subsequent stage.<sup>2</sup> decree-holder does not re-present it within the time fixed, the question arises whether such an application can be treated as one in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 182, clause 5 of the Limitation Act so as to operate as a fresh starting point of limitation for execution. The answer to this question depends upon another question, namely, whether the defect for the amendment of which the application was returned was a material defect, without the amendment of which further proceedings could not be taken, or was only a formal defect.<sup>3</sup> In the latter case the application will be one in accordance with law,<sup>4</sup> while in the former case it will not.<sup>5</sup>

Where the application is returned not for any defect in Rules 11 to 14 but for some other defect, it has been held by the Allahabad and the Patna High Courts that the application will be one in accordance with law.<sup>6</sup>

5. Procedure on admission of application. — Sub-rule (4) prescribes the procedure to be followed after admission of the application. If it is not in any way defective the Court is bound to order execution according to the nature of the application.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if the decree-holder prays for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, the Court cannot refuse the same and direct him to proceed against the property in the first instance.<sup>2</sup> No enquiry as to whether the property sought to be proceeded against belongs to the judgment-debtor is contemplated under the rule before execution can be ordered.<sup>3</sup>

7. Execution of rent decrees under the Tenancy Acts. — A landlord who obtains a decree for arrears of rent of an under-tenure is not restricted by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act to execute the decree in the first instance by sale of the under-tenure. He is at liberty to execute it in the ordinary manner against the person or property of his judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> Section 163 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, VIII of 1885, and Section 217 of the Bihar and Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913, prescribe that the Court shall, on the admission of the application for execution, order the issue simultaneously of the order of attachment and the proclamation for sale.

8. Execution of maintenance decree. — A decree declaring a person's right to maintenance at a certain rate and also directing the payment of such maintenance by future instalments is not a mere declaratory decree and can be executed as each instalment falls due.<sup>1</sup>

Where a decree awarding future maintenance also charges certain property for the due payment thereof, the decree-holder can, if there is default, apply for an order for the sale of the property or file a fresh suit to enforce the charge.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Calcutta<sup>3</sup> has held that, to avoid the difficulty of a further suit, the Court can provide in the decree for maintenance for the appointment of a receiver with directions to take possession of the property in case of default and sell the same and pay the maintenance from out of the sale proceeds.

9. Value of property attached. — Under the proviso to the rule the Court should call upon the decree-holder to specify the approximate value of the property to be attached, to see that the value of the property to be attached corresponded as nearly as may be with the amount due under the decree.<sup>1</sup> But, if more property than is necessary is attached and sold and a purchaser buys the same without notice of the fact that the amount realized by sale of the other plots was more than sufficient to satisfy the decree, the sale in his favour cannot be set aside.<sup>2</sup>

10. Appeal. — An appeal lies against an order returning an execution application on the ground that the decree-holder is not entitled to calculate the amount due to him on the basis adopted in the petition, and directing him to amend the same.<sup>1</sup> But an order allowing the decree-holder to withdraw the execution proceedings does not determine anything under Section 47 and is not appealable.<sup>2</sup>

1. The words "where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees in separate suits" in sub-rule (1) are new.
2. Sub-rule (4) is new.
3. Illustration (d) is new.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule provides that cross-decrees for the payment of money shall be set-off against each other. In order that this rule may apply the following conditions must be satisfied —

- (1) The decrees must be for the payment of definite sums of money. (Note 3.)
- (2) They must have been passed in separate suits.<sup>1</sup> (Note 4.)
- (3) The decree-holder in one must be the judgment-debtor in the other.
- (4) The parties must fill the same character in both suits. (Note 6.)
- (5) Both decrees must be capable of execution<sup>2</sup> and must be so at the same time and by the same Court. (Notes 7 and 8.)
- (6) Applications should have been made to the Court for execution of both decrees. (Note 8.)

If the above conditions are satisfied the set-off should be worked out as follows —

- (1) If the amounts under the two decrees are equal, then the two decrees shall satisfy each other and full satisfaction shall be entered upon both.
- (2) If the amounts under the two decrees are not equal, then full satisfaction shall be entered upon the decree for the smaller amount, and part satisfaction upon the decree for the larger amount; and execution shall be allowed only under the latter decree and for so much only as remains due after the set-off. (Note 9.)

A right to set-off under this rule cannot be defeated by an assignment of either decree (Note 10) or by its attachment by the other decree-holder,<sup>3</sup> or by a

1. Sale of property situate in more than one jurisdiction. — As has been seen in Note 8 to Section 17, ante, it is a general principle of law that no Court can execute a decree in which the subject-matter of the suit or of the application for execution is property situate entirely outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. This rule is an exception to that general rule.<sup>1</sup> Even before this provision was enacted in this Code, it was held by the Calcutta High Court<sup>2</sup> that where property attached in execution of a decree forms one estate and is situate within the territorial jurisdiction of two or more Courts, any one of such Courts has jurisdiction to sell the entire estate. But where the Court to which the decree is to be sent is situate in a different district, it should be sent to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed. Where this procedure is not followed and the decree is sent direct to the Court subordinate to the District Court in another district, that Court cannot execute the decree.<sup>2</sup> It should not, however, dismiss the application, but should send the papers back to the Judge who sent them for adopting the correct procedure.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned cases<sup>4</sup> it was held that the failure to send the decree through the District Court is a mere irregularity which can be waived.

The High Court of Madras<sup>5</sup> has framed a rule — Rule 161A of the Civil Rules of Practice — under which the transferee Court is to return the papers to the transmitting Court, if no steps are taken by the decree-holder within six months from the date of transfer. This rule is one of convenience made with the object of inducing decree-holder to take early steps to execute the decree; and a violation thereof does not render the proceedings taken after six months void ab initio.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The documents required to be transmitted by the Court sending the decree for execution to another Court are —

- (1) a copy of the decree,
- (2) a certificate as required by clause (b), and
- (3) a copy of any order for execution that may have been passed.<sup>1</sup>

As to the form of certificate of non-satisfaction, see Appendix E, Form No. 4.

Where a Court, upon an application for transfer of the decree for execution to another Court, places a wrong construction on the decree and mentions in the certificate that a particular amount is due, the statement is ultra vires and the judgment-debtor need not have it amended by the transferor Court.<sup>2</sup> In sending the certificate of non-satisfaction, the Court which passed the decree is not called upon to consider whether the decree is still capable of execution; that is a question for determination by the transferee Court when a proper application for execution is presented to it.<sup>3</sup>

When once an order is made sending a decree to another Court for execution, that by itself is sufficient to entitle the decree-holder to apply to the Court to which

Notes 1-5a

the decree is sent for execution.<sup>4</sup> Where an application for execution has already been made to the Court which passed the decree, a fresh application for execution need not be made to the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution.<sup>5</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup>

2. Certificate, effect of not sending. — The omission to send the certificate as required by clause (b) of this rule is a mere irregularity and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution to entertain the application for execution.<sup>1</sup> Nor is it a ground for an application under O. 21 R. 90 to set aside a sale.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, it has been held that a mere mistake in the certificate of non-satisfaction as to the number of the suit or the names of the judgment-debtors will not affect the jurisdiction of the execution Court to proceed with the execution.<sup>3</sup>

3. Presumption as to compliance with the Rule. — Where the validity of an attachment effected by the transferee Court is attacked on the ground that no copy of the decree was sent by the Court which passed the decree, it lies upon the judgment-debtor to prove that it was not transmitted, the maxim applicable being omnia præsumentur rite esse acta — all things are presumed to have been rightly and duly performed.<sup>1</sup> Where a decree was passed by a Judge in the capacity of a Small Cause Judge and an application for execution of the decree was filed before the same Judge acting on the original side, it was held that even though there was no formal order of transfer, the provisions of this rule were sufficiently complied with.<sup>2</sup>

4. Copy of any order. — The words "copy of any order for the execution of the decree" in clause (c) mean a copy of any subsisting order and not a copy of an order for execution in the previous execution application.<sup>1</sup>

5. Small Cause Courts. — This rule applies to proceedings in the Small Cause Courts in the mofussil and if there is no sufficient property within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court to satisfy the decree, it may be sent to another Court.<sup>1</sup>

5a. Notice to judgment-debtor. — Where the application for transmission of the decree for execution to another Court is made when the decree is already under execution in the Court which passed it, notice should be given to the judgment-debtor and the transfer should not be ordered unless there is sufficient cause to order simultaneous execution.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 17 to Section 39 ante.

in the transferee Court.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> it was held that the transferee Court is not debarred from taking cognizance of objections as to jurisdiction of which the Court which transferred the decree could take cognizance. See also Note 1 to Section 42, ante.

This rule dispensing with the further proof of jurisdiction than the certificate of the transmitting Court, applies only to the decrees of British Indian Courts and not to foreign decrees transmitted to British Indian Courts for execution under Section 44; the reason is that Section 44 "does not remove the decree of a Native State falling within its purview from the category of foreign judgments. It merely allows the procedure by which such a judgment can have effect given to it in British India." Notwithstanding the Section, such a decree still remains a foreign judgment, and its effect is removed by showing want of jurisdiction in the Court which passed it. The Court executing the decree is, therefore, not precluded from ascertaining whether a foreign Court had jurisdiction merely because that Court has itself decided an issue upon that point in its own favour.<sup>5</sup>

Where an Assistant Judge is invested with all the powers of a District Judge within any part of the district of such Judge, he is the "District Court" in such part for the purposes of this rule.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Competent jurisdiction." — There is a conflict of opinion as to the meaning of the expression "Court of competent jurisdiction." It was held by the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that the expression refers to territorial competence and therefore if the attached property is transferred from the jurisdiction of the transferee Court to some other Court, the sale by the transferee Court after the transfer of the property from its jurisdiction, is not valid even though the Court had jurisdiction over such property at the time of the transfer. But in a recent case<sup>2</sup> the same High Court has held that the expression means "competent to sell in execution."

3. Limitation.

1. Scope. — It has been held in a very early case of the Calcutta High Court<sup>1</sup> that the functions of the High Court, in respect of the execution of a decree of another Court, are limited to effecting execution and to the matters arising out of the proceedings in execution, and that the question whether or not the applicant had a right to obtain execution, must be judged by the Court in which the record was.

Where a decree is transferred under this rule to the High Court for execution, the High Court cannot make the decree payable in instalments.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that though the decree could be executed as if it was passed by itself, still the High Court is not the Court which passed the decree, which Court alone can act under O. 20 R. 11, ante.

2. Ordinary original civil jurisdiction, meaning of. — See Notes to Clause 12 of the Letters Patent of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras High Courts.

3. Limitation. — The period of limitation applicable to the execution of a decree transmitted by one Court to another for execution depends upon the character of the Court which passed the decree and not on the character of the Court executing it.<sup>1</sup> The manner of execution mentioned in this rule refers to the procedure under which the execution is to be had, and has no reference to the law of limitation; it simply applies the High Court machinery to the execution of the decree.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a decree passed by the Calcutta Small Cause Court was transferred to the High Court at Calcutta for execution, it was held that the period of limitation applicable to the decree was Article 182 of the Limitation Act and that it was not governed by the law of limitation relating to decrees of the High Court.<sup>3</sup>

APPLICATION FOR EXECUTION

O. 21 R. 10

R. 10. [S. 230, Para. 1.] Where the holder of a decree desires to execute it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree or to the officer (if any) appointed in this behalf, or if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court then to such Court or to the proper officer thereof.

1. Successive applications for execution. — The Code does not bar a succession of applications for execution.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where an application for execution is withdrawn by the decree-holder without leave to apply again having been granted by the Court, a second application is not barred; Section 141 cannot be invoked so as to apply O. 23 R. 1, since that Section does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, O. 2 R. 2 does not apply to proceedings in execution,<sup>3</sup> and when a decree gives reliefs of a different character, such as a decree for possession and a decree for costs, there is nothing which prevents separate and successive applications for execution as regards each of them.<sup>4</sup>

A decree in a suit for money, for principal and interest, is a single money decree and it is not permissible to levy execution thereof piecemeal. The rule is that a party having a right to execute a decree for money presently payable must enforce the whole decree at the same time and if enforcement is sought for a lesser sum, he must be taken to waive his right to levy execution for the balance.<sup>5</sup> According to the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur, where an application for execution of part of a decree is made, the judgment-debtor is bound to raise an objection at once and if he fails to do so, the piecemeal execution will not be invalid and a subsequent application is not barred inasmuch as O. 2 R. 2 does not apply to applications in execution.<sup>6</sup>

A subsequent application for execution in respect of reliefs different from those claimed in a prior application cannot be said to be one in continuation of the prior application.<sup>7</sup>

2. Who may apply for execution. — It is only the decree-holder whose name is on the record that is entitled to apply for execution of the decree.<sup>1</sup> A defendant in a partition suit in which a decree has been passed is in the position of a decree-holder, and will be entitled to apply for execution.<sup>2</sup> In the case of decrees in representative suits, a person not on the record, but who was represented in the suit by the decree-holder on record, can apply to be brought on the record and to execute the decree.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, the representatives of a deceased decree-holder can apply to be brought on the record and to execute the decree.<sup>4</sup>

Where an application was made by the guardian ad litem of a minor after the latter had attained majority, but the latter ratified the application subsequently, it was held that the ratification rendered the application valid from the date of the ratification.<sup>5</sup>

Where a decree grants a relief to a person named in the decree, it has been held that such person so named can enforce the decree notwithstanding the fact that he is not party to the suit.<sup>6</sup>

As to the necessity for the production of succession certificate along with the application for execution where the decree-holder is dead, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

It has been held that an insolvent is not debarred from making an application for execution of a decree which he has obtained before his adjudication.<sup>8</sup>

Fresh vakalatnama, if necessary for execution proceedings. — Proceedings in execution are proceedings in continuation of the suit, and therefore a fresh authority is not required for a pleader to appear, act and plead on behalf of the decree-holder in execution proceedings, if he was authorized by a vakalatnama in the suit itself.<sup>9</sup> But an application for execution filed by a vakil who has no vakalat from the decree-holder at all is not one in accordance with law.<sup>10</sup>

Where an agent is authorized to apply for execution of a decree, he is also entitled to appeal against an order refusing to execute the decree.<sup>11</sup>

Joint application for execution. — Persons entitled to separate amounts under a decree may join in one application. Where, in such a case, one of them subsequently withdraws from the application, it may continue in the name of the other persons.<sup>12</sup>

clause 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> See also Section 42 Note 3. A transfer made in an irregular manner is not null and void and if the irregularity is not objected to, an application made to the transferee Court is in order.<sup>2</sup> Where a decree is transferred to another Court for execution, the mere fact that the transfer is made on the ground that the judgment-debtor has immovable property within the jurisdiction of such Court does not deprive such Court of the power to entertain an application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor.<sup>3</sup>

Where an order has been made by the Court which passed a decree for transfer to another Court, the decree-holder is entitled to apply for execution to the transferee Court, even before the copy of the decree has been received by the latter from the former Court.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the order of transfer is a judicial order and therefore takes effect from the date on which it was passed.

6a. Time of presentation of application for execution. — It is in the discretion of the Judge or officer appointed in that behalf to accept an application for execution beyond office hours.<sup>1</sup>

7. Executing Court cannot go behind the decree. — See Note 8 to Section 38.

8. Application for execution. — It has been already seen in Note 5 to Section 38, ante, that where a decree is reversed, modified or affirmed in appeal, the only decree capable of execution is the appellate decree. Therefore, if a decree of a lower Court is confirmed on appeal while execution proceedings are pending, a fresh application for execution is necessary.<sup>1</sup>

When a decree follows an attachment before judgment, O. 38 R. 11 does not exempt the plaintiff from making an application as required by this rule.<sup>2</sup>

An application under Section 39 for transfer of a decree is not an application for execution;<sup>3</sup> but is only an application to take some step-in-aid of execution.<sup>4</sup> It is necessary, however, even for this purpose that the application for transfer should have been made to the Court having jurisdiction in the matter.<sup>5</sup>

Where a decree-holder makes an application praying for a relief not granted by the decree, it is not an application which will save limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>6</sup> But an application which is merely incorrect in some respects would be one furthering execution.<sup>7</sup>

Where a decree is transferred for execution to another Court, it is the application for execution that initiates the proceedings in execution. The receipt of the decree on transfer is a mere ministerial act.<sup>8</sup>

9. Dismissal of application for default.— A Court has inherent power to dismiss an application for execution when the applicant fails, through his own laches, to put the Court in a position to proceed with the application.<sup>1</sup> But such dismissal does not bar a fresh application for execution.<sup>2</sup>

As to whether a Court has power to restore to the file an application dismissed for default, see Notes to Order 9 Rule 9.

1. Legislative changes. — Sub-rule (1) corresponds to Section 256 of the old Code and sub-rule (2) to Section 235. Sub-rule (3) is new and empowers the Court executing the decree to call upon the decree-holder to produce a certified copy of the decree.<sup>1</sup>

The following are the points of difference between sub-rule (1) and Section 256 —

- (1) Section 256 provided for immediate execution only where the amount decreed did not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees. This rule fixes no such limit.
- (2) Under Section 256 the Court could order immediate execution only by the issue of a warrant. Under this rule the order may be made even prior to the preparation of a warrant.
- (3) Under this rule execution cannot issue against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor as was possible under the old Code.
- (4) Under the old Code execution could be ordered if the judgment-debtor was "within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court." Under this rule it can be ordered only if he is within the precincts of the Court.

The following are the important alterations in sub-rule (2) —

- (1) The words "together with particulars of any cross-decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed" in clause (g) are new.
- (2) The words "and sale, or by the sale without attachment" in clause (j), sub-clause (ii) are new.
- (3) Sub-clause (iv), clause (j) is new.

2. Scope of the Rule. — An application for execution should be in writing except in the case dealt with under sub-rule (1), when it may be oral. Sub-rule (2) says what particulars a written application for execution shall contain. But every omission to comply with the said requirements is not necessarily such a defect as will vitiate the execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> Informalities of an immaterial character will not vitiate the proceedings.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the omission to mention the amount of costs<sup>3</sup> or giving a wrong suit number,<sup>4</sup> or making a mistake in the name of the judgment-debtor,<sup>5</sup> or omitting to state the names of all the persons interested in the decree,<sup>6</sup> or wrongly calculating the pleader's fee,<sup>7</sup> or the failure to draw up the petition in a tabular form,<sup>8</sup> is only an irregularity of an immaterial character which will not vitiate the proceeding. Where, however, the omissions relate to material particulars, the application cannot be considered to be one in accordance with law and cannot save limitation.<sup>9</sup> Whether an omission is material or not will depend upon the particular facts of each case.<sup>10</sup>

Where an application for execution complies with the requirements of O. 21, Rules 11 to 14, it is in accordance with law. Although in the absence of a succession certificate the decree-holder may not be entitled to realize the fruits of his decree, yet, the want of a succession certificate will not make the application for execution itself one not in accordance with law.<sup>11</sup> See also Note 2 to Order 21 Rule 10.

Where an application for execution is made, which is not in proper form or is otherwise defective, it is the duty of the Court to dispose of the application either by giving the decree-holder an opportunity to amend his application or by rejecting it.<sup>12</sup>

This rule prescribes the form for an application for execution. There is no particular form in which an application for the transfer of a decree for execution to another Court should be made. Such application need not contain the particulars mentioned in this rule. Where the application gives sufficient particulars of the decree sought to be transferred to indicate with precision the decree which the Court is to transfer, the application is one in accordance with law.<sup>13</sup>

2a. Applicability of the Rule to execution of decrees under other Acts.—

Under the Oudh Rent Act, XXII of 1886 (Section 146), the Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913 [Section 198 (j)] and the Madras Estates Land Act, I of 1908 [Section 192 (g)], the Court may order immediate execution, on the oral application of the decree-holder, as enacted in sub-rule (1) of this rule.

In applications for execution of decrees relating to immovable property under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1908, Section 210 (3) (b), as amended by Act VI of 1920, [Section 50 (1)], the application shall be accompanied by a certified copy of the decree, as provided in sub-rule (3) of this rule.

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

2b. "Decree for payment of money." — A decree, to come within the description of a decree for the payment of money, need not state the exact amount due. A decree under which the amount due has to be ascertained subsequently may be a decree for the payment of money.<sup>1</sup>

See also Note 6 to Section 73 ante.

3. Immediate execution — Sub-rule (1) — Privilege from arrest. — S. 135 ante deals with exemptions from arrest. But sub-section (3) thereof provides that "nothing in sub-section (2) shall enable a judgment-debtor to claim exemption from arrest under an order for immediate execution . . ."<sup>1</sup>

4. Verification of application. — The application for execution should be signed and verified by (a) the applicant, or (b) some other person acquainted with the facts of the case. Where there are several applicants it is not necessary that all of them should verify the application, even though some of them are not acquainted with the facts of the case.<sup>1</sup> Where an application for execution is verified by a person other than the decree-holder, all that is necessary is that the Court should be satisfied that he is acquainted with the facts of the case.<sup>2</sup>

Although this rule permits the signing and verification of an application for execution by some person other than the decree-holder, the application itself must be that of the decree-holder or his recognized agent or pleader.<sup>3</sup>

An application not signed and verified as required by this rule is a defective application which ought to be rejected.<sup>4</sup> Where the period of twelve years from the date of a decree expired when the Court was closed and the decree-holder presented an unverified petition for execution on the re-opening day, it was held by the High Court of Madras<sup>6</sup> that the petition ought to be rejected and not to be allowed to be amended.

5. Who may apply for execution. — See Notes to Order 21 Rule 10.

6. Date of the decree to be given—Clause (c). — The date of the decree is the date on which the judgment was pronounced.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to O. 20 R. 7. An error in the date of the decree or the omission to give it in an application for execution is not a material irregularity and will not affect the validity of the application.<sup>2</sup> It can be amended even after the period of limitation for execution has expired and the amendment so made will relate back to the date of the application.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree was, by mistake, dated 16th February 1929 instead of 11th February and the decree-holder was misled thereby and applied for execution on the 15th February 1932, it was held that the decree ought to be regarded as having been passed on the 16th February 1929 on the principle actus curiæ neminem gravabit — an act of the Court shall prejudice no man.<sup>4</sup>

7. Whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree—Clause (d). — It has been already mentioned in Note 5 to Section 38 that where an appeal is preferred against a decree and the decree is modified, reversed, or confirmed, it is the decree of the Appellate Court that is capable of execution. This clause requires that the application should state any modifications or reversals, etc., which the decree of the Appellate Court may have introduced in the decree of the lower Court.<sup>1</sup>

An omission to mention the particulars required by this clause does not render the application one not "in accordance with law."<sup>2</sup>

8. Payment or other adjustment—Clause (e). — The applicant for execution is bound to mention in the application any payment or adjustment made between the parties after decree.<sup>1</sup> Where a portion of the decretal amount has been deposited in Court with notice to the decree-holder, the latter must mention such fact in his application and can execute the decree only for the balance.<sup>3</sup> The non-mention of an uncertified payment out of Court in an application for execution does not, according to the High Court of Madras,<sup>3</sup> render it an application not "in accordance with law" within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>4</sup> has held that where the decree-holder deliberately omits to mention a certified adjustment, the application is not one "in accordance with law."

12. Mode in which the assistance of the Court is required — Clause (j). — An execution application which does not specify the manner in which the assistance of the Court is required is not an application in accordance with law.<sup>1</sup> So also is an application asking for a relief which the Court cannot grant inasmuch as the Court is asked to do something which it is not competent to do.<sup>2</sup>

The words "otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require" in clause (j) show that the modes of execution mentioned above are not exhaustive.<sup>3</sup> But where the decree-holder prays for a particular mode of execution, he cannot ask the Court to give a different mode of execution upon that application.<sup>4</sup>

This rule should be read with Section 51 ante and O. 40 R. 1, infra; and an order for the appointment of a receiver by way of execution of a decree must be deemed to be made under O. 40 R. 1 and must satisfy the requirements thereof.<sup>5</sup>

Where the property sought to be attached is inalienable under the law, the Court has no power to attach it; the reason is that attachment will be futile in such a case.<sup>6</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. Failure to annex inventory — Effect of.

1. Scope of the Rule.—This rule applies to moveables in the possession of third parties. When a third party has some moveables belonging to himself and others belonging to the judgment-debtor, an inventory is obviously necessary before an attachment can be made.<sup>1</sup> But, where a decree is passed under Section 52 of the Code against the legal representatives of a deceased debtor and the moveable property attached is in their possession, the rule has no application.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that the legal representatives themselves are the judgment-debtors and therefore the property sought to be attached cannot be said to be property belonging to, but not in the possession of, the judgment-debtor. No inventory is necessary where the property sought to be attached is in the possession of the judgment-debtor himself.<sup>3</sup>

2. Failure to annex inventory—Effect of.—Where a decree-holder fails to annex to the application for execution of his decree an inventory of the property to be attached with a reasonably accurate description of the same as required by this rule,

- (a) a description of such property sufficient to identify the same and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers; and
- (b) a specification of the judgment-debtor's share or interest in such property to the best of the belief of the applicant, and so far as he has been able to ascertain the same.

Local Amendment

RANGOON

The following shall be substituted for Rule 13:

"R. 13. (1) When application is made, for execution of a decree relating to immovable property included within the cadastral or Town Survey and the decree does not contain a plan of the property, or for execution of decree by the attachment and sale of such property, the application must be accompanied by a certified extract from the latest kwin or town map, with the boundary of the land in question marked with a distinctive colour. The particulars specified in the annexed instructions, which have been issued regarding the filling up of forms of process concerning immovable property, must also be furnished so far as they are not given in the plan. In the case of other immovable property, a plan is not required, but such of the particulars in the annexed instructions as can be given must be supplied:—

1. If the property to be sold is agricultural land which has been cadastrally surveyed and of which survey maps exist, the area, kwin number, latest holding number (if different kinds of holdings, e.g., rice land and garden holdings are numbered in different series, the kind of holding must be stated), field numbers (if the property does not coincide with one complete holding), year of kwin map from which the holding number is taken and revenue last assessed upon the land, must be given.

2. In the case of other agricultural land, the area and village tract within which it falls, distance and direction from nearest town or village and boundaries should be specified.

(In this case, it was held that it was not right to hold an application not in accordance with law merely because it did not contain an inventory of the property sought to be attached without considering whether such property was in the possession of the judgment-debtor or not.)

3. In the case of land in large towns the area, block or quarter, name or number, the lot number (if there are separate series of lots, the series should be stated, and where the land forms part only of a lot, particulars regarding that part), the holding number in the latest town survey map, if any, and year of the map, the rent or revenue last assessed on the land, must be given.

4. In the case of buildings situated in a large town when the land on which such buildings stand is not affected, the name or number of the street, or, if the street has neither name nor number, the quarter or block name or number, the number of the building in the street or if it has no number, the lot number must be given.

5. In the case of immovable property situated in a small town or village, such of the particulars in paragraphs 3 and 4 above as can be given should be given.

6. The purpose to which land or buildings are put, the material and age of buildings, all incumbrances and municipal taxes should be stated.

7. The judgment-debtor's share or interest in the property should be specified.
(2) The cost of the certified extract should be reckoned in the costs of the application."

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes. | 2. Specification of property.

1. Legislative changes. — This rule corresponds to the first paragraph of Section 237 of the old Code, except that the words "and in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers" have been newly added in clause (a).

The second paragraph of Section 237 requiring the list of properties to be verified has been omitted from this rule and reproduced in sub-rule (3) of Rule 66 of this Order.<sup>1</sup>

2. Specification of property. — The rule applies only to execution of money decrees, and not to decrees made upon a charge or a mortgage.<sup>1</sup>

The object of requiring the boundaries and numbers to be specified is to easily identify the property.<sup>2</sup> Clause (b) imposes a duty on the decree-holder to specify the judgment-debtor's share or interest, to the best of his belief.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the share is undivided it should be so specified.<sup>4</sup>

An application which does not contain the particulars required by this rule cannot be treated as an application in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act, unless the defects are remedied by amendment under Rule 17.<sup>5</sup> See also Notes to Rule 17, infra.

1. Legislative changes.

2. Applicability of the Rule.

3. Application for time to produce certified extracts is a step-in-aid of execution.

1. Legislative changes. — Section 238 of the old Code corresponding to this rule provided that "the application shall be accompanied by an authenticated extract from "the register of such office."<sup>1</sup> The present rule leaves it to the option of the Court to require the applicant to produce a certified extract.

2. Applicability of the Rule. — Where an application for sale is made in pursuance of a mortgage decree, a preliminary attachment of the mortgaged properties is not necessary, and therefore this rule does not apply to such a case; and a Court cannot dismiss the application for failure to produce the certified extract.<sup>1</sup> This rule applies to the proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, 1908, Section 210, as amended by Act VI of 1920, Section 50.

3. Application for time to produce certified extracts is a step-in-aid of execution. — An application by a decree-holder for time to produce the certified copies or extracts required by this rule is a step-in-aid of execution.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "or his or their representatives" in Section 231 of the old Code, after the words "one or more of such persons" have been omitted as unnecessary in view of the provisions of Section 146, ante.
2. The words "unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary" are new. See Note 6.

2. Scope of the Rule. — There are two rules of general application governing the execution of joint decrees in favour of several persons —

(1) One of the decree-holders alone cannot apply for execution of his share only of the decree, leaving the other decree-holders to take out execution for their shares.<sup>1</sup>

(2) One of the decree-holders alone cannot execute the whole decree so as to bind the other decree-holders by the result of such execution.

The first rule is based on the principle that the judgment-debtor should not be harassed by a number of applications for execution. As observed by Sir Barnes Peacock, C. J., in Haro Shankar Sandyal v. Tarak Ohandra Buttacharjee, 11 Suth. W. R. 488 at page 490 :

"Suppose there was a decree for a lac of rupees, it could not be contended that the decree-holder could assign it to a lac of assignees, so as to give to each of them power to take out execution for one rupee, his portion of it. Otherwise, there might be a lac of executions under the decree, a lac of seizures and a lac of sales under each one of which there can be no doubt that the judgment-debtor would suffer loss. If this were allowed, the judgment-debtor must necessarily be ruined."

Notes 2-3

The second rule is based on the principle that the interests of the other decree-holders should not be jeopardised, and also on the principle that all persons representing a single and indivisible right must be parties before the right can be adjudicated upon. See Note 7 to O. 1 R. 1.

This rule is an exception to the second of the two rules abovementioned, in that it provides that one of several joint decree-holders can execute, under certain circumstances, the whole decree. In order, however, to prevent the interests of the other decree-holders from being jeopardised, the Court is given power, and is indeed bound, to make such order as is necessary to safeguard such interests.<sup>2</sup>

3. "Where a decree has been passed jointly." — A decree directing the defendant to pay a certain sum of money to several persons specifying their shares therein is not a joint decree, even though the amount is made payable as an entire sum.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Patna has, however, in the undermentioned case,<sup>2</sup> expressed an obiter dictum that a decree does not cease to be a joint decree merely because the shares of the decree-holders in the decretal amount have been determined by the decree. According to the High Courts of Lahore and Madras, where a suit is filed in the name of a firm, the decree passed in the suit in favour of the firm must be held to be a decree passed jointly in favour of all the partners, since a firm name is only a compendious method of writing the names of all the partners.<sup>3</sup> But the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind has held that unless a declaration of the names of all the partners has been made under O. 30 R. 2, the decree in favour of the firm cannot be said to be a joint decree.<sup>4</sup>

This rule can apply only where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one.<sup>5</sup> Where a portion of a decree is transferred to another, either by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee is in the position of a joint decree-holder and the Court has got the inherent power to grant him relief in

4. "Any one or more of such persons may apply for the execution of the whole decree." — As has been seen in Note 2 above, this rule makes an exception to the general rule that all decree-holders must join in an application to execute the joint decree, and permits one or more of several joint decree-holders to apply for execution of the whole decree,<sup>1</sup> unless the decree imposes a condition to the contrary.<sup>2</sup> But it does not confer an unconditional right on one of the decree-holders to execute the decree. It is within the discretion of the Court to allow such execution and the Court will act only if it sees sufficient cause for allowing such a course to be taken.<sup>3</sup> It may allow other decree-holders to intervene in a pending execution, if it is not being properly conducted.<sup>4</sup> It is also in the discretion of the Court whether or not notice should be given to the other decree-holders or to the judgment-debtor before making an order for execution under this rule.<sup>5</sup> Where one of several decree-holders applies for execution and the others do not object to execution being granted to him, it is not for the judgment-debtor to say that sufficient steps have not been taken to safeguard the interests of the other decree-holders.<sup>6</sup>

When one of several joint decree-holders executes a decree, he executes the decree prima facie for the benefit of all, unless there is a direction by the Court or in the decree itself which permits execution for the benefit of the executing creditor alone.<sup>7</sup> Therefore, where one decree-holder executes a joint decree and realizes the amount due under it, the realization is made on behalf of, and for the benefit of, all the joint decree-holders and they are entitled to recover their respective shares from him by a separate suit.<sup>8</sup>

The High Court of Lahore has held in the undermentioned cases<sup>9</sup> that it need not be stated in the body of the application that it is being made for the benefit of all the decree-holders, and that when the application is for execution of the entire decree, it should be assumed that the person applying is attempting to execute it on behalf of all the decree-holders. But the High Court of Patna has held that such an application is invalid and must be disallowed.<sup>10</sup>

The omission on the part of the decree-holder to state in his application the names of all the persons who are interested in the decree is not such a defect as would invalidate the execution proceedings.<sup>11</sup>

Where an application for execution is made by two persons the execution proceedings do not terminate automatically on the death of one of them. The surviving decree-holder can continue the application for the benefit of himself and the legal representatives of his co-decree-holder.<sup>13</sup>

O. 21 R. 16
Notes 4-8

5. Application by one of several decree-holders for execution in respect of his share of the decree. — It has been seen in Note 2 above that it is not open to one of several joint decree-holders to apply for execution in respect of his share only of the decree, and that the rule is based on the principle that the judgment-debtor should not be harassed by a multiplicity of applications by different decree-holders. Where, therefore, there is no possibility of the judgment-debtor being harassed by different applications, the bar against one of the decree-holders applying for execution will not apply. Thus, where some of the joint decree-holders apply for execution with regard to a certain portion only of the decree giving up the rest and the other decree-holders, being made parties, do not object to such a giving up by the applicants, the execution asked for may be allowed and the other decree-holders cannot subsequently apply for execution of the balance of the decree.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where one of the joint decree-holders intimates to the Court satisfaction of his share in the decree, this rule does not bar an application by the others for execution for the balance remaining due under the decree.<sup>2</sup> So also, where A and B jointly obtain a decree for money or for possession of immovable property against C, and C as judgment-debtor either purchases his share in the decree or inherits such share from A, the result would be the extinguishment of the decree pro tanto and B can, therefore, execute the decree in respect of his share.<sup>3</sup>

6. Unless the decree imposes a condition to the contrary. — This rule is not applicable to the case of joint decree-holders where the execution of a joint decree is made dependent upon all the decree-holders joining in the application.<sup>1</sup>

7. Execution against one of the joint judgment-debtors — Limitation. — See Article 182 of the Limitation Act.

8. Payment by judgment-debtor out of Court to one of several decree-holders. — One of several joint decree-holders cannot, as a general rule, give a valid discharge of the entire decree without the concurrence of others. A payment, therefore, to one of several decree-holders out of Court is valid only to the extent of the share of that decree-holder,<sup>1</sup> unless it can be proved that the decree-holder who granted the discharge was an agent of the other decree-holders, or otherwise had legal authority to bind them by his acts.<sup>2</sup> On the same principle one of two or more joint decree-holders is not competent, without being authorized by the other or others, to certify a payment made to him under O. 21 R. 2 so as to operate as a satisfaction of the entire decree, and the others are not debarred from executing the decree as to their shares.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that "when one of two or more joint decree-holders takes it upon himself to certify satisfaction of the whole decree, it is clear that no provision can be made by the Court for safeguarding the interests of the other decree-holder or decree-holders; and that if a Court was bound to recognize such an adjustment out of Court, the remaining decree-holders might be driven to another suit to recover money for which a decree had already been passed in their favour."<sup>4</sup>

Where the joint decree-holders are partners or members of a Hindu coparcenary, a payment to one of them or a certificate by him under O. 21 R. 2 cannot, according to the High Court of Madras,<sup>5</sup> be treated as satisfaction of the decree even in part. This view is based on the ground that a decree debt in favour of a firm or of a coparcenary is only one asset out of the numerous other assets and that one of the decree-holders cannot legally claim any definite share in the particular decree debt. The same High Court has also held that the fact that the decree-holder receiving payment is a partner or is the managing member of the joint family is not enough to clothe him with authority to act as the agent of the other decree-holders in receiving such payment.<sup>6</sup> The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> and Patna<sup>8</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>9</sup> have, on the other hand, held that a karta of a joint Hindu family has legal authority to act on behalf of the family and that a payment to, or a certificate by him will bind the other decree-holders. It has been held by the High Court of Lahore<sup>10</sup> and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind<sup>11</sup> that one

Notes 8-11

Although a payment to one of two joint decree-holders of the whole decree amount does not, even when certified, absolve the judgment-debtor from liability to the other decree-holder, such decree-holder is not bound to proceed against the judgment-debtor in execution, but may sue to recover his share from the other decree-holder.<sup>12</sup>

See also Note 8 to Order 21 Rule 1, ante.

9. Defective application under the Rule, if can be amended. — It has been held by the High Court of Patna in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that where in an application for execution of a decree by one of several joint decree-holders, it is not stated that the application is for the benefit of all the decree-holders, the application is invalid and cannot be allowed to be amended. It proceeds upon the view that the requirements of this rule go to the root of the execution of the decree and that while Rule 17 of this Order empowers the Court to allow a defect in the requirements of Rules 11 to 14 to be amended, it does not include this rule. But the High Court of Allahabad<sup>2</sup> has taken a contrary view that there is nothing in Rule 17 which deprives the Court of its powers to allow amendments in relation to matters required to be mentioned by this rule. The Calcutta High Court also holds a similar view.<sup>3</sup>

10. Appeal. — The question whether an appeal lies from an order passed under this rule depends upon the consideration whether the question decided is one within Section 47 of the Code. Thus, an order allowing or refusing execution in favour of one of the decree-holders when an objection is raised by the judgment-debtor is one falling under Section 47 and, therefore, appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> But no appeal will lie against an order refusing to allow execution in favour of one joint decree-holder on the objection of another joint decree-holder<sup>2</sup> or against an order protecting the interests of the non-applying decree-holder.<sup>3</sup>

11. Limitation. — An application for execution by one of several joint decree-holders is an application in accordance with law and will afford a fresh starting point of limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras that although this rule does not allow one of such decree-holders to apply for partial execution of a joint decree, yet such an application may keep alive the right to execute the decree.<sup>2</sup> But the High Court of Allahabad and Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh have taken the contrary view that such an application is not one in accordance with law and, therefore, will not save limitation.<sup>3</sup>

Where there is a decree in favour of two or more joint decree-holders and one of them is a minor, can the minor decree-holder apply to execute the decree on behalf of all, more than three years after the last starting point of limitation but within three years of his attaining majority? There is a conflict of opinion on this question. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>4</sup> Bombay,<sup>5</sup> Calcutta<sup>6</sup> and Lahore<sup>7</sup> that the ex-minor decree-holder can apply to execute the whole decree, even though the other decree-holders would be barred by limitation. 1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree," are new. See Note 7, infra.

2. The words "if that Court thinks fit" which occurred in the old Section 232 before the words "the decree may be executed in the same manner . . . ." have been omitted. See Note 11, infra.

3. The words "decree for money" in the second proviso have been changed into "a decree for the payment of money . . . ." See Note 17 infra.

2. Decree. — The provisions of this rule in the first paragraph as well as in the first proviso are not restricted to money decrees, but apply to mortgage decrees also. As to the applicability of the second proviso, see Note 17, infra.

3. Where a decree has been transferred. — The principle of this rule is that no one can execute a decree except the decree-holder or a person to whom the decree has been transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law.<sup>1</sup> A third person cannot, therefore, apply for execution of a decree unless there is a transfer to him of the decree by the original decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> Where on the death of A, the plaintiff in a suit, his widow B continues the proceedings as his legal representative and obtains a decree, C claiming to be the real heir of A cannot apply to execute the decree inasmuch as there is no transfer of the decree by B in his favour.<sup>3</sup> The rule is, however, intended primarily for those cases where the applicant for execution does not appear as decree-holder in the decree and he applies for execution on the basis of a transfer of the decree;<sup>4</sup> it does not, therefore, apply where the applicant is one whose name is already in the decree as one of two persons in whose favour the decree has been passed and who claims on the death of the other decree-holder to execute the decree as the surviving decree-holder.<sup>5</sup>

A transfer in writing of the property dealt with by the decree is not a transfer of the decree itself and the transferee cannot apply under this rule.<sup>6</sup> It has, however, been held by the High Court of Rangoon<sup>7</sup> that it is a matter of construction of the deed of transfer whether the decree also was intended to be transferred by the transfer of the property, and the words of the rule relating to the transfer of a decree cannot be construed so as to apply to a case where there was no decree in existence at the time of the assignment. The assignee of a decree to be subsequently passed cannot apply for execution under this rule.<sup>8</sup> Thus, a person who obtains a transfer, pending suit, of the property forming the subject-matter of the suit is not entitled to execute the decree subsequently passed unless his name has been substituted in place of his vendor under O. 22 R. 10.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, the assignee of a preliminary decree who has not taken steps to be impleaded in the suit cannot apply to execute the final decree in the suit.<sup>10</sup>

The High Court of Bombay has, however, held in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that the effect of the transfer was, in equity, to vest in the transferee, the interest in the decree which was afterwards obtained and that the decree must be taken to have been transferred by operation of law. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>12</sup> has dissented from the above reasoning of the High Court of Bombay and has held that the words "by operation of law" cannot be invoked so as to make an assignment in writing, an assignment by operation of law.

When a decree is assigned, what is really transferred is not the decree alone, but the interest of the decree-holder in the decree as may be finally determined. Therefore, an assignment of the decree of the trial Court carries with it the right to execute the decree passed in appeal.<sup>13</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case<sup>14</sup> that the transferee of a decree for future maintenance is entitled to apply for execution in respect of the amounts that fall due from time to time and that Section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act will not apply when the cause of action has merged in the decree. But the High Court of Madras<sup>15</sup> has held that only that portion of the maintenance decree which related to the arrears of maintenance already accrued due can legally be transferred.

4. Transfer by assignment in writing. — An assignee of a decree under an oral transfer has no locus standi to apply for execution under this rule.<sup>1</sup> In order to enable a transferee to apply, the transfer must be effected by an instrument in writing.<sup>2</sup> A mere contract for sale of a decree without an assignment in writing in favour of the purchaser is not enough.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Patna<sup>4</sup> has held that a release of his rights by a decree-holder in favour of another does not operate as an assignment. But the High Court of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> has held that a release may operate as an assignment of the decree.

It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta and Lahore that a decree for sale of immovable property is itself not immovable property and, therefore, an assignment of such a decree does not require to be registered.<sup>6</sup> But the High Court of Bombay has taken a contrary view.<sup>7</sup> In any view a personal decree against a defendant is transferable without registration even though the decree may be a mortgage decree as against the other defendants.<sup>8</sup>

The rule does not require any particular form of writing.<sup>9</sup> In the under-mentioned case,<sup>10</sup> an order of the Court acting on behalf of the decree-holders and directing the sale of the decree by auction to the highest bidder, was held sufficient to constitute an assignment in writing for the purposes of this rule. But, the assignment of certain funds recoverable under a decree is not an assignment of the decree.<sup>11</sup>

5. Transfer by operation of law. — Ordinarily transferees by operation of law would include the following persons<sup>1</sup> :

- (1) In the case of a deceased decree-holder, his legal representatives.
- (2) In the case of an insolvent debtor the Official Assignee or Official Receiver.
- (3) The purchaser of a decree at a court-sale.

The following are also some of the instances of transfer by operation of law :

(1) A obtains a decree against X. B, his son, sues A for partition and obtains a decree for 1/5th share of the decree obtained by A. B is entitled to apply for execution as transferee by operation of law.<sup>2</sup>

(2) A, a trustee, obtained a decree for rent against certain tenants. A filed another suit and obtained therein a declaration that the trust was incapable of being executed. It was held that thereafter the original owner of the properties could apply to execute the decree for rent without actual assignment.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Where, on the revocation of a probate of a will, the minor son of the testator succeeds to the estate, he is entitled to execute the decree obtained by the executrix.<sup>4</sup>

(4) A mortgagee who has obtained a final decree for foreclosure against the mortgagor who in turn has obtained a decree for possession of the immovable properties comprised in the mortgage, is an assignee by operation of law.<sup>5</sup>

(5) Where a mortgage is foreclosed and a pre-emptor obtains a decree for pre-emption of the same properties, he is a transferee of the foreclosure decree.<sup>6</sup>

(6) A holder of a certificate of administration granted under Section 3 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 is a transferee by operation of law.<sup>7</sup>

For other instances, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>8</sup>

The words 'operation of law' cannot apply to a case where a person has become the owner of a decree by some transaction inter vivos.<sup>9</sup> If a decree obtained by a member of a joint Hindu family is allotted to another member at a family partition, the latter is not a transferee by operation of law and, therefore, must get an assignment in writing from the decree-holder to enable him to apply under this rule.<sup>10</sup> The High Court of Lahore has held in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that where three brothers obtained a joint decree in their favour and at a family partition the decree was allotted to the share of one of the brothers, he could apply under this rule to execute the whole decree and that Rule 15 ante would not apply to such a case. A person does not become a transferee by operation of law from a decree-holder by merely obtaining another decree against him.<sup>12</sup> Thus, where R, the widow of G, obtained a decree in respect of a debt due to the estate of G and in a separate suit against R, D obtained a declaration that he was adopted to G, and that he was entitled to his estate, it was held that D was not an assignee by operation of law and was not therefore entitled to

The Official Liquidator of a company is merely an agent of the Court for the purposes of the liquidation of the company; he is not a transferee of any decree that may have been passed in favour of the company.<sup>16</sup>

6. Benamidar. — A obtains a decree against B and transfers it to C benami for D. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> that D is the person entitled to execute the decree, that C, not being the real transferee, cannot apply under this rule, and that a mere application by him for execution cannot be held to be one in "accordance with law" for the purposes of limitation, but that it will be one in "accordance with law" if, with the permission of the Court, he is allowed to execute the decree.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, the High Courts of Madras,<sup>3</sup> Lahore<sup>4</sup> and Patna<sup>5</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>6</sup> have held that the "transferee" referred to in this rule is the transferee named as such in the transfer, and that the real owner is not entitled to apply. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>7</sup> and the Chief Court of Lower Burma<sup>8</sup> have also held that the benamidar is entitled to apply, without deciding whether the real owner can or cannot do so. The Calcutta High Court also has held in a recent case, a similar view.<sup>9</sup>

Where the transferee of a decree dies and thereupon his heirs and a person alleging that the transferee was only a benamidar for him apply separately to execute the decree, the Court has got power under Section 47, sub-section (3) to enquire who is the representative of the deceased and the question of benami can be gone into in execution proceedings.<sup>10</sup>

7. Part transfer of a decree. — Under Section 232 of the old Code it was held that the transferee of the interest of any one of several joint decree-holders in the decree could apply to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup> This principle has been given effect to in the present Code by adding in this rule the words "or if a decree has been passed jointly.....in the decree" (see Note 1 supra). Similarly, there is nothing in this rule or elsewhere which prohibits the transferee of a portion of the decree from applying under this rule.<sup>2</sup> The only qualification in such a case is that the transferee is in the position of a joint decree-holder and can execute the decree only subject to general provisions of law analogous to Rule 15 supra.<sup>3</sup> But the High Court of Bombay has, in the undermentioned case,<sup>4</sup> taken the contrary view that a transferee of a part of a decree is not entitled to execute his part of the decree, nor even the whole decree, since he cannot be regarded as a joint decree-holder. See also Notes to O. 21 R. 15.

word "assignee" in that Section refers only to purchasers for consideration and does not include a person in whom the legal estate is vested by an act of the owner, as for instance, a trustee, who has no independent interest in the property.<sup>2</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that a Court executing a rent decree cannot refuse execution when the assignment had been recognised by the Court before the Tenancy Act came into force.

A provision similar to that in Section 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has been made also by Section 198 (k) of the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913). By Schedule II, List II of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) it is provided that no application for the execution of a decree shall be made by an assignee of the decree unless the assignor's interest in the land to which it relates has become and is vested in such assignee.

10. Transfer, when takes effect. — The transfer of a decree made by an instrument in writing takes effect from the date of such instrument, irrespective of its recognition by the Court on an application made to it under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Illustrations

1. A brought certain properties to sale in execution of a decree obtained by him against F. Pending execution proceedings, A assigned his decree to D. . . Subsequently two days before sale, A reported that the decree had been satisfied by payment. D intervened and objected to the record of satisfaction being made. It was held that if his transfer was true, he was a representative of A and the matter must be enquired into: Dwar Buxh v. Fatik Jali, I. L. R. 26 Calcutta 250.

2. M had obtained a money decree against H. R in execution of a decree obtained by him against M applied under O. 21 R. 53 and recovered the amount due under M's decree. Thereupon C, claiming under an assignment of the decree in writing from M prior to R's attachment, sued R for the recovery of the money drawn by him. It was held that C's title to the decree was complete on the date of the assignment and therefore prevailed as against R's attachment: Co-operative Town Bank of Padigan v. Raman Chettiar, I. L. R. 5 Rangoon 595 : A. I. R. 1928 Rangoon 25 (26). [Reversing A. I. R. 1927 Rangoon 55.]

11. Rights of the transferee. — Section 232 of the old Code contained the words "and if that Court thinks fit, the decree may be executed." It was, therefore, held that the executing Court had a discretion to allow or to refuse an application made by the transferee.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code, those words have been omitted and the transferee's right to execution does not depend upon the discretion of the Court.<sup>2</sup>

Where a transfer is recognized by the Court on an application under this rule, the transferee is entitled to execute the decree as if the application were made by the original decree-holder.<sup>3</sup> The absence of consideration for the assignment of a decree is immaterial and will not deprive the assignee of his rights to execute the decree, provided the assignment is not a sham transaction.<sup>4</sup>

It has already been mentioned in Notes to O. 21 R. 10 ante that the person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree-holder is the person entitled to execution. Therefore, where the transferee of a decree does not apply under this rule for execution, the executing Court is bound to allow execution at the instance of the transferor, even after the date of the transfer, till the transfer is recognized by the Court.<sup>5</sup>

The assignee of a decree can transfer it to another although the name of such assignee has not been substituted on the record.<sup>6</sup>

As to the right of the transferee to apply for execution, where the decree has been attached by the holder of a decree against the transferor, see Notes to O. 21 R. 53, infra.

Where an ex parte decree was assigned and the assignee did not take any step under this rule and thereafter on an application made by the defendant as against the original decree-holder alone the ex parte decree was set aside, it was held that the transferee could not proceed with the execution until he got an order cancelling the order setting aside the ex parte decree.<sup>7</sup>

12. Application for execution must be made to the Court which passed the decree. — An application by the transferee of a decree under this rule can be entertained only by the Court which passed the decree; the Court to which the decree has been transferred has no jurisdiction to entertain the same.<sup>1</sup> The reason is, as stated in Sheo Narain Singh v. Hurbans Lall, (1870) 14 W. R. 65 (66), that :

"It would lead to the greatest difficulties, if in one Court one party was recognised as being the holder of, and having the control over, a decree, and at the same time in another Court another party was recognised as being in that position."

Where, however, an application under this rule is made to the transferee Court and it recognises the transfer, it is only an irregularity which may be waived by acquiescence and if the judgment-debtor has, as a matter of fact, waived it, he cannot subsequently turn round and question the jurisdiction of the executing Court.<sup>2</sup>

As to whether a transferee can continue the execution proceedings initiated by the original decree-holder without a fresh application, see Note 19 infra.

Where a decree is passed in favour of a company which afterwards goes into liquidation, the Official Liquidator is not a transferee of the decree and hence, he can apply for the execution of the decree to the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution.<sup>3</sup>

Under the rules framed under the Act, the award is transferred to the Court to be enforced as if it was a final decree passed by such Court — Though Registrar is himself a Court for certain purposes, in the absence of any rules in the matter, the executing Court must be presumed to be empowered to recognize the transfer — In any case, where assignment was recognized after due notice to judgment-debtor it is only an irregularity.)

was filed must be deemed to be the Court which passed the decree for the purposes of this rule.<sup>1</sup>

O. 21 R. 16
Notes 13-14

14. Notice to transferor and judgment-debtor.—The provisions of this rule as to notice are imperative; the giving of notice of the application, to the assignor and to the judgment-debtor, is an indispensable condition of jurisdiction and the failure to give it renders all the proceedings in execution void as against them.<sup>1</sup> It has, however, been held that if the persons directly interested waive their right, acknowledge the validity of the assignment and raise no objection so far as the execution proceedings are concerned, non-compliance with the technical requirements of this rule will not render an execution sale a nullity.<sup>2</sup> Under the amendment of this rule by the Lahore High Court, notice to the judgment-debtor is not necessary.<sup>3</sup>

Where the assignee applied under this rule for notices to the assignor and the judgment-debtor and also for attachment of a certain property, and the notice as well as the warrant of attachment were issued together, it was held that the attachment was illegal inasmuch as the objections of the judgment-debtor were not heard at that time.<sup>4</sup> Where, in an application under this rule by the assignee of a mortgage decree, notice is given only to the mortgagor and not to the subsequent mortgagee who was also a judgment-debtor under the decree, the latter will not be bound by such execution and the auction-purchaser will acquire only the rights of the mortgagor, but not those of the subsequent mortgagee.<sup>5</sup>

The notice that is to be given under this rule is of the application for execution and not of the assignment.<sup>6</sup> But a written notice is not always necessary; if the judgment-debtor is present in Court at the time the order on the application is made, and has thus notice of the application, the fact that no written notice was given will not vitiate the proceedings.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 14-16

The object of issuing notice under this rule is to determine once for all and in the presence of all the parties the validity of the instrument of transfer. It is therefore not necessary that notice must be issued on every subsequent application by the transferee under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

Where the Court which passed the decree substitutes the name of the alleged transferee of the decree on the record and transfers the decree to another Court for execution, the latter Court must presume that the Court passing the decree has complied with the provisions of this rule.<sup>9</sup>

If the judgment-debtor is dead when the assignee applies for execution, the notice required by this rule may be served on his legal representatives.<sup>10</sup> If the original decree-holder becomes insolvent, the Official Receiver will be entitled to notice.<sup>11</sup>

In the case of a transfer by operation of law, it is not necessary that the notice referred to in the first proviso to this rule should be given.<sup>12</sup>

15. Objections to be heard. — After the service of the notice mentioned in the first proviso to this rule, the Court is bound to hear the objections, if any, of the transferor and of the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> As has been already mentioned in Note 11, it is not a valid objection that the assignment is not supported by consideration.<sup>2</sup> Nor can the judgment-debtor raise the plea that the decree is not valid.<sup>3</sup> As to the right of the judgment-debtor to plead an uncertified payment or adjustment, see Note 23 to O. 21 R. 2.

A held a decree against B and B had a decree against A. A attached in execution of his decree the decree which B had against him. Thereafter, B assigned the decree to C. C applied under this rule. It was held that A could take objection to the execution of the decree on the ground that under Section 64 ante, the assignment of the decree to C was void.<sup>4</sup>

An assignment of a decree is not valid as against the judgment-debtor until the debtor has had notice of the assignment and, therefore, any payment made to the original decree-holder before notice is valid as against the transferee.<sup>5</sup>

The failure of the judgment-debtor to object to the validity of the assignment when an application under this rule is made will preclude him, under general principles of res judicata, from raising such objection at a subsequent stage of the proceedings.<sup>6</sup>

16. Transfer of decree for payment of money against two or more persons to one of them. — It is a general principle of law that when one of the persons jointly liable under a decree unites in himself the two opposite characters of creditor and joint debtor in respect of the whole decretal debt, the effect is to extinguish the liability of all the co-judgment-debtors under the decree.<sup>1</sup> The second proviso to this rule is based on this general principle, and provides that, in such a case, the transferee cannot enforce the decree by execution against his co-debtors.<sup>2</sup> On the same principle, where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons and the interest of one of such decree-holders devolves upon a judgment-debtor, the decree is extinguished pro tanto.<sup>3</sup> When the alleged transferee of a decree for money is found to be the benamidar of one of the judgment-debtors, the Court is bound, under the second proviso to this rule, to refuse to allow the assignee to execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors.<sup>4</sup> But it has been held that where the judgment-debtor did not raise the objection when notice was issued to him under the first proviso to this rule, he cannot subsequently raise the objection.<sup>5</sup> But an agreement between the decree-holder and some of the judgment-debtors that the decree-holder should execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors and pay the amount realized to them in consideration of the fact that they have paid the

This proviso does not make the assignment of a decree in favour of one of several judgment-debtors invalid in law; it only provides that the transferee is not entitled to enforce his rights by execution.<sup>7</sup> His remedy is, therefore, to sue his co-judgment-debtors for contribution having regard to the proportion in which they were bound inter se to satisfy the decree.<sup>8</sup>

The words "decree for the payment of money against two or more persons" mean a decree against two or more persons jointly.

Illustration

A decree directed that N should pay Rs. 90 and Rs. 11-5-3 as costs, and A should pay Rs. 90 with Rs. 8-12-4 as costs. A afterwards took an assignment of the decree in writing and applied to execute it against N to the extent of Rs. 90 and costs. It was held that the decree for money so far as it related to Rs 90 and costs was not a decree against several persons, but against one person N, and therefore A could execute it.<sup>9</sup>

The second proviso to this rule does not apply to the converse case of the decree-holder acquiring a share in the estate of one of the judgment-debtors. The decree-holder is, however, bound to give credit for a proportionate amount of the decree.<sup>10</sup>

The proviso applies whether the transfer of the decree is by act of parties or by operation of law.<sup>11</sup>

It has been held by the Rangoon High Court that where a decree for the payment of money has been passed against two or more persons and one of them dies, his legal representative does not become a "judgment-debtor" and the transfer of the decree to him is not a transfer to which proviso 2 applies.<sup>12</sup>

17. "Decree for the payment of money."—The second proviso to this rule does not apply to decrees other than money decrees.<sup>1</sup> Thus, it does not apply to mortgage decrees for sale and therefore, an assignment of a mortgage decree in favour of one of the judgment-debtors does not extinguish the decree.<sup>2</sup> But, in such cases, the decretal amount that can be recovered from the other judgment-debtors will be reduced proportionately.<sup>3</sup>

The expression "decree for money" in Section 232 of the old Code (corresponding to this rule) was interpreted by the High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta to mean a personal decree for the payment of money. Thus, a decree against a legal

The High Court of Allahabad<sup>6</sup> has in the undermentioned case held that the substitution of the expression "for the payment of money" for the words "for money" in the proviso is intended to emphasise the fact that the proviso is confined to cases of personal decrees. On the other hand, the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>7</sup> has held that this is an unduly narrow interpretation of the rule and that it is immaterial whether the assignee decree-holder is one against whom a personal money decree has been passed or one who has been directed to pay the decretal debt out of the assets in his hands.

For meaning of "decree for payment of money," see Note 6 to Section 73 ante.

It was held that A, by attaching S's decree, did not become an assignee thereof, that the prohibition in this rule did not therefore apply to such a case and that A was entitled to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup>

19. Application for substitution by transferee. — A transferee from a decree-holder can only apply under this rule to execute the decree; an application merely for recognising him as transferee is legally incompetent and must be rejected.<sup>1</sup> It is not also necessary for the validity of the proceedings that the substitution of the name of the transferee is actually made.<sup>2</sup> All that is necessary is that the transferee should merely file his application for execution of the decree setting out either in it or in an affidavit filed in support thereof that he is such a transferee; thereupon the Court orders the application for execution to proceed or rejects it.<sup>3</sup> But, although a separate application by the transferee of a decree merely for substitution in place of the original decree-holder is not formally required under the Code, the prayer for such substitution is necessarily implied in an application by him for execution of the decree under O. 21 R. 16 and the substitution of his name is, in practice, generally

Where, during the pendency of execution proceedings, the decree-holder dies or transfers the decree by an assignment in writing, can the transferee apply under this rule to continue the execution proceedings? It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Courts of Sind and Peshawar that it is open to the transferee either to apply for continuing the proceedings in execution or to make a fresh application.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that a pending execution application does not abate by reason of the death or devolution of any interest of the decree-holder and, therefore, the transferee can apply by virtue of Section 146 and this rule. Similarly, where the decree-holder dies while his application is pending in a Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution, his legal representatives may either apply to the Court which passed the decree for fresh execution after bringing their names on the record, or may apply to the executing Court for continuing the proceedings, subsequently producing from the Court which passed the decree the necessary order under this rule.<sup>6</sup> According to the High Court of Allahabad,<sup>7</sup> however, the transferee must apply, whenever he does apply, for fresh execution, even when the application by his predecessor is pending.

Though an application by the transferee merely for substitution of his name is not competent, still it is a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182 of the Limitation Act so as to give a fresh starting point of time.<sup>8</sup> In cases governed by Article 183 of the Limitation Act, the order of the Court allowing the transferee to execute the decree after recognition of his transfer will operate as a revivor and be a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>9</sup> The mere issue of a notice under this rule without a decision of the Court that the decree is executable will not, however, operate as a revivor.<sup>10</sup>

Section 47, sub-section (3) provides that a question as to whether any person is, or is not the representative of a party shall, for the purposes of Section 47, be determined by the Court, i. e., the Court executing the decree. The provision in Section 244 of the old Code corresponding to this sub-section was introduced in that Section by the Amending Act, VII of 1888 and ran as follows :

"If a question arises as to who is the representative of a party for the purposes of this Section, the Court may either stay execution of decree until the question has been determined by a separate suit, or itself determine the question by an order under this Section."

It was held in cases arising before the date of the amendment that a question as to the validity of the transfer of a decree entitling the transferee to execute the decree was not one within S. 244 and that a suit raising such question was not barred.<sup>1</sup> In one class of cases arising after the date of the said amendment it was held that where an application by the transferee under S. 232 of the old Code (O. 21 R. 16) was rejected, the transferee could not be considered to be the representative of the decree-holder and that the question of the validity of the transfer not being thus "between the parties or their representatives" was not one within S. 244 and could be agitated in a separate suit by the transferee.<sup>2</sup> In a second class of cases it was held that the above amendment left two courses open to the Court, namely, of either determining the question in execution itself or of referring the parties to a separate suit, and that a mere dismissal of an application under S. 232 did not bar a suit by the transferee for declaration of his right.<sup>3</sup> In a third class of cases it was held that the bar of suit in respect of questions falling within the first sentence of S. 244 could not be reasonably extended to cases falling under the amendment, and a suit was, therefore, not barred.<sup>4</sup>

In view of the present sub-rule (3) it is now clear that a suit raising such a question for the purposes of execution is barred.<sup>5</sup> The High Court of Lahore<sup>6</sup> has, however, taken a contrary view relying on Bommanapati Veerappa v. Chintakunta Srinivasa, I. L. R. 26 Madras 264, a decision under the old Code. It is submitted that the decision cannot be accepted as correct. But, where the dispute as to the validity of the assignment of the decree is one purely between the decree-holder and the person claiming to be the assignee, the question being purely one between a party and his own representative, does not fall under Section 47 and a separate suit to agitate the question is not barred.<sup>7</sup> See Notes 5 and 27 to Section 47.

Where a transfer of a decree is not recognized by the executing Court, the transferee is entitled to sue the assignor for refund of the money received by him for the assignment.<sup>8</sup> But the assignee is not entitled to treat the assignment in his favour

Thus where, after a transfer was effected the decree was attached at the instance of a third person, and the assignee's application for execution was dismissed wrongly on the ground that the decree had been attached, and thereupon the assignee filed a suit for refund of the purchase money, it was held that it was his duty to have the attachment removed by presenting a claim to the attaching Court on the strength of his assignment and that, unless such a claim was presented and rejected, he could not succeed in the suit.<sup>9</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "may allow it to be amended" have been replaced by the words "may allow the defect to be remedied." The object is to make the rule clear and comprehensive so as to include cases of defects such as omission to file a copy of the decree.

2. Sub-rule (2) is new. See Note 3, infra.

2. Procedure on receiving an application for execution. — Sub-rule (1) proscribes the procedure to be followed on receiving an application for execution of a decree. It casts a duty upon the Court to ascertain whether such of the requirements of Rules 11 to 14 as are applicable have been complied with or not. If they are not complied with, the Court can either reject the application at once or allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time fixed.<sup>1</sup> If it does neither, it cannot, after the period of limitation for execution has expired, reject the application without giving the decree-holder an opportunity to amend the application.<sup>2</sup> Under this rule the executing Court has got a discretion to allow the necessary amendments.<sup>3</sup>

3. Amendment and limitation. — This rule contemplates the amendment of defects in the execution application before admission and registration. But supposing the Court overlooks the defects and registers the application, can they be subsequently amended during the pendency of the application? The answer to this depends upon the question whether the decree is or is not barred by limitation on the date of the amendment. If there is no bar of limitation, the amendment can, according to the Patna High Court, be allowed.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that a substantive fresh application can be entertained on that date, and that there is nothing which prevents the Court from treating the amended application as a fresh application for execution.<sup>2</sup> A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has, on the other hand, held in Asgar Ali v. Troilokyanath, I. L. R. 17 Calcutta 631 (F. B.), that "Section 245 by implication excludes the power of the Court to amend after admission and registration." It was held by the Patna High Court in Ram Sumran v. Ram Bahadur, AIR 1923 Patna 224, that the said observations should be understood only as referring to the particular case before the Full Bench where the decree was barred on the date when the defect (viz., omission to file a list of property) was sought to be amended. The decision in Asgar Ali's case was distinguished by the Calcutta High Court itself in a recent decision<sup>3</sup> in which it was held that even after an execution application is registered, the Court has jurisdiction to allow an amendment of the application, provided the period of limitation for the application for execution has not expired.

Where, however, on the date when the defect is sought to be amended the decree would be barred by limitation, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether or not an amendment can be allowed. On the one hand, the High Court of Calcutta<sup>4</sup> holds that no amendment is permissible on the ground that the Court is not empowered under the rule to allow such an amendment. The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>5</sup> also has held that an application for execution cannot be allowed to be amended after the period of limitation for the application has expired. On the other hand, the High Court of Madras<sup>6</sup> holds that the Court can allow such an amendment under sub-rule (1) and that such amendment relates back to the date of the application. The reasoning of the Madras High Court is that the law casts a duty upon the Court to notice the defects in the application before admission and if the Court had done its duty properly, the defects could have been remedied within time, and that the decree-holder should not be made to suffer for the failure of the Court to do its duty. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>7</sup> Lahore<sup>8</sup> and Patna<sup>9</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar<sup>10</sup> have also allowed the defects to be amended, though the decree had become barred on the date of the amendment. The Bombay High Court<sup>11</sup> has also held that the Court has power to allow an application for execution to be amended even after the expiry of the period of limitation for such application..

Sub-rule (1) refers only to the requirements of Rules 11 to 14. Consequently the rule does not apply where the defect in the execution application is one which has no

Notes 3-4

Effect of amendment. — In the absence of any provision under the old Code corresponding to sub-rule (2), there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an amendment took effect only from the date of the amendment or from the date of the application, and whether the original application which was defective could be considered as being in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 179, clause 4 of the Limitation Act of 1877 (Article 182, clause 5 of the present Limitation Act of 1908) so as to operate as a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>14</sup> Under sub-rule (2) of this rule it is now clear that the application, though defective, when presented should be deemed to be in accordance with law when the defect is subsequently amended and the amendment dates back to the original date of the application.<sup>15</sup> The effect of the sub-rule is to preclude the judgment-debtor from raising any objection at a later stage on the ground that the application was not in accordance with law at the time it was presented.<sup>16</sup> If, however, the Court without giving an opportunity to amend rejects the application, the rejected application cannot be considered to be in accordance with law.<sup>17</sup> Similarly, where the subsequent application is not one for amendment of the original application but is really an independent application for execution asking for a relief not included in the original application, sub-rule (2) cannot apply and the subsequent application cannot be deemed as presented on the date of the original application.<sup>18</sup>

As to whether an application returned for amendment and not re-presented is one in accordance with law, see Note 4 below.

4. Non-compliance with the order of amendment within the time fixed.

— Sub-rule (1) empowers the Court to fix a time for the amendment of the execution application. If the party fails to amend within the time fixed or such further time as the Court may extend, the proper course is to reject the application.<sup>1</sup> If, notwithstanding the decree-holder's failure to amend the defect within the time fixed, the Court does not reject the application, it is not precluded from allowing a fresh application for amendment at a subsequent stage.<sup>2</sup> decree-holder does not re-present it within the time fixed, the question arises whether such an application can be treated as one in accordance with law within the meaning of Article 182, clause 5 of the Limitation Act so as to operate as a fresh starting point of limitation for execution. The answer to this question depends upon another question, namely, whether the defect for the amendment of which the application was returned was a material defect, without the amendment of which further proceedings could not be taken, or was only a formal defect.<sup>3</sup> In the latter case the application will be one in accordance with law,<sup>4</sup> while in the former case it will not.<sup>5</sup>

Where the application is returned not for any defect in Rules 11 to 14 but for some other defect, it has been held by the Allahabad and the Patna High Courts that the application will be one in accordance with law.<sup>6</sup>

5. Procedure on admission of application. — Sub-rule (4) prescribes the procedure to be followed after admission of the application. If it is not in any way defective the Court is bound to order execution according to the nature of the application.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if the decree-holder prays for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, the Court cannot refuse the same and direct him to proceed against the property in the first instance.<sup>2</sup> No enquiry as to whether the property sought to be proceeded against belongs to the judgment-debtor is contemplated under the rule before execution can be ordered.<sup>3</sup>

7. Execution of rent decrees under the Tenancy Acts. — A landlord who obtains a decree for arrears of rent of an under-tenure is not restricted by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act to execute the decree in the first instance by sale of the under-tenure. He is at liberty to execute it in the ordinary manner against the person or property of his judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> Section 163 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, VIII of 1885, and Section 217 of the Bihar and Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913, prescribe that the Court shall, on the admission of the application for execution, order the issue simultaneously of the order of attachment and the proclamation for sale.

8. Execution of maintenance decree. — A decree declaring a person's right to maintenance at a certain rate and also directing the payment of such maintenance by future instalments is not a mere declaratory decree and can be executed as each instalment falls due.<sup>1</sup>

Where a decree awarding future maintenance also charges certain property for the due payment thereof, the decree-holder can, if there is default, apply for an order for the sale of the property or file a fresh suit to enforce the charge.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Calcutta<sup>3</sup> has held that, to avoid the difficulty of a further suit, the Court can provide in the decree for maintenance for the appointment of a receiver with directions to take possession of the property in case of default and sell the same and pay the maintenance from out of the sale proceeds.

9. Value of property attached. — Under the proviso to the rule the Court should call upon the decree-holder to specify the approximate value of the property to be attached, to see that the value of the property to be attached corresponded as nearly as may be with the amount due under the decree.<sup>1</sup> But, if more property than is necessary is attached and sold and a purchaser buys the same without notice of the fact that the amount realized by sale of the other plots was more than sufficient to satisfy the decree, the sale in his favour cannot be set aside.<sup>2</sup>

10. Appeal. — An appeal lies against an order returning an execution application on the ground that the decree-holder is not entitled to calculate the amount due to him on the basis adopted in the petition, and directing him to amend the same.<sup>1</sup> But an order allowing the decree-holder to withdraw the execution proceedings does not determine anything under Section 47 and is not appealable.<sup>2</sup>

R. 18. [S. 246.] (1) Where applications are made<sup>8</sup> to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees<sup>9</sup> in separate suits<sup>4</sup> for the payment of two sums of money<sup>3</sup> passed between the same parties<sup>5</sup> and capable of execution at the same time<sup>7</sup> by such Court, then —

Execution in case of cross-decrees.

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction shall be entered upon both decrees; and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the holder of the decree for the larger sum<sup>9</sup> and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction of the decree for the smaller sum.

(2) This rule shall be deemed to apply where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees<sup>10</sup> and as well in respect of judgment-debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment-debts due by the assignee himself.

(3) This rule shall not be deemed to apply unless —

(a) the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits; and

(b) the sums due under the decrees are definite.

(4) The holder of a decree passed against several persons jointly and severally may treat it as a cross-decree in relation to a decree passed against him singly in favour of one or more of such persons.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees in separate suits" in sub-rule (1) are new.
2. Sub-rule (4) is new.
3. Illustration (d) is new.

2. Scope and applicability of the Rule. — This rule provides that cross-decrees for the payment of money shall be set-off against each other. In order that this rule may apply the following conditions must be satisfied —

- (1) The decrees must be for the payment of definite sums of money. (Note 3.)
- (2) They must have been passed in separate suits.<sup>1</sup> (Note 4.)
- (3) The decree-holder in one must be the judgment-debtor in the other.
- (4) The parties must fill the same character in both suits. (Note 6.)
- (5) Both decrees must be capable of execution<sup>2</sup> and must be so at the same time and by the same Court. (Notes 7 and 8.)
- (6) Applications should have been made to the Court for execution of both decrees. (Note 8.)

If the above conditions are satisfied the set-off should be worked out as follows —

- (1) If the amounts under the two decrees are equal, then the two decrees shall satisfy each other and full satisfaction shall be entered upon both.
- (2) If the amounts under the two decrees are not equal, then full satisfaction shall be entered upon the decree for the smaller amount, and part satisfaction upon the decree for the larger amount; and execution shall be allowed only under the latter decree and for so much only as remains due after the set-off. (Note 9.)

A right to set-off under this rule cannot be defeated by an assignment of either decree (Note 10) or by its attachment by the other decree-holder,<sup>3</sup> or by a stranger.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, where A, B, C and D, hold decrees against X, and X holds a decree against A and the circumstances are otherwise such that the two decrees can be set off against each other, B, C and D cannot object to such setting off on the ground that X's decree against A should be executed and the proceeds of execution should be rateably distributed among all the decree-holders of X.<sup>5</sup>

Where an application is made for the execution of a decree and a suit which is capable of resulting in a cross-decree of the kind contemplated by this rule is at that time pending in the Court which passed that decree, the execution may be stayed under Rule 29. But if such suit is pending in any other Court, Rule 29 will not apply.<sup>6</sup>

In Hazariram v. Bansidhar,<sup>7</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows: "It is true that under Rules 18 to 20 the set-off of decrees is not a discretionary matter depending upon equitable considerations such as may emerge from the circumstance that both decrees arise out of the same transaction. Whatever they arise from, circuitry of proceedings thereunder can be avoided and should be avoided: this is the principle of the rules."

It has been held that apart from the provisions of this rule and Rule 19 infra, the Court has inherent power to allow a set-off in execution proceedings.<sup>8</sup>

3. Cross-decrees for the payment of two sums of money. — The first condition for claiming a set-off under this rule is that the decrees should be for the payment of money and that the amounts under each decree should be definite and ascertained.<sup>1</sup> A decree directing recovery of money by sale of immovable property is a decree for the payment of money under this rule,<sup>2</sup> even though it may be in enforcement of a charge.<sup>3</sup> But a mortgage decree in which there is no personal liability does not fall within this rule.<sup>4</sup> See Notes to Rule 20, infra.

A decree for mesne profits of which the amount has not been ascertained cannot be set off under this rule as the amount is not definite.<sup>5</sup>

4. Cross-decrees in separate suits. — The second condition is that there must be cross-decrees and they must have been passed in separate suits. An adjudication under Section 144 of the Code is a decree to which this rule will apply;<sup>1</sup> but a private award is not an adjudication.<sup>2</sup>

5. "Between the same parties." — It is necessary that the parties should be the same in both suits.<sup>1</sup> For this purpose it is the party on the record that has to be considered.

Illustrations

1. A holds a decree against B. B holds a decree against C. The two cannot be set off on the ground that, in respect of the first decree, A is benamidar for C.<sup>2</sup>

2. A holds a decree against B. B holds a decree against A. A set-off between the two cannot be objected to on the ground that in respect of the first decree A is a benamidar for C.<sup>3</sup>

6. Same character in both suits necessary. —

Illustrations

1. A holds a decree against B personally. B files a suit on a mortgage executed by C, impleading A as a purchaser of a portion of the equity of redemption and obtains a decree. The two decrees cannot be set off.<sup>1</sup> In this illustration, A is no doubt acting in his own interest. But his character in the mortgage suit is different from that in the other suit inasmuch as the mortgage-decree is as against him not a decree for payment of money personally. If he had himself been the mortgagor, there would have been his personal liability and the two decrees could have been set off. (See for fuller discussion Notes to O. 21 R. 20). The expression "same character, etc." does not mean that the liability to pay which resulted in the decree should have been incurred by the parties themselves in both suits. Thus, a decree against a widow in respect of a debt contracted by her deceased husband can be set off against a decree obtained by the widow on a debt due to herself.<sup>2</sup> But in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> it was held that a decree obtained against the assets in the hands of the heir of a deceased person and a decree obtained by such heir against the holder of the former decree personally cannot be set off against each other.

2. A decree against a firm is binding on the partners personally. It can be set-off against a decree obtained by one of the partners against the holder of the former decree.<sup>4</sup>

7. Decrees must be capable of execution at the same time. — It is necessary that the decrees should be capable of execution at the same time.<sup>1</sup> Thus, there can be no set-off if one of the decrees is only a preliminary decree<sup>2</sup> or if its execution is time-barred,<sup>3</sup> or if its execution is expressly postponed till the happening of a certain contingency and the contingency has not happened,<sup>4</sup> or if it has already been satisfied.<sup>5</sup> But the fact that the judgment-debtor under one decree intends appealing against the decree will not make it inexecutable so as to prevent a set-off being allowed.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held in some decisions that apart from this rule and Rule 19, infra, the Court has inherent power to allow a set-off in execution proceedings even if the claim to set-off is time-barred.<sup>7</sup>

As to whether the attachment of one of the decrees will be a bar to a claim of set-off under this rule, see Note 2 above.

8. Decrees must be in the same Court for execution. — It is essential that applications should have been made for execution of both decrees<sup>1</sup> and those applications should be pending in one and the same Court either as the Court which passed the decrees or as the Court to which the decree or decrees have been transferred for execution.<sup>2</sup>

However, if at the time execution of one decree is sought, no application for the execution of the other decree is pending, execution of the former decree may be stayed in order to enable an application for execution of the latter decree being filed and the set-off worked out.<sup>3</sup>

Further, if one of the decrees expressly stipulates that execution shall not issue till the amount under the other decree is ascertained, a set-off can be ordered even though no application for execution of the latter decree may have been filed.<sup>4</sup>

9. Execution can be had only of the decree for the larger sum. — If the amounts due under two cross-decrees are equal, they satisfy each other. If the sums are not equal, execution of the decree for the smaller sum becomes incapable of being issued;<sup>1</sup> execution can only issue under the decree for the larger amount and only in respect of the balance due after the set-off.<sup>2</sup> This does not, however, deprive the holder of the decree for the smaller amount of any claim to priority or otherwise which he might possess.<sup>3</sup> Further, if execution of the decree for the smaller sum does take place and properties are sold in auction, the sale is not invalid.<sup>4</sup>

10. Assignment of the decree. — Under Section 49 of the Code, every transferee of a decree will hold the same subject to all equities which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the decree-holder. A right to set-off is one such equity and sub-rule (2) expressly recognizes its enforcement against the assignee.<sup>1</sup>

2. A holds a decree against B for Rs. 5,000. B holds a decree against A for Rs. 6,000. A assigns his decree to C. B can claim a set-off and C will not be entitled to execute his decree for any amount.<sup>4</sup>

The fact that the assignment took place before the one or the other decree had been passed will not affect the right to set-off, provided that the assignee had notice thereof.

Illustrations

1. A who holds a decree against B assigns it to C. Before the assignment B has filed a suit against A, and the suit results in a decree. B can set off the decree even as against C.<sup>5</sup>

2. A holds a decree against B. B who has filed a suit against A assigns his interest in the suit to C. The suit is decreed. A can set off his decree as against the decree in favour of C.<sup>6</sup>

This right to set-off will be available even though the judgment-debtor had filed an appeal against the assigned decree and the assignee had not been made a party to the appeal.<sup>7</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> it was held by the Nagpur High Court that the assignee of a decree is not entitled to a set-off under this rule unless the decree was assigned to him before applications were made for the execution of the two decrees sought to be set off against each other. Thus, where A had a decree against B, and C had a decree against A and after applications had been made for the execution of both the decrees, C assigned his decree to B, it was held that B was not entitled to claim that such decree should be set off against the decree which A had obtained against him. The decision proceeds on the ground that under sub-rule (1) the right to claim a set-off arises when applications for execution are made and that unless the right to set-off existed at such time, it cannot be claimed.

An attaching decree-holder is an "assignee" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>9</sup>

11. Sub-rule (4).— This sub-rule is new. Where a person holds a decree against several persons jointly and severally and is singly liable under another decree in favour of one or more of such persons, he can claim a set-off between the two decrees.<sup>1</sup> He cannot, however, do so if his decree is not a joint and several decree as

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — This rule provides a set-off in the case of cross-claims contained in the same decree.<sup>1</sup> The object of the provision is to prevent each side taking out execution in respect of sums due under the same decree.<sup>2</sup> It is, however, not necessary that the remedy of each party against the other should be identical. In an old Allahabad case it was held that a set-off could not be ordered unless the parties had identical rights of execution in respect of their claims.<sup>3</sup> This is no longer good law and it is now well settled that a set-off under this rule will be ordered even though the remedy of each party against the other is not precisely of the same nature.<sup>4</sup> Thus, costs awarded can be set off against —

Note 1

(1) Money directed to be realized by sale of hypothecated property<sup>5</sup> or against redemption amount awarded by the decree.<sup>6</sup>

(2) Against mesne profits decreed.<sup>7</sup>

(3) Against pre-emption amount to be deposited under the decree.<sup>8</sup> But in pre-emption suits under Sections 14 and 15 of the Oudh Laws Act the purchase money must be deposited; else, the right is lost. In such suits it has been held that the costs cannot be set off against the pre-emption amount.<sup>9</sup>

(4) Amount decreed as rent and directed to be realised by sale of property.<sup>10</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> that where A, a mortgagee, sues B, the mortgagor and C, a subsequent mortgagee, and a decree is passed in favour of A but awarding costs to C, A cannot set off the costs against his decree inasmuch as A could not have recovered any amount from C.

Set-off under this rule and Rule 18 ante is not a discretionary matter depending on equitable considerations.<sup>12</sup>

On general principles and in exercise of its inherent power, an executing Court can entertain and give effect to a claim of set-off even in cases which do not come strictly within the provisions of this rule.<sup>13</sup>

The rule applies to cases in which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other under the same decree. In the undermentioned case,<sup>14</sup> it was held by the Allahabad High Court that an order against a garnishee in proceedings under O. 21 Rr. 131 to 139 of that High Court directing him to pay a certain sum to the decree-holder forms part of the original decree and hence the garnishee is entitled to set off against such sum the amount awarded to him as costs by the original decree.

By Section 265 (3) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), this rule has been made applicable to execution of decrees under that Act, subject to the other provisions of the Act and the rules that may be made under sub-section (1).

2. "Two parties." — The expression "two parties" includes two sets of parties.<sup>1</sup> It also includes the legal representatives of a party but not two different legal representatives of the same party.<sup>2</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

3. Two sums unequal — Procedure. — If the amounts under the two claims are unequal, the claim for the smaller amount is automatically satisfied and no execution should be allowed in respect of it.<sup>1</sup> Execution under the claim for the larger amount should be allowed only to the extent of the difference.<sup>2</sup> The Court should first ascertain the amounts due, enter satisfaction in respect of the claim for the smaller amount and enforce execution for the balance of the amount due under the larger claim.<sup>3</sup> Since the two claims form a single indivisible decree, and only enforceable for the difference, the fact that one of the claims is barred by limitation, does not alter the position.<sup>4</sup>

If in executing the decree for the larger claim, no deduction is made for the amount due under the smaller claim, and the claim is executed in full, the Court may order refund of the excess under Section 151.<sup>5</sup>

Where a plaintiff obtained against the defendants a decree for costs and realized the same and in appeal by the defendant the High Court vacated the decree for costs and in a further appeal to the Privy Council the appeal was dismissed and the defendant was ordered to pay the costs of the plaintiff, it was held that the defendant could, in answer to the execution of the decree for costs by the plaintiff, claim to set off the amount of costs recovered from him under the decree of the trial Court which was later on set aside.<sup>6</sup>

As seen in Note 1 above, where under a decree for pre-emption, the plaintiff is awarded costs, he is entitled to deduct such costs from the pre-emption money which he is required to deposit under the decree. Where in such a case, a certain sum is awarded to the plaintiff as costs and a smaller sum is awarded to the defendant as costs, and the decree does not direct the plaintiff to deposit the costs of the defendant also in Court, it has been held that a deposit made by the plaintiff deducting the whole amount awarded to him as costs and without giving credit for the sum awarded as costs to the defendant is not bad and that clause (b) of this rule does not strictly apply to such a case, inasmuch as there is no question of the plaintiff taking out execution for the larger sum.<sup>7</sup>

O. 21 R. 19
Notes 3-4

4. Set-off of costs. — From the illustrations given in Note 1 above it is seen that an award of costs is a claim to "recover money" within the meaning of this rule. Thus, costs awarded to one party in a suit may be set off either against costs awarded to the other party in the suit<sup>1</sup> or against other sums awarded to the latter party.<sup>2</sup> Such costs should, however, have been actually awarded.<sup>3</sup>

When costs have been awarded on interlocutory matters in the same suit between the same parties and against each other, they will be deemed to be incorporated in and to form part of, the final decree in the suit and will, therefore, be set off against each other under this rule.<sup>4</sup> in rules 18 and 19 shall apply to decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge.

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — This rule makes the provisions of Rules 18 and 19 applicable to cases where the decrees are, or one of the decrees is, a mortgage decree.<sup>1</sup> Thus,

- (1) a simple money-decree can be set off against a mortgage decree if the other conditions laid down in Rule 18 are satisfied,<sup>2</sup> and
- (2) costs awarded to a judgment-debtor may be set off against a mortgage decree obtained against him in the suit, if the other conditions laid down in Rule 19 are satisfied.<sup>3</sup>

The Rangoon High Court has, however, held that a set-off cannot be allowed if there is no personal liability under the mortgage decree.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Patna has held that it is not necessary that the mortgage decree should be actually one for

The right to set-off is one created by law and must be enforced unless it is lost under the law; it is not lost by merely asking the Court to notify the incumbrance of the decree under Order 21 Rule 66 of the Code.<sup>7</sup>

[1877, Ss. 230, 231. See S. 51 and O. 21 R. 30.]

Simultaneous execution.

*Synopsis1. Simultaneous execution. | 2. Appeal.

1. Simultaneous execution. — Rule 30 entitles the decree-holder to execute his decree against the person, or the property, or both, of the judgment-debtor. But the power to order execution against the person and property simultaneously is within the discretion of the Court,<sup>1</sup> and this rule provides that such simultaneous execution may be refused.

In exercising the discretion under this rule, regard must be had to the principle that the decree-holder has a right to realize the fruits of his decree in any manner allowed by law and therefore the refusal of simultaneous execution should be an exception rather than the rule.<sup>2</sup> If the judgment-debtor is evading payment, his arrest can be ordered even though his properties might have been attached under the same decree.<sup>3</sup> But if there is no fraud or mala fides on his part, simultaneous execution may be refused.<sup>4</sup>

This rule, however, does not empower the Court to pin the decree-holder down to any particular mode of execution or refuse one mode of execution, on the ground that he had not sought the other in the first instance.<sup>5</sup> Nor does the rule prevent the decree being executed simultaneously in several districts.<sup>6</sup>

The fact that this rule only confers a discretion on the Court to refuse simultaneous execution against the person and the property of the judgment-debtor does not mean that where such simultaneous execution is not sought for, the Court is bound to grant the application of the decree-holder for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. Under O. 21 R. 40 infra the Court has a discretion to refuse to grant such application on any of the grounds specified in that rule.<sup>7</sup> See also Noto 10 to Section 38 ante.

(b) against the legal representative of a party to the decree, or where an application is made for execution of a decree filed under the provisions of section 44A, the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice<sup>3</sup> to the person against whom execution is applied for requiring him to show cause, on a date to be fixed, why the decree should not be executed against him:

Provided that no such notice shall be necessary in consequence of more than one year having elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution if the application is made within one year from the date of the last order against the party against whom execution is applied for, made on any previous application for execution, or in consequence of the application being made against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor, if upon a previous application for execution against the same person the Court has ordered execution to issue against him.<sup>12</sup>

(2) Nothing in the foregoing sub-rule shall be deemed to preclude the Court from issuing any process in execution of a decree without issuing the notice thereby prescribed, if, for reasons to be recorded, it considers that the issue of such notice would cause unreasonable delay or would defeat the ends of justice.<sup>16</sup>

1. The words "of any decree passed on appeal from the decree sought to be executed or" which occurred in the proviso to the old Section 248 have been omitted as being unnecessary, because the decree to be executed in such cases will be the appellate decree, as held in the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

2. The Explanation contained in the old Section has also been omitted in view of the definition of "Court" given in Section 37.<sup>2</sup>

3. Sub-rule (2) is new. Vide Note 16, infra.

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — The object of the notice required to be given under this rule is not only to furnish an opportunity to the person concerned to urge any objection he may have to the maintainability of the execution application,

but also to prevent his being taken by surprise and to enable him to satisfy the decree before execution is issued against him.<sup>1</sup> The rule is imperative and notice shall be issued —

(1) where the application is made one year after the date of the decree,<sup>2</sup> or

(2) where it is made against the legal representatives of a party to the decree.<sup>3</sup>

An amendment, after one year, of an application for execution made within one year, does not render the application one made after one year for the purposes of this rule.<sup>4</sup> The necessity for notice in an application for execution against the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor is not confined to cases where execution is taken out against them in the first instance; it equally applies to cases where execution had been previously taken against the judgment-debtor himself and, on his death, the execution is sought to be taken out against the legal representatives.<sup>5</sup>

A notice under this rule may be issued by the Court executing a transferred decree, while a notice under O. 21 R. 16 should be given only by the Court which passed the decree.<sup>6</sup>

The issue of a notice under this rule to the guardian of a minor judgment-debtor raises no presumption that he has been appointed guardian by implication by the Court.<sup>7</sup>

The rule does not apply to summary proceedings like those contained in Section 111 of the Madras Estates Land Act.<sup>8</sup>

2a. Legal representative. — For definition of the expression "legal representative" see Section 2, clause (11). See also Note 10 to O. 22 R. 3. According to that definition, a legal representative is a person who represents the estate of a deceased person. Hence, on the adjudication of a person as an insolvent, the Official Receiver cannot be said to be his 'legal representative.'<sup>1</sup> But under the amendment of the rule by the Madras High Court, notice is required to be given to the Official Receiver where the judgment-debtor has been declared an insolvent.<sup>2</sup> In the undermentioned decision<sup>3</sup> of the Calcutta High Court it was assumed that the Official Receiver is a legal representative of an insolvent judgment-debtor to whom notice must issue under this rule. It is submitted that the assumption is not correct. It may be noted in this connexion that the decision of the Privy Council in Raghunath Das v. Sundar

3. "Shall issue notice." — The provisions of this rule are mandatory<sup>1</sup> and the issue of the notice is a condition precedent to the validity of the execution proceedings.<sup>2</sup> It is the duty of the Court to issue the notice whether the decree-holder has asked for it or not<sup>3</sup> and the failure to do so will render the proceedings null and void.<sup>4</sup> See Note 5 below.

The rule is, however, sufficiently complied with if notice has been given to all persons interested, and the fact that some of them were minors for whom guardians had not been appointed will not invalidate the execution proceedings if the others sufficiently represented them.<sup>5</sup> Where the Court executing the decree is also the Court which passed the decree, there is nothing in this rule to prohibit the issue of a combined notice under this rule and Rule 16 ante.<sup>6</sup>

A minor who attained majority pending execution proceedings is not entitled, on that ground, to a fresh notice under this rule.<sup>7</sup>

A notice under the rule should be to specifically show cause why the decree should not be executed.<sup>8</sup>

4. Proof of notice. — Where an execution is impeached on the ground of want of notice under this rule, the onus of proving the want of notice will be on the party setting it up.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the issue of a notice under the rule being the duty of Court, it will be presumed that the Court has done all that it was legally bound to do. In this connection an entry on the order sheet<sup>2</sup> or a report of the Nazir<sup>3</sup> to the effect that notice has been served will be prima facie evidence of the service of notice.

5. Effect of omission to give notice. — Before the date of the Privy Council decision in Malkarjun v. Narhari,<sup>1</sup> it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta that a sale in execution without giving the notice required by this rule was absolutely void and without jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Madras, on the other hand, held that the absence of notice was only a material irregularity and that the sale was only voidable, and not void.<sup>3</sup> In this state of conflict of authorities the Privy Council decided the case of Malkarjun v. Narhari.<sup>4</sup> There, a judgment-debtor having died, the decree was executed against his estate. A notice under the rule was issued and served on a person as the legal representative of the judgment-debtor. He appeared and objected that he was not the legal representative. The Court, however, decided that he was the legal representative and proceeded with the execution. The properties of the judgment-debtor were sold in court-auction. It was ultimately found that the person to whom the notice was sent was not the proper legal representative. The question before the Privy Council was whether the sale was, under the circumstances, void for want of jurisdiction or only voidable on the ground of material irregularity. Their Lordships decided that the Court had jurisdiction to decide whether a person was a legal representative of a party or not, that having decided it in a particular manner, the decision could not be said to be without jurisdiction, that the case was only one of material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction and that the sale was, therefore, not void.

Notwithstanding the above points of distinction, the decision came to be regarded in India as one equally applying to a total omission to issue notice and as laying down the law that, even in the absence altogether of any notice, there was only a material irregularity and not a want of jurisdiction and that the sale was voidable and not void. Accordingly, the Calcutta High Court<sup>5</sup> changed its original view and held that an omission to give notice under the rule was only a material irregularity rendering the execution sale voidable. The Allahabad and Madras High Courts also began to hold the same view.<sup>6</sup> This view held the field till the Privy Council had occasion to clarify the whole position in Raghunath Das v. Sundar Das.<sup>7</sup> In that case, the judgment-debtor having become insolvent, his properties had vested in the Official Assignee. When the decree-holder took out execution a notice was issued to the Official Assignee to show cause why he should not be substituted for the debtor but there was no notice to show cause why the decree should not be executed. It was, therefore, a case of omission to issue notice under the rule. The execution proceeded and the properties of the debtor were sold in court-auction. The question before the Privy Council was whether the sale was void or only voidable. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that a notice under the rule was necessary in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell the property, that the notice to show cause against substitution was not enough and that the sale was, therefore, void and the purchaser obtained no title. Their Lordships pointed out —

- (1) that in Malkarjun's case a notice having been issued and served, though on a wrong person, the Court had acquired jurisdiction to deal with the matter ;
- (2) that the Court in deciding upon a wrong person as the legal representative nevertheless acted with jurisdiction;

O. 21 R. 22
Note 5

Since the said decision in Raghunath Das's case, all the High Courts<sup>8</sup> except the Madras High Court veered round to their old view, viz., that the sale was without jurisdiction and therefore void. The Madras High Court,<sup>9</sup> however, still continued to hold that the sale was only voidable and not void distinguishing Raghunath Das's case on the ground that it was a case under the old Code which contained no provision similar to that contained in the present sub-rule (2), and that in view of the recognition in the present sub-rule (2) of the Court's discretion in the matter of issuing notice there was no longer any question of want of jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup> The matter came up before a Full Bench of the same High Court which finally laid down that a sale held under the circumstances mentioned above was void for want of jurisdiction and not merely voidable.<sup>11</sup> This view was affirmed by another Full Bench of the same High Court in Kanchamalai v. Shahaji Raja<sup>12</sup> in which it was held that even if the judgment-debtor died after the property had been attached and ordered to be sold, the absence of notice to the legal representative under this rule would render the sale void.

Thus, it may now be taken as well settled that in cases of a total omission to issue a notice under the rule the sale is absolutely void and not merely voidable. It is immaterial whether the property sold is immovable or moveable.<sup>13</sup> Nor is it material whether the purchaser is the decree-holder himself<sup>14</sup> or a stranger.<sup>15</sup> The Nagpur High Court has, however, held in the undermentioned case<sup>16</sup> that the failure to bring the legal representative of the judgment-debtor on the record does not necessarily make the proceedings in execution a nullity. It is submitted that the decision is not correct.

However, the only object of the rule is to give the person concerned an opportunity to show cause against execution. Consequently, if, though no notice is served, he appears and contests the application<sup>17</sup> or if he was served with a notice under Rule 66 and was thus aware of the application pending against him,<sup>18</sup> the object of the rule is achieved and the proceedings are valid. It has been held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh<sup>19</sup> that the omission to issue notice under this rule does not render the sale in execution of a mortgage decree void, inasmuch as the jurisdiction to sell the property is derived from the decree itself and not by reason of the notice. See also the undormentioned cases.<sup>20</sup>

6. Notice to wrong person. — In Malkarjun v. Narhari,<sup>1</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council held that if a notice is, as a fact, issued but served on a wrong person and on the objection of the latter the Court decides that he is the right legal representative, it acts only in the exercise of jurisdiction and the sale is only voidable. In such cases the proper legal representatives are equally bound by the execution proceedings though they were not parties thereto.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where, owing to the fact that both the decree-holder and the Court are not aware of the true age of the judgment-debtor, a notice is issued to a major judgment-debtor as if he were a minor, the issue of such notice only amounts to an irregularity and no question of jurisdiction arises.<sup>3</sup> But if the decree-holder was aware of the proper legal representatives and deliberately gets notice served on a wrong person and there is no adjudication by the Court as to who is the legal representative, the sale will be void.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 6-9

7. Irregular service of notice. — The notice issued under this rule must be in accordance with law and must satisfy the requirements laid down in sub-rule (1).<sup>1</sup> Thus, a day must be specified for the appearance of the person to whom the notice is issued<sup>2</sup> allowing sufficient time to enable him to come and oppose the application,<sup>3</sup> and the notice must be signed by the Judge or other officer.<sup>4</sup>

But an irregularity in the service of notice is quite different from an omission to issue notice, and will not make the subsequent proceedings void.<sup>5</sup> The judgment-debtor or the legal representative will not be precluded from setting up his defence of objections at a later stage.<sup>6</sup> The irregularity may also furnish a ground for avoiding a sale under Rule 90.<sup>7</sup>

As regards the mode in which service should be effected, it is a matter for the Court to determine in every case whether there has been sufficient service and it is not every departure from the prescribed mode of service that will invalidate the service.<sup>8</sup>

8. Objection as to notice, when may be taken. — Since the question of the issue of notice is one affecting the jurisdiction of the Court, an objection that no notice was issued is entertainable at any time, even in appeal<sup>1</sup> but not if it is likely to take the other side by surprise.<sup>2</sup>

But an irregular or insufficient service of such notice is only an irregularity and an objection based on the ground of non-service or insufficient service should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity.<sup>3</sup>

9. More than one notice, if contemplated by the Rule. — The provisions of the rule as to notice are not confined to the first execution application. They apply to every subsequent application also.<sup>1</sup> The only exception in the latter case is that contained in the proviso,<sup>2</sup> viz. :

(1) If on a prior execution application an order has been passed against the judgment-debtor (or his legal representative), no notice will be necessary on a subsequent execution application presented within one year after that order, though more than one year might have elapsed from the date of the decree.<sup>3</sup>

(2) If on a prior execution application execution has been ordered to issue against the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, no notice will be necessary (on the ground of the application being one against a legal representative) for a subsequent execution application against the same legal representative.

Consequently, if the subsequent execution application is presented more than one year after the decree and after the last order against the judgment-debtor made on an application for execution, notice is necessary.<sup>4</sup> It is, however, unnecessary that the order should be a subsisting one.<sup>5</sup>

An order directing the execution proceedings to be struck off for the default of the decree-holder is not an order "against" the judgment-debtor and hence does not furnish a fresh starting point for the calculation of the period of one year under the proviso to this rule.<sup>6</sup>

But the rule will apply only to a fresh application for execution. Where the proceedings are but a continuation of a prior execution case, no notice of such proceedings is necessary.<sup>7</sup> Acting on this principle the High Court of Madras<sup>8</sup> has held that where properties have been attached in a prior execution application and the application has been dismissed leaving the attachment subsisting, a subsequent application for sale of the property will not require a notice under this rule.

10. Remedy when property has been sold without notice under this Rule. — When a sale is held without the issue of a notice under this rule, the party aggrieved will be entitled to have the sale declared void and will be further entitled to claim damages.<sup>1</sup> This he may do by means of an application under Section 47.<sup>2</sup> See Note 61 to Section 47. As to the period of limitation for such application, see Note 88 to Section 47 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>3</sup>

11. Date of the decree. — The period of one year is to be computed from the date of the decree capable of execution. Thus, if the decree of the first Court is affirmed or modified in appeal, the date of the decree is the date of the appellate decree. But if the appeal is dismissed for default, the date of the decree is that of the decree appealed against.<sup>1</sup>

Where a decree provides for the payment of money in instalments, the period of one year should be computed from the date of the decree and not from the date of default in payment of the instalment.<sup>2</sup>

12. Notice, when not necessary. — The principle underlying the mandatory provision of the rule is that the interests which would be affected by the execution should be sufficiently represented and that an opportunity should be given for showing cause, if any, against the execution. A notice should, therefore, be insisted on only to the extent necessary for that purpose. Therefore, in cases falling under clause (a) of sub-rule (1), no notice need be issued to a judgment-debtor who has no interest in the property against which execution is sought.<sup>1</sup> And in cases falling under clause (b) of sub-rule (1), it is enough if notice has gone to an adult legal representative capable of representing the estate; notice to the other legal representatives is not essential.<sup>2</sup> Nor is any notice essential where the legal representative is already a party on the record though in another capacity.<sup>3</sup>

13. Notice and limitation. — By virtue of clause (5), column 3, Article 182 of the Limitation Act of 1908, a notice issued under this rule will be a step-in-aid of execution in the case of decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts.<sup>1</sup> For this purpose it is not necessary that the application on which the notice was issued should be a bona fide application.<sup>2</sup> Nor is it material that the application was defective or irregular,<sup>3</sup> or that it was not actually served.<sup>4</sup> But it is necessary that the notice should have been issued on an application which was not time-barred.<sup>5</sup> On the question as to the date from which the period of three years is to be computed, there was a conflict of views under the Limitation Act of 1877, the High Courts of Allahabad<sup>6</sup> and Bombay<sup>7</sup> holding that time should be computed from the date when the Court ordered the notice to issue, the Calcutta and Madras High Courts holding that it should be computed only from the date when the notice was actually issued.<sup>8</sup> The word

"issuing" which occurred in clause (6) of Article 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 corresponding to Article 182 clause (6) was changed into the word "issue" in the Act of 1908 and it was held by the High Court of Bombay<sup>9</sup> that the effect of the change was to give effect to the Calcutta and Madras view. Under the Act of 1908, it was held by all the High Courts except the High Court of Allahabad and by the Chief Court of Oudh that it is the date of the issue of the notice that is the starting point of limitation.<sup>10</sup> The Allahabad High Court, and following it the Oudh Chief Court were, however, of opinion that the new Act did not make any change in the law. They therefore held the same view as that of the Allahabad High Court before the Act of 1908.<sup>11</sup>

Article 182 of the Limitation Act of 1908 has now been amended by Act IX of 1927 by which clauses (5) and (6) of the Article have been amended and substituted as follows :

"Clause 5. (where the application next hereinafter mentioned has been made) the date of the final order passed on an application made in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution, or to take some step-in-aid of execution of the decree or order, or Clause 6. (in respect of any amount recovered by execution of the decree or order, which the decree-holder has been directed to refund by a decree passed in a suit for such refund) the date of the last-mentioned decree, or, in the case of an appeal therefrom, the date of the final decree of the Appellate Court or of the withdrawal of the appeal, or"

Under the present Act, as amended, therefore, the time is to be computed from the date of the final order passed on such an application. Where no notice has been issued at all, a mere order for issuing notice will not, however, be a step-in-aid of execution.<sup>12</sup>

In respect of decrees of Chartered High Courts the limitation for execution is prescribed in Article 183 of the Limitation Act. The said Article makes no specific mention of a notice under this rule, but it contains a provision that such decrees may be executed within 12 years from the date when they have been "revived." The term "revivor" has nowhere been defined. It was introduced on the basis of the English Common Law Practice (which prevailed in the Supreme Courts of India) under which, if a writ of execution was not served out within a year and a day, it was necessary to revive the decree by a process known as scire facias. Till then the decree would be in a "dormant" condition. It will have to be "revived" so as to be made executable. The "revivor," therefore, consists in getting a declaration recorded that execution is intended to be enforced under the decree.

The question, therefore, is whether a notice under this rule will operate as a "revivor." In this connection it has been held that an order for execution made after the issue of a notice under this rule will operate as a revivor.<sup>13</sup> It is important to note that to constitute a revivor the following three conditions must be satisfied, viz. —

13a. Failure to show cause why decree should not be executed — Effect.

— See Note 23 to Section 11 ante, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

14. Court executing the decree. — The rule provides that the notice shall be issued by "the Court executing the decree." The expression will include the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution. In cases, therefore, where the decree is transferred for execution, the transferee Court can, and in fact is the only Court competent to issue the notice.<sup>1</sup>

But an application to execute against the legal representatives has to be made to the Court which passed the decree.<sup>2</sup> In such cases, therefore, the application will be made to the Court which passed the decree but notice under the rule will be issued by the transferee Court.<sup>3</sup>

16. Sub-rule (2). — The mandatory character of the rule is not in any way abrogated by sub-rule (2).<sup>1</sup> The sub-rule gives a discretion to the Court to dispense with the notice under certain circumstances.<sup>2</sup> If such notice is dispensed with, the reasons should be recorded.<sup>3</sup> The Rangoon High Court<sup>4</sup> is of opinion that the omission to record reasons is not a mere irregularity but a defect which goes to the very root of the proceedings and renders them void for want of jurisdiction. The Bombay,<sup>5</sup> Calcutta,<sup>6</sup> Madras,<sup>7</sup> Patna<sup>8</sup> and Oudh<sup>9</sup> Courts have, however, held that such omission will be a mere irregularity and that the proceedings will not be totally invalid merely by reason of the omission. The rule as amended by the Lahore High Court expressly provides that a failure to record reasons is only an irregularity not affecting jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup>

17. Appeal. — An order on a question of notice under the rule will come under Section 47 and is, therefore, appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> But an order of arrest without notice is not a final order and is not, therefore, appealable.<sup>2</sup> Even in such cases the High Court will interfere in its revisional jurisdiction in extreme cases.<sup>3</sup>

An order allowing or refusing an application to set aside a sale for want of a notice under the rule comes under Section 47 and is, therefore, appealable as a decree.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — If the person to whom notice is issued under Rule 22 does not appear and show cause against execution, the Court is bound to order execution. Thereupon such person will be concluded and bound by the order and cannot go behind it.<sup>1</sup> If, however, the execution application is subsequently dismissed under Rule 57 of this Order, the dismissal has been held to have the effect of vacating the previous order for execution.<sup>2</sup>

If, on the day fixed, neither party appears, the application can be dismissed.<sup>3</sup>

2. "The Court shall consider such objection." — If the person to whom the notice is issued appears and offers objections, the Court is equally bound to consider those objections.<sup>1</sup> There is no particular form in which the objections are to be presented and, if in writing, they need not be verified.<sup>2</sup>

Such objections should, however, go to the root of the executability of the decree,<sup>3</sup> and not be merely formal or immaterial ones which do not prevent execution,<sup>4</sup> for, apart from considering whether the decree is executable or not, the executing Court cannot go behind the decree. See Section 38, Note 8.

3. Appeal. — An order allowing or refusing execution under this rule is appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup>

Other Topics (miscellaneous)

Presumption as to authority to sign and onus. "Unless it sees cause to the contrary." See Note 5. Note 1.

1. "Shall issue process." — If the preliminary measures prescribed by the previous rules have been taken, the Court is bound to issue process and cannot refuse to do so, unless "it sees cause to the contrary" such as the judgment-debtor being entitled to a right to set-off, or the applicant asking for simultaneous execution.<sup>1</sup>

In the absence of any such cause the Court cannot refuse issue of process.<sup>2</sup> The fact that a previous execution application proved infructuous will not justify such a refusal.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Shall be sealed." — Every process issued under this rule shall be sealed. The provision is mandatory and without the seal the process will be invalid and its execution illegal.<sup>1</sup> Resistance to the execution of such a process will therefore constitute no offence.<sup>2</sup>

3. Delegation of authority to execute, if can be made. — The rule only says that the process shall be delivered to the proper officer to be executed. It is not necessary that the "proper officer" should himself execute the process,<sup>1</sup> and there is nothing to prevent his delegating a subordinate of his to execute the process.<sup>2</sup> But a process issued to a bailiff cannot be executed by a nazir.<sup>3</sup>

4. Arrest or attachment without warrant. — An officer effecting an arrest or attachment should have the warrant in his possession, otherwise the arrest<sup>1</sup> or attachment<sup>2</sup> will be illegal.

5. "Shall be signed." — A process issued under this rule which is not signed by the Judge is illegal.<sup>1</sup> If, however, any other officer of the Court is specially authorized in this behalf, it is enough if it is signed by him.<sup>2</sup> Such authority should be in writing and kept in the Court.<sup>3</sup> If, however, such process is signed by a sheristadar "by order," the presumption will be that he was authorized in this behalf,<sup>4</sup> and the onus of showing that he had no such authority will be on the party who denies the authority.<sup>5</sup>

6. "A day shall be specified on or before which it shall be executed." — A warrant which does not specify the date on or before which it is to be executed is invalid and its execution is illegal.<sup>1</sup>

If such date is specified the process should be executed on or before that date; its execution later is illegal.<sup>2</sup>

Other Topics (miscellaneous)

Powers of transferee Court. See Note 1. Sub-rule (3). See Note 1.

1. Scope of the Rule. — Under Section 42 ante the Court executing a decree sent to it has the same powers in executing such a decree as if the decree had been passed by itself. But such Court cannot question the legality of the order under which the decree was sent to it for execution, nor can it decide the question whether the decree was barred by limitation on the date of the order. See Section 42, Note 1, ante.

Such question can properly be dealt with only by the Court which passed the decree and, therefore, to enable the judgment-debtor to apply to such Court for an order in respect of the decree which is sought to be executed, the Court to which a decree is sent for execution may order stay of execution under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Thus, the executing Court may order stay of execution —

- (i) to enable the judgment-debtor to get the decree amended;<sup>2</sup>
- (ii) to enable him to show that the decree is satisfied,<sup>3</sup> or is not existing;<sup>4</sup>
- (iii) to enable him to get the decree passed ex parte against him set aside;<sup>5</sup>
- (iv) to enable him to get the decree passed against him set aside on the ground that it was obtained by fraud;<sup>6</sup>
- (v) for deciding if the decree is barred.<sup>7</sup>

An order for stay of execution under this rule can only be passed on the application of the judgment-debtor and no stay can be granted on the application of third parties or of the decree-holder.<sup>8</sup>

Under sub-rule (3) of this rule, the Court may impose conditions or require security, as it thinks fit, before directing stay of execution.<sup>9</sup>

A Court to which a decree has been sent for execution has no power to refuse to execute the decree even for a short period except in the circumstances set out in this rule.<sup>10</sup>

Under Section 265 (3) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), the provisions of the Code relating to stay of execution apply to proceedings referred to in that Section.

2. Appeal. — An order directing security under sub-rule (3) is not an order determining the rights of parties and is not therefore appealable as a decree under Sections 47 and 96.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 44 to Section 47, ante.

| 3. "Until the pending suit has been decided." |  |

1. Scope of the Rule. — If a suit by a judgment-debtor is pending in a Court against the holder of a decree of that Court, the execution of the decree may, under this rule, be stayed until the disposal of the suit.<sup>1</sup> The object of this rule is twofold —

- (i) to enable the judgment-debtor, and the decree-holder to adjust their claims against each other, and
- (ii) to prevent a multiplicity of execution proceedings.<sup>2</sup>

But the execution Court has no power, under this rule, to stay execution of the decree if, at that time, no suit is pending against the holder of the decree<sup>3</sup> or if the suit is against the decree-holder, but filed by third parties.<sup>4</sup>

If the execution of the decree has been carried out and the decree-holder has obtained possession of the property, the Court has no power under this rule to order restitution of such property.<sup>5</sup>

The power to stay execution under this rule is purely a discretionary one.<sup>6</sup>

The mere pendency of a suit in which the decree-holder is a party is not a ground for stay of execution; such stay can be granted only on sufficient grounds being made out.<sup>7</sup> Thus, the pendency of a suit for administration of the estate of the mortgagor is no ground for the stay of execution of the mortgage decree.<sup>8</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that if the suit against the decree-holder is for a declaration that the decree is satisfied by an uncertified adjustment out of Court, no stay of execution of the decree can be granted under this rule.<sup>9</sup> But, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that this rule embraces every kind of suit which is maintainable. Thus, according to the Madras High Court a suit by the judgment-debtor for damages for breach of an agreement whereby the defendant had agreed to receive in satisfaction of his decree certain bonds and to get satisfaction entered up, is a suit to which this rule will apply.<sup>10</sup>

O. 21 R. 29

This rule must be read with O. 21 R. 92. Hence, after a sale in execution has taken place, the Court cannot stay the confirmation of the sale.<sup>11</sup>

This rule has no application to the granting of injunctions and no security can be demanded in such applications on principles analogous to this rule.<sup>12</sup>

The distinction between a temporary injunction restraining the execution of a decree and a stay order is that the former is not directed to a Court but to an individual. Proceedings taken in contravention of a temporary injunction are not a nullity as being without jurisdiction, and the effect of non-compliance with a temporary injunction is only to make the offender liable to punishment. But, proceedings in contravention of a stay order are a nullity.<sup>13</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>14</sup>

1a. "Holder of a decree." — This term will include an assignee of a decree and a suit by the judgment-debtor against such assignee is within this rule.<sup>1</sup>

2. "Such Court." — The Court in which the suit is pending has power to stay execution of the decree under this rule, only if the decree is a decree of that Court.<sup>1</sup> Such power can be exercised by it even if the decree has been transferred for execution to another Court.<sup>2</sup> But if the judgment-debtor's suit is pending before the transferee Court, the transferee Court has no power, under this rule, to stay execution of the decree.<sup>3</sup> But the contrary view has been held in the undermentioned decisions.<sup>4</sup>

The words "decree of such Court" include also the decree passed on appeal from the decree of that Court.<sup>5</sup> See Section 37 ante.

The words "such Court" refer only to the Court and not to the Judge presiding over the Court. Where there are two Judges attached to the Court, and the suit is pending before one Judge and the decree is sought to be executed before the other, the Judge before whom the suit is pending has power under this rule to stay execution of the decree.<sup>6</sup>

3. "Until the pending suit has been decided." — The Calcutta High Court has held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that these words should be interpreted to mean "until the claim in the pending suit has been finally decided after an exhaustion of all rights of appeal and not merely after a decree has been passed by the Court in which the suit is pending." The Rangoon High Court has also held a similar view.<sup>2</sup> But this view has been dissented from in the undermentioned Calcutta case<sup>3</sup> approving of an earlier view of the Punjab Chief Court,<sup>4</sup> wherein it was held that the Court may stay execution, pending appeal, under its inherent powers though not under this rule.

4. Execution of award, if can be stayed under this Rule. — An award filed into Court under Section 11 of the Arbitration Act of 1899 is enforceable as a decree of the Court under Section 15 of that Act. But Section 15 does not enact that the award, when filed, is to be deemed to be a decree of the Court.<sup>1</sup> Nor does it give any "power to turn such an award into a judgment."<sup>2</sup> Therefore, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay<sup>3</sup> that the provisions of this rule cannot apply to stay execution of an award. The Calcutta High Court has held that the words "enforceable as a decree" mean that all the provisions relating to execution of decrees such as O. 21 R. 16 (transfer of decrees)<sup>4</sup> and O. 21 R. 50 (execution by or against firms)<sup>5</sup> are applicable to the execution of awards as well.

O. 21 R. 29

5. Inherent power to stay execution. — See Note 3 above.

6. Appeal. — An order directing security to be given is not appealable as it does not determine conclusively the rights of the parties; but the High Court may, if the discretion is not judicially exercised, interfere in revision.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 44 to Section 47, supra.

land acquisition proceedings, could be enforced under that Section.<sup>1</sup> The same procedure will apply under this Code in view of the provisions of Section 36, ante.

Under clauses (4) and (5) of Section 36 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), the Insolvency Court is authorized to order payment of money or delivery of property by strangers to the Official Assignee where their liability to the insolvent is established on enquiry. Clause (6) of Section 36 of that Act enacts that such orders shall be executed in the same manner as decrees for the payment of money or for the delivery of property under the Civil Procedure Code.

2. "Decree for the payment of money."—A decree under which maintenance is payable periodically at a certain rate is a decree for the payment of money.<sup>1</sup>

See also Note 6 to Section 73.

3. As an alternative to some other relief.—See Notes to O. 20 R. 10.

4. Option as to mode of execution.—It is for the decree-holder to decide how he should execute his decree for the payment of money, whether by the arrest of the judgment-debtor, or by attachment and sale of his property. While the Court has discretion to refuse execution against the person and property simultaneously under Rule 21, supra, it cannot compel the decree-holder to adopt any particular mode of execution.<sup>1</sup> A decree for rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act is a decree "for the payment of money" and the decree-holder has the right to ask for personal execution against the judgment-debtor, notwithstanding that he has also the right to sell the tenure in arrears.<sup>2</sup>

5. Detention of surety in civil prison.—See Note 14 to Section 145.

6. Attachment and sale.—The words "attachment and sale" in this rule must be taken together and not distributively. Therefore, an attachment is a necessary preliminary to a sale.<sup>1</sup> As to what property can be attached, see Section 60, and as to whether absence of attachment is a material irregularity or not, see Notes to Rule 90, infra.

This rule applies only to cases of decrees for money which do not affect any specific immovable property. Thus, where a consent decree provided that if a certain

See also O. 21 R. 11. Therefore, rateable distribution of assets is a mode of execution of a decree for the payment of money.<sup>1</sup> Though Section 51 prescribes the appointment of a receiver as one of the modes of execution, nothing is mentioned about it in this rule, since the subject is dealt with in Order 40 infra.<sup>2</sup> Execution of a money decree by ejectment of a tenant is a method provided by Section 61 of the Oudh Rent Act in addition to the modes prescribed by this Code.<sup>3</sup>

8. Notice to judgment-debtor. — The Court has ample jurisdiction to issue a warrant of arrest under this Section without previously serving a notice on the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or for the recovery of a wife" which occurred in Section 259 of the old Code after the words "share in a specific moveable" have been omitted in this rule. The reason is that the wife is not a chattel and cannot, therefore, be delivered to her husband. See Notes to Rule 33, infra.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule does not apply to a case where the property sought to be seized is not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, but in the custody of a third party.<sup>1</sup> The words "specific moveable" in this rule do not include money and therefore a decree for money cannot be executed under the provisions of this rule.<sup>2</sup>

In order to enable a person to obtain delivery of specific moveable property by suit and to enforce the decree by the stringent methods prescribed in this rule, the plaintiff must allege and prove facts which give him a right to compel the delivery of the specific moveables under Section 11 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877).<sup>3</sup>

An order under Section 36, clause (5) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909) for delivery of any property can be executed in the manner specified in this rule.

3. Decree for specific moveable property. — A decree for possession of three-fourths of a person's estate consisting of moveable and immovable property is a decree that can be executed under this rule so far as the moveable property is concerned.<sup>1</sup>

4. Seizure of property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor. — It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that Rule 58 infra is applicable not only to attachments in execution of money decrees, but also to seizures under this rule.

This rule provides that if the goods are capable of delivery they must be delivered and that if they are not, then the assessed damages should be paid.<sup>1</sup> Where a decree is passed as provided by O. 20 R. 10, the decree-holder cannot execute the money portion of the decree alone without following the procedure prescribed by this rule, i. e., without applying for delivery of the moveable property.<sup>2</sup>

"In other cases, such compensation as it thinks fit." — A decree for the delivery of a specific moveable need not necessarily in all cases be in the alternative form, and an enquiry as to damages in such cases may more profitably be held in execution.<sup>1</sup> Such damages need not be assessed only on the footing of wilful neglect or devastavit.<sup>2</sup>

Amendment after 1908. —

The words "in the case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights by the attachment of his property or, in the case of a decree for specific performance of a contract or for an injunction" have been newly inserted by Act XXIX of 1923. See Note 4 below.

O. 21 R. 32
Notes 1-5

2. Scope of the Rule. — A decree which does not contain any direction to the defendant to do or to refrain from doing any act, but is merely a declaratory one, cannot be executed under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

3. Decree for specific performance. — As to the cases in which specific performance can be decreed, see Sections 12 to 30 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup> A decree for specific performance of a contract for sale of immovable property does not by itself pass title.<sup>2</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Patna<sup>3</sup> that the Court executing a decree for specific performance of a contract of sale is competent to grant possession of the property to the decree-holder, even though no relief for possession was either asked for in the plaint or awarded by the decree. See also Order 2 Rule 2 Note 16, supra.

A decree for specific performance operates in favour of both parties. The defendant is as much entitled to enforce it as the plaintiff. A decree that an agreement ought to be specifically performed is a decree against the plaintiff as well as against the defendant, and in favour of the defendant as well as in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant is equally a decree-holder in such cases.<sup>4</sup>

4. Restitution of conjugal rights. — A decree for the restitution of conjugal rights passed under the Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (XV of 1865) is not executable under this rule, since Section 36 of that Act provides a remedy in substitution of the remedy under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But such a decree between Hindus or Mahomedans can be enforced under this rule.<sup>2</sup>

A wife is not a chattel and cannot, therefore, be delivered as such in execution under the previous rule or this rule.<sup>3</sup> A suit for recovery of a wife must, therefore, be treated as a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights.<sup>4</sup> It was held in the under-mentioned cases<sup>5</sup> that where a wife disobeyed a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights passed against her, the decree could be enforced by her imprisonment or by the attachment of her property or by both. But, since the amendment of this rule by Act XXIX of 1923 referred to in Note 1 above, such a decree can be enforced only by the attachment of the defendant's property. See also Notes to Rule 33, infra.

from going to her husband, the decree should declare the husband's right and direct that the other defendants do refrain from preventing the plaintiff's wife from returning to him.<sup>1</sup> Where they do not obey the decree, execution can proceed against them under this rule.<sup>2</sup>

Where, in a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights, the plaintiff's mother-in-law who was impleaded as a defendant in the suit, was directed to refrain from preventing the plaintiff's wife from returning to him, it was held that her action in merely permitting her daughter, who was of age, to reside in her home after decree, did not justify the attachment of her property under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

6. Decree for injunction. — This rule applies to cases where a party is directed to do some act, as well as to cases where he is directed to abstain from doing an act.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Madras has expressed an obiter dictum in the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> that an interim injunction may be enforced under this rule read with Section 36, ante.

As to whether a decree for injunction can be executed against vendees from the defendant and against the legal representatives of a deceased defendant, see Note 18 to Section 50, ante.

Under the old Code it was held that disobedience to an order directing the defendant to render accounts within a particular time was disobedience to an order "requiring the performance of a particular act" within the meaning of Section 260 and consequently was punishable under that Section.<sup>3</sup> But under the present rule those words have been omitted and an order requiring the defendant to furnish accounts is not an injunction within the meaning of this rule and therefore the disobedience of that order cannot be dealt with under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

7. "Opportunity of obeying the decree." — Before allowing execution under this rule against a judgment-debtor, the Court should see if he has had an opportunity of obeying the decree and whether he has wilfully failed to obey it.<sup>1</sup> If he has had such an opportunity, then execution may issue against him without giving him a further opportunity to obey the decree and the Court is not bound to issue notice calling upon him to obey the decree.<sup>2</sup>

Where an application for enforcing a decree under this rule has been dismissed on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no opportunity of obeying the decree, (Decree in injunction suit passed in presence of defendants — No disobedience of injunction on part of defendants — Plaintiff is not entitled to ask Court to issue notice or order embodying a second application after such opportunity has been given is not barred.<sup>3</sup>

O. 21 R. 82
Notes 7-9

8. Sale of property — Sub-rule (3). — This rule is a highly penal one and must be construed strictly. When a sale is ordered under sub-rule (3), the following three conditions must exist —

- (a) a valid original attachment,
- (b) application, within one year of the attachment, by the decree-holder, and
- (c) lapse of one year from date of attachment.<sup>1</sup>

Thus, where an order of attachment was made on 27-6-1908 and was carried out on 20-7-1908 and no application for sale was made before 20-7-1909, it was held that the attachment ceased to exist and the order for sale was, therefore, set aside.<sup>2</sup> A sale held under sub-rule (3) cannot be set aside under O. 21 R. 89, sub-rule (1) even where the execution of the decree under which the sale took place is restrained by an injunction granted subsequent to the sale in a separate suit.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree is attached under this rule, the fact that this rule prohibits the sale of the attached property before the expiry of one year from the date of the attachment is no bar to the attached decree being executed by the holder thereof under O. 21 R. 53, sub-rule (2) before the expiry of one year.<sup>4</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>5</sup> a decree for injunction was passed against a defendant prohibiting him from holding a certain fair. He disobeyed the injunction by holding the fair. Thereupon, his property was attached and after the prescribed period it was sought to be sold. The judgment-debtor objected on the ground that the property could be sold under sub-rule (3) only if after the attachment he has disobeyed the injunction again. It was held that where the injunction requires the defendant to do a certain act, and upon his failure to do the act his property is attached, but subsequently within the period specified in the rule he carried out the directions in the decree, his property cannot be sold. But, where the injunction is one restraining the defendant from doing a certain act and he has disobeyed the decree by doing the act, he has, by his own act made it impossible for himself to obey the decree (so that there can be no question of a second disobedience); and in such a case, the judgment-debtor cannot escape the liability to have the attached property sold after the lapse of the prescribed period and have compensation paid to the decree-holder out of the sale proceeds.

9. Disobedience of order for injunction or specific performance. — Where a defendant has wilfully failed to obey a decree for injunction or for specific performance passed against him, the decree may be enforced by his detention in the civil prison or by the attachment of his property or by both.<sup>1</sup> But the Court has no injunction and have it served on defendants — O. 21 R. 82 does not provide for such notices or order.)) power to order the defendant to execute a security bond for obeying the decree.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree requires the plaintiff to do certain acts necessary for the enjoyment of his property and restrains the defendant from interfering with it, the defendant is bound to give the plaintiff reasonable facilities for doing it and the refusal to do so can be punished under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

Under the old Code, a Court, in executing a decree which directed a defendant to do a particular act, had no power to have the thing done by an officer of the Court when the defendant failed to obey the decree, inasmuch as it was not one of the modes of execution prescribed by Section 260.<sup>4</sup> But now under sub-rule (5) of this rule the Court has got the power to direct the act to be done so far as practicable by the decree-holder or by some other person appointed by the Court at the expense of the judgment-debtor.<sup>5</sup> The Court is, however, not justified in ordering the police to interfere in the matter, or in appointing a commissioner to see that the decree-holder performs without obstruction the acts required to be done.<sup>6</sup> Where, after a decree for injunction has been passed, the defendant does not obey it, the plaintiff's remedy is by execution under this rule and not by a separate suit.<sup>7</sup> The reason is that a separate suit would be barred by Section 47.

The words "the act required to be done" in sub-rule (5) mean the act that has to be done to enforce the injunction granted by the decree.<sup>8</sup> Thus, where a decree directs a wall to be demolished as being an obstruction to a right of way and is so demolished in execution of the decree, but the judgment-debtor erects another wall at a different place obstructing the right of way, the remedy of the decree-holder is a fresh suit for injunction.<sup>9</sup> The words "act required to be done" in this sub-rule show that this clause applies only to mandatory injunctions and not to prohibitory injunctions, though the other sub-rules apply to all injunctions generally.<sup>10</sup>

Where a decree for injunction has been passed against several persons jointly, restraining them from holding a fair on the plaintiff's land and all of them have been jointly and severally responsible for the disobedience of the decree as well as for the profit which they have made out of the plaintiff's land by holding the fair on such

9a. Disobedience of decree for restitution of conjugal rights. — The only remedy where the judgment-debtor in a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights wilfully refuses to obey the decree is to proceed to attach the property of the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> The Court cannot compel the wife against whom such a decree has been passed, to go and live with her husband.<sup>2</sup> It would also be wrong in such cases to pass an order under Section 25 of the Guardians and Wards Act directing that the custody of a minor wife should be given to the husband.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 4, ante.

10. Effect of procedure under this Rule. — The provisions of this rule are intended to punish the defendant for disobedience of the decree and are not intended to be a satisfaction of the decree so as to prevent the decree-holder from taking further steps. Thus, where a decree for possession of a certain plot of land and for the demolition of a house situate thereon was passed, and the decree-holder had received some compensation under this rule by the attachment and sale of the house on the land, it was held that he could still enforce his right to the possession of the property.<sup>1</sup>

11. Limitation. — It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> that disobedience to an injunction is a contempt of Court and can therefore be punished at any time and that the provisions of Article 182 of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application to enforce the order under this rule. But the High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> has held that Article 182 cannot apply from the very nature of the provisions therein but that the decree-holder may enforce his decree by an application made within three years of each successive breach of the injunction and that the application is governed by Article 181 of the Limitation Act. The decree-holder, however, is not obliged to take action in regard to every petty infringement on pain of allowing the decree to become inoperative after three years and depriving him of the fruits of his decree, if a serious infringement of it were afterwards made.<sup>3</sup> The Chief Court of Lower Burma<sup>4</sup> has, on the other hand, held that the application to enforce the decree under this rule is governed by Article 182 of the Limitation Act. The High Court of Lahore has, in the undermentioned case,<sup>5</sup> followed the Madras view.

(3) The Court may from time to time vary or modify any order made under sub-rule (2) for the periodical payment of money, either by altering the times of payment or by increasing or diminishing the amount, or may temporarily suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again revive the same, either wholly or in part as it may think just.

1. Amendments after 1908.

2. Scope of the Rule.

1. Amendments after 1908. — (1) The words "against a husband" in sub-rule (1) after the words "passing a decree" have been newly inserted by Act XXIX of 1923.

(2) By the same Amending Act the words "shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule" have been substituted for the words "shall not be executed by detention in prison."

(3) The words "and the decree-holder is the wife" after the words "under sub-rule (1)" occurring in sub-rule (2) have been omitted by Act XXIX of 1923, because the rule as amended applies only to cases of decrees against husbands.

2. Scope of the Rule. — Before the amendment of this rule by Act XXIX of 1923 it was held that the tendency of modern legislation is against sending women to jail in civil matters and therefore, ordinarily, a Court passing a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights against a wife should direct, in the exercise of its discretion under this rule, that the decree shall not be executed by the detention of the wife in civil prison.<sup>1</sup> In view of the amendment of Rule 32 ante by Act XXIX of 1923, a

1. The word "document" has been used in this rule instead of the word "conveyance" in the old Code.
2. Sub-rule (6) is new. See Note 5 below.

2. Decree for execution of document. — A decree directing a defendant to execute a document in favour of the plaintiff is executable in the manner provided by this rule, on the failure of the defendant to obey the directions given in the decree.<sup>1</sup> The decree for the execution of a document need not have been passed in a suit for specific performance of a contract.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a decree absolute for divorce directs the judgment-debtor to secure to his wife a certain amount and to execute a proper instrument securing that payment and the judgment-debtor fails to comply with that direction, the Court can, under this rule, execute a special power of attorney in favour of the wife authorizing her on behalf of the judgment-debtor to withdraw the amount decreed out of the provident fund of the judgment-debtor in a railway company in which he was employed.<sup>3</sup> Where the judgment-debtor makes any alteration in the draft submitted to the Court, he could not be compelled to execute the document, but the proper procedure is to act under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

The Registrar of a High Court can, if directed by the Court, execute a document; but he cannot enter into any covenant on behalf of the judgment-debtor.<sup>5</sup> The title of the decree-holder is complete only after the execution of the document; till then there is only an inchoate right capable of being completed.<sup>6</sup>

A British Indian Court cannot, under this rule, direct a party to convey by a document, property which is outside its jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup>

Where a decree directed a defendant to endorse certain promissory notes to the plaintiff and the defendant failed to do so and in the meantime the promissory notes were barred by limitation, it was held that a suit for compensation for failure to carry out the terms of the decree was not maintainable and that the proper remedy of the plaintiff was by way of execution under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

4. Execution by Court on behalf of Hindu father is binding on son. — A document executed by the Court under this rule on behalf of a Hindu father, in execution of a decree, is binding on his son.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that sub-rule (5) provides that such a document shall have the same effect as if it had been executed by the party himself.

5. Registration. — Even under the old Code the High Court of Allahabad held that where a document required to be registered under the provisions of the Registration Act, it must be registered even though executed by a Court acting under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Sub-rule (6) gives legislative recognition to the abovementioned decision.

6. Lis pendens. — Action taken by the Court in executing a decree under this rule is a proceeding in the suit and, therefore, a transfer of the property in dispute made by the judgment-debtor after the date of the decree but before the proceeding under this rule will be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens.<sup>1</sup>

7. Limitation. — An application under this rule is an application for execution of the decree and is, therefore, governed by Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908.<sup>1</sup>

8. Appeal. — Under O. 43 R. 1 clause (i) an appeal lies against an order passed under this rule, on an objection to the draft of a document or of an endorsement, but a second appeal is prohibited by Section 104.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — Sub-rules (2) and (3) are new.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule and Rule 36 point out the mode of executing decrees for possession of immovable property. Rules 95 and 96 of this Order provide for the mode of delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser of the properties purchased by him in a court-sale. This rule corresponds with Rule 95 and Rule 36 corresponds with Rule 96. The procedure for delivery of possession is the same in both sets of rules.<sup>1</sup>

Where property is delivered to the decree-holder in execution of his decree for possession, the decree is satisfied and, therefore, a second application for possession on the ground that he was dispossessed by the judgment-debtor is not maintainable.<sup>2</sup> But a subsequent application will lie when the first application has been ineffectual.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the decree-holder asks for delivery of the immovable property with standing crops, but is given delivery of the land only and not of the crops, he can apply again for effective possession of the land and of the crops.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, where the decree-holder obtained possession against the judgment-debtor but it was ineffectual against a transferee pendente lite from the judgment-debtor, it was held that a fresh application for delivery of possession was maintainable against such transferee.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, a decree-holder allows his decree to get time-barred without executing it, and the defendant continues in possession, a second suit for possession is not maintainable.<sup>6</sup>

A delivery of possession in execution of a decree has not the effect of dispossessing a third person (not a party to the suit), who was previously in possession and was not present when the delivery took place.<sup>7</sup> But it will be operative as an ouster or dispossession of the third person if it takes place in his presence and adversely to his claim.<sup>8</sup>

Where delivery of possession is made under this rule, the delivery must be deemed to have been made, not of the land alone, but of all things attached to it.<sup>9</sup>

An order for delivery of possession should not, ordinarily, be made ex parte.<sup>10</sup>

This rule applies to proceedings under the undermentioned Acts,<sup>11</sup> but not to the proceedings noted below.<sup>12</sup>

3. Delivery of possession — Symbolical and actual. — This rule provides that where the property is in the occupation of the judgment-debtor or some one on his behalf, possession shall be given, if necessary, by removing the judgment-debtor or any person bound by the decree and placing the decree-holder (or the auction-purchaser in cases coming under Rule 95, infra) in occupation of the same. But if the property is of such a nature that the judgment-debtor cannot be in actual possession of it, as, for instance, where the property is in the possession of a tenant, then delivery should be effected by the officer of the Court by going through the process prescribed in Rule 36, infra and proclaiming to the occupant of the property that possession has been given to the decree-holder (or auction-purchaser in cases coming under Rule 96).<sup>1</sup> The former kind of delivery is called khas or actual possession, while the latter is called symbolical or formal delivery of possession. Where the property is capable of immediate actual possession, possession must be delivered under sub-rule (1) and there can be no symbolical possession in such a case as between the parties to the decree.<sup>3</sup> The term "symbolical possession" is applied where delivery is made under sub-rule (2) of this rule and Rules 36 and 96 infra.<sup>3</sup>

If the property is zamindari or a tank or mineral rights in direct possession of the judgment-debtor, though the delivery of possession will be by ousting the judgment-debtor from it, the judgment-debtor cannot be physically removed from it and the decree-holder cannot be put in physical occupation of the property. What the bailiff who is entrusted with giving possession can do is to go to the property and proclaim in the name of the Court that so and so has been dispossessed and so and so has been put in possession of it. This delivery of possession is not symbolical but actual and is as effective against the judgment-debtor as his physical removal from a house.<sup>4</sup>

A decree-holder who has been given symbolical possession is entitled to apply again under this rule to be put in actual possession, if he is entitled to it,<sup>5</sup> unless he deliberately accepts such symbolical possession and does not repudiate it.<sup>6</sup> In the latter case his remedy is to file a separate suit.

Where the decree-holder is put in possession of land, such possession includes the standing crops. The judgment-debtor cannot re-enter in order to reap and dispose of the crops which he had cultivated on the land.<sup>7</sup>

4. Effect of symbolical possession. — The distinction between the effect of the delivery of symbolical possession as between parties to the suit and as against third persons, is important with reference to the question of limitation applicable to suits for actual possession by decree-holders or auction-purchasers who have obtained only symbolical possession.

The effect of delivery of symbolical possession in execution in cases where such possession alone can be delivered is the same as the actual transfer of possession from the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder,<sup>1</sup> that being the only means by which, as between the parties, the Court can effectuate and carry out its own decree. Where, therefore, subsequent to this delivery the judgment-debtor dispossesses the decree-holder and remains in possession, such possession would be adverse to the decree-holder only from the date of the dispossession.<sup>2</sup>

1. J obtained a foreclosure decree for possession on 16th May 1864, against the mortgagor and took symbolical possession in execution on 30th January 1873. When attempting to take actual possession J was prevented by one R who had purchased the property from the mortgagor in 1865. J filed a suit for actual possession against R within 12 years of the date of formal possession. It was held that the delivery of symbolical possession had the effect of interrupting R's adverse possession inasmuch as he was a person bound by the decree, and that his possession after such delivery was a fresh act of trespass giving rise to a new cause of action: Juggobandhu v. Ram Chunder, I. L. R. 5 Calcutta 584 (F. B.).

2. M purchased immovable property belonging to D, the defendant, in court auction in execution of a decree against him on 21st August 1880. Symbolical possession was delivered to M on 14th July 1884. M filed a suit for possession on 29th May 1895, against D who remained in actual possession since the date of the auction purchase. D contended that the suit was barred by limitation inasmuch as he was in possession for more than 12 years prior to suit. It was held that a fresh period of limitation must be computed from the date of delivery of symbolical possession and that, therefore, the suit was in time: Mangli Prasad v. Debi Din, I. L. R. 19 Allahabad 499.

But where symbolical possession was not delivered in the manner required by law, it will not furnish a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>3</sup> Again, the delivery of symbolical possession has no such operation as against third persons who are not parties to the decree.<sup>4</sup>

A suit might be brought, and a decree obtained, by a person who has neither title nor possession against another person who has neither title nor possession; and if the delivery of symbolical possession in such a suit were to constitute actual possession as against the true owner who had been in actual possession for many years and who was no party to the suit, it would operate most unjustly.<sup>5</sup> of a money decree held by him against S and obtained actual possession in January 1885, and was in possession since then. L brought a suit on 27th April 1897, for possession against N, a week before the expiry of twelve years from the date of delivery to him. It was held that the suit was barred by limitation: Narain Das v. Lalla Prasad, I.L.R. 21 Allahabad 269.

Now suppose that symbolical possession is given in circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been delivered. What is its effect upon limitation? There is a conflict of opinion on this question. On the one hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>6</sup> Lahore,<sup>7</sup> Madras<sup>8</sup> and Patna,<sup>9</sup> the Chief Court of Lower Burma<sup>10</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>11</sup> that the delivery of such possession amounts to delivery of actual possession so far as the judgment-debtor and his representatives are concerned, and that if after that date the judgment-debtor continues in possession, his possession becomes that of a trespasser giving rise to a fresh cause of action. They proceed on the view that though actual possession might have been taken, still, as it was obtained through Court and by process of law, and as the judgment-debtor must be deemed to have been present at the proceedings relating to the taking of possession, it is not open to him to say that the whole proceeding should be taken as a nullity, and that the plaintiff should be treated as one who never obtained possession at all. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>12</sup> and Bombay<sup>13</sup> have, on the other hand, held that where the judgment-debtor is in possession and the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser is entitled to actual possession, he cannot get anything less than that and if he does not get actual possession, he cannot rely upon symbolical possession; for the law does not allow a person who is entitled to actual possession to get only symbolical possession.

5. Symbolical possession and limitation. — See Note 4 above.

6. Joint possession — Undivided share. — Sub-rule (2) does not confer on Courts a new power of granting decrees for joint possession. Such decrees were given before this Code was enacted and sub-rule (2) merely defines the manner in which such decrees are to be executed.<sup>1</sup> A person who is entitled to possession of immovable property jointly with others is not merely entitled to a decree declaring his rights in the land but also to a decree for joint possession; and it is immaterial whether he was originally in possession and was subsequently dispossessed or whether he had never been in possession at all.<sup>2</sup> But the Court has a discretion in granting such a decree and the discretion must be exercised in accordance with the principles of justice, equity and good conscience.<sup>3</sup>

Under the old Code it was held that a decree for joint possession may be executed by putting the plaintiff in actual possession of a portion of the property.<sup>4</sup> The difficulty which arose in giving such delivery of joint possession has now been removed by the enactment of sub-rule (2), prescribing the mode in which such delivery should be made.<sup>5</sup> The delivery of joint possession under this rule is merely a symbolical transaction.<sup>6</sup>

Whenever it is a question of giving effective possession of an undivided share in immovable property to an auction-purchaser under a decree, the provisions of Rule 95, infra, may be read with sub-rule (2) of this rule.<sup>7</sup>

7. Delivery of possession to agent. — Delivery of possession can be made to a person who is orally authorized by the decree-holder.<sup>1</sup>

8. Affixture of copy of warrant. — The provisions of this rule, and of Rules 36 and 96 infra, imperatively require that a copy of the warrant for delivery of possession should be affixed in some conspicuous place on the property, the object of the provision being that co-sharers and tenants may know that possession has been transferred to the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser as the case may be. Therefore, the failure to comply with the procedure laid down in those rules is fatal to the delivery, which is no delivery at all in the eye of the law, and cannot be the basis for a fresh suit for possession.<sup>1</sup> But where the parties concerned had actually come to know of the proceedings taken to give symbolical possession, it must be presumed that there had been a substantial compliance with the requirements of the rules.<sup>2</sup>

It must also be assumed that a process recorded as served through Court was served with all the formalities required by law and the burden of proof lies on the Removal of person bound by decree. — The words "any person bound by the decree" in this rule include the judgment-debtor as well as any person who may be held under law as bound by the decree.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, if the property for which a decree for possession has been made is in the occupancy of a person claiming under a title created by the defendant subsequent to the institution of the suit, actual possession under sub-rule (1) must be given to the decree-holder<sup>2</sup> by removing, if necessary, the person bound by the decree and refusing to vacate the property.<sup>3</sup> As to cases in which a party is bound by the decree according to principles of lis pendens, see Section 52, Transfer of Property Act, and the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup>

10. Use of force in giving possession. — Where a person bound by a decree for possession of immovable property refuses to vacate or deliver possession of the property, a reasonable degree of force may be used in removing such person.<sup>1</sup> But the removal by force of a person other than the one bound by the decree is an offence punishable under Section 323 of the Penal Code.<sup>2</sup>

11. Resistance to delivery of possession. — Resistance to a warrant for delivery of actual possession by a person in possession who is not a party to the decree and who is not bound by it is not an offence under Section 186 of the Penal Code.<sup>1</sup>

See also Notes to Order 21 Rule 98.

11a. Consent of judgment-debtor. — The consent of the judgment-debtor is not essential for the execution of a warrant for the delivery of possession under sub-rule (1), and it is not obligatory upon the decree-holder or the executing official to apprise the judgment-debtor of the fact that the possession had been delivered to the decree-holder; all that is necessary is to deliver possession to the decree-holder, and if any resistance by a person bound by the decree is offered, to remove him from the possession thereof.<sup>1</sup>

12. Identification of land. — If in the course of the proceedings in execution of a decree for possession of land, it appears that the boundaries described in the plaint are no longer in existence, the Court can make an enquiry to ascertain the land decreed.<sup>1</sup> Where the plaintiff, who has obtained a decree for possession of land, describes the land as having a particular area and as lying within certain boundaries, Judgment-debtor residing outside jurisdiction — Whether notice could be issued. See Note 1.

1. Notice to show cause. — Under Rules 16 and 22 of this Order, a Court is bound to issue notice to the judgment-debtor, preliminary to ordering the execution of the decree, in three classes of applications for execution, viz. —

- (1) those made by transferees of decrees ;
- (2) those made more than one year after the decree; and
- (3) those made against the legal representatives of a party to a decree.

Where, after such preliminary notice the party does not show cause against execution, the Court is bound, under Rule 24, to issue process for the execution of the decree. But, where an application is made for the execution of a money decree by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, the Court is bound under this rule to issue, in the first instance, a notice to the judgment-debtor to appear and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree. The Court cannot issue a notice and a warrant of arrest at the same time with directions for arrest in case the judgment-debtor intimates he does not propose to appear.<sup>1</sup>

Under the rule as it stood before it was amended by Act XXI of 1936 the Court had a discretionary power to issue a notice to the judgment-debtor to show cause against his detention in prison. This discretionary power was provided only in respect of the execution of money decrees by the arrest and imprisonment of the judgment-debtor. The classes of cases in which the discretion to issue notice could be exercised were indicated in the provisions of Rule 40, infra. It was held that it would be a proper exercise of discretion to order notice where the Court had reason to believe that the judgment-debtor was too ill for imprisonment.<sup>2</sup>

Though a judgment-debtor cannot be arrested because he is outside the jurisdiction of the Court at the time of the arrest, a notice under this rule may nevertheless be issued.<sup>3</sup>

3. Payment of subsistence money and limitation.

1. Subsistence money. — This rule is to be strictly followed. The subsistence allowance payable to the officer-in-charge of the civil prison must always be paid for a whole month in advance.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the payment for the month of January must be actually made to the officer-in-charge of the civil prison before the 1st of January.<sup>2</sup> Otherwise, the judgment-debtor will be released from imprisonment. See Section 58, Note 3 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>3</sup> The decree-holder is bound to pay, however, only the amount due as subsistence allowance according to the prescribed scales<sup>4</sup> and not the costs of bedding, clothing, etc., for the prisoner which are governed by the Prison Rules.<sup>5</sup>

In case the judgment-debtor is not committed to prison, the decree-holder is entitled to a refund of any money unspent between the dates of arrest and release from custody.<sup>6</sup>

the amount of any instalment thereof, the Court may, upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit, make an order disallowing the application for his arrest and detention, or directing his release, as the case may be.

O. 21 R. 40
Note 1a

(2) Before making an order under sub-rule (1), the Court may take into consideration any allegation of the decree-holder touching any of the following matters, namely :—

- (a) the decree being for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound in any fiduciary capacity to account;
- (b) the transfer, concealment or removal by the judgment-debtor of any part of his property after the date of the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, or the commission by him after that date of any other act of bad faith in relation to his property, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree;
- (c) any undue preference given by the judgment-debtor to any of his other creditors;
- (d) refusal or neglect on the part of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has, or since the date of the decree has had, the means of paying it;
- (e) the likelihood of the judgment-debtor absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree-holder in the execution of the decree.

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub-rule (2) are being considered, the Court may, in its discretion, order the judgment-debtor to be detained in the civil prison, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing security to the satisfaction of the Court, for his appearance when required by the Court.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this rule may be re-arrested.

(5) Where the Court does not make an order under sub-rule (1), it shall cause the judgment-debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to the civil prison."

The above Act also amended Section 51 and O. 21 R. 37 of the Code. (See Section 51 and O. 21 R. 37.) The effect of all these amendments taken together is as follows —

1. It is now obligatory, in every case, on the Court to give an opportunity to the judgment-debtor to show cause why he should not be imprisoned, before ordering his imprisonment in execution of a money decree. But, before the passing of the above Act, the Court had a discretion in the matter. (See O. 21 R. 37.)

2. Execution of a money decree by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor cannot now be ordered except in certain special circumstances specified in the proviso to Section 51. But, before the passing of the above Act, the Court was ordinarily bound to order the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor on the application of the decree-holder, though the Court had a discretion to refuse to order such imprisonment in certain circumstances (old R. 40 of O. 21). In other words, the burden is now thrown on the decree-holder to prove the circumstances justifying the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, whereas formerly, the burden was on the judgment-debtor to establish the circumstances justifying the Court in refusing to order his imprisonment.<sup>1</sup>

3. The provision in Rule 40 for giving a further opportunity to the judgment-debtor to satisfy the decree even after his imprisonment has been ordered by directing that he should be left in the custody of an officer of the Court for a certain period or should be released on his furnishing security is new.

See also Note 5A to Section 51, ante.

1. Scope of the Rule. — As seen in Note 1a, the one great distinction between the law as it was before the amendments made by Act XXI of 1936 and the law as it is now, is that previously the Court was ordinarily bound to order the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor in execution of a money decree on the application of the decree-holder, though the Court had a discretion in certain exceptional circumstances to refuse to order the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor;<sup>1</sup> whereas, now the Court has no power to order the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor in execution of a money decree except in certain specified circumstances. Inability to pay the amount of the decree was recognized under the old rule as a ground for disallowing an application for arrest. But the inability must be a bona fide one as implied in sub-rule (2). An order releasing the judgment-debtor without considering the allegations of the decree-holder touching any of the matters referred to in sub-rule (2) of the old rule was not proper.<sup>2</sup> The object of the rule was to prevent creditors from unduly harassing indigent debtors<sup>3</sup> but if no sufficient cause as required by the rule existed, the Court could not refuse the decree-holder the right of arrest and detention.<sup>4</sup> The finding as to inability to pay must be based on evidence,<sup>5</sup> and the burden of proof of such inability rested on the judgment-debtor.<sup>6</sup> The executing Court had no power to excuse the judgment-debtor from liability to arrest, until he actually came before the Court.<sup>7</sup>

A judgment-debtor committed to the civil prison will be deemed to be in unlawful detention if he is delivered to an officer other than the officer named in the warrant of committal issued under the rule, and will be entitled to be released from such custody.<sup>8</sup> Though in the case of a judgment-debtor against whom a warrant had been issued, sub-rule (1) of the old rule in terms was applicable on his being brought under arrest, he was not precluded from surrendering to the Court before arrest and claiming the protection of the rule.<sup>9</sup>

2. "Poverty or other sufficient cause" (old Rule). — The Court had a discretion under the old rule to disallow the application for arrest on any one of the grounds specified in the rule.<sup>1</sup> Inability to pay may arise from poverty or other sufficient cause. Where the object of the decree-holder was to harass a judgment-debtor, whose properties had all been sold in execution of decrees, and the amount could be realized from solvent co-judgment-debtors,<sup>3</sup> or where the assets of a judgment-debtor could not be readily called in, for no fault of his,<sup>3</sup> the Court might, in its discretion, refuse arrest or detention and, in the latter instance, grant him a reasonable time to pay the amount.

Lunacy of the judgment-debtor was held to be a sufficient cause under the old rule for refusing arrest or detention.<sup>4</sup>

3. Insolvency. — In the absence of a protection order from the Insolvency Court, the insolvency of a judgment-debtor was not necessarily a ground for release under the old rule.<sup>1</sup> The Court was, however, bound to consider, under that rule, the question of his inability to pay, if pleaded, notwithstanding the want of a protection order.<sup>2</sup>

Prior to any enquiry under this rule, the Court must, under Section 55, sub-section (3), inform the judgment-debtor that he may apply to be declared an insolvent<sup>3</sup> and the judgment-debtor must express his intention to do so also before the proceedings under this rule are terminated.<sup>4</sup>

4. Transfer, concealment, removal or any other act of bad faith — Sub-rule (2), clauses (b) and (c) (old Rule). — The acts of bad faith contemplated by clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (2), of the old rule were akin to those dealt with in Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, Sections 55 to 57 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and Sections 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920. Under clause (b), however, the alleged act must be subsequent to the suit in question and intended to defeat or delay the decree-holder in particular.<sup>1</sup>

One test of good faith is whether the transaction complained of is genuine or colourable.<sup>2</sup>

5. Undue preference — Sub-rule (2), clause (c) (old Rule). — It was held that the Court might be guided by the relevant provisions of the Insolvency Acts in dealing with the question of undue preference under clause (c) of sub-rule (2) of the old rule.<sup>1</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

8. Sub-rule (3) (old Rule). — This sub-rule was intended to give facility for the enquiry contemplated in the preceding sub-rule.<sup>1</sup> The security to be furnished under the sub-rule must be a substantial one and not a personal security of the judgment-debtor himself.<sup>2</sup> A security bond given under the sub-rule would be in force until the execution proceedings were terminated by a final order.<sup>3</sup> Where a judgment-debtor had not been arrested, but had been given notice to show cause why he should not be arrested, the Court had no jurisdiction to order, under sub-rule (3), the release of the judgment-debtor and take a bond for his appearance.<sup>4</sup>

9. Appeal. — By the operation of Sections 2 (2) and 47 of this Code, an appeal lies from an order disallowing an application for the arrest and imprisonment of the judgment-debtor<sup>1</sup> as well as from an order refusing him exemption from arrest.<sup>2</sup>

10. Madras Amendment. — Act XXI of 1936 repealed the amendments to the old R. 40 made under Section 122 of the Civil Procedure Code. Before the above Act, under the rule as amended by the Madras High Court, it was provided that a judgment-debtor who had been ordered to be detained in the civil prison might be ordered to be left in the custody of an officer of the Court for a specified period not exceeding ten days, in order to enable the judgment-debtor to satisfy the debt. It was held that the order for leaving the judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court under this proviso need not be in writing.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — "Order 21 R. 41 is an amplification of Section 219 of Act VIII of 1859, modified by Section 267 of Act X of 1877."<sup>1</sup> Under the former Codes the Court was also expressly empowered to act suo motu.

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — The object of the rule is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution in cases where there is any difficulty or cause for delay in obtaining particulars of the judgment-debtor's property.<sup>1</sup> An application under this rule can be made at any stage, though it should not be allowed, if it is calculated to harass any person by personal examination when an order for examination or production is made ex parte. It is open to the Court to hear the objections of the respondent without an application by him.<sup>2</sup> The provisions of this rule come into effect only after a decree has been passed and cannot be invoked in the suit stage.<sup>3</sup> The power of the Court under this rule is discretionary.<sup>4</sup>

2a. "Decree for payment of money." — A decree directing an enquiry as to damages is a decree for payment of money and a person who has obtained such a decree is entitled to invoke the aid of this rule in order to enable him to effect an attachment, in pursuance of the right given to him under O. 21 R. 42, before the amount due from the judgment-debtor has been ascertained.<sup>1</sup>

3. "Any other person." — The Court may order the examination of any person who is alleged to be a mortgagee in possession of the property of the judgment-debtor and if it finds such person not to be in possession, it may order the attachment of the property.<sup>1</sup>

It has been held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind<sup>2</sup> that permission should not be granted to a judgment-debtor to examine a garnishee on the affidavit filed by him denying his liability to the judgment-debtor. It has also been held by the Madras High Court<sup>3</sup> that the discretionary power under this rule to examine a garnishee must ordinarily be limited to cases where the garnishee admits the debt. In such cases, the executing Court may find out the exact extent of the debt before ordering execution.

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. Attachment under a preliminary decree.

3. Enquiry into state of account in suits under Section 92 of this Code.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule is analogous to the provision in the Code relating to attachment before judgment and its object is to secure to the decree-holder the fruits of his decree. Although, unlike O. 38 R. 5, this rule makes no specific provision for avoiding attachment by furnishing security, it has been held that the Court will be justified in requiring security before acting under this rule.<sup>1</sup> This rule treats the attachment as a proceeding in execution and the application for attachment may, therefore, be treated as one for execution. And as soon as the amount is ascertained, the application for attachment becomes one for the execution of the decree for the realization of the ascertained sum of money and the applicant will also be entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under Section 73 ante.<sup>2</sup>

2. Attachment under a preliminary decree. — An attachment of the property of a judgment-debtor under a preliminary decree fixing his liability can be validly made under this rule pending enquiry as to the amount due.<sup>1</sup> But where the preliminary decree does not fix the liability but directs enquiry in order to ascertain bably, not really due—Whether debt is admitted or denied by garnishee it can be attached and sold or a receiver may be appointed to realize it—The question whether the debt is really due can be decided only in proceedings taken expressly for the recovery of the debt and not in proceedings for the attachment of such debt.)

(a) in the charge of the person at whose instance the property is retained in such village or place, if such person enters into a bond in Form No. 15A of Appendix E to this Schedule with one or more sufficient sureties for its production when called for; or

(b) in the charge of an officer of the Court, if a suitable place for its safe custody be provided and the remuneration of the officer for a period of 15 days at such rate as may from time to time be fixed by the High Court be paid in advance.

(2) Whenever an attachment made under the provisions of this rule ceases for any of the reasons specified in Rule 55 or Rule 57 or Rule 60 of this Order, the Court may order the restitution of the attached property to the person in whose possession it was before attachment."

NAGPUR

Substitute the following for Rule 43 :

"43. (1) Where the property to be attached is moveable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment-debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of any of his subordinates and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof :

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once ; and

Provided also that when the property attached consists of live-stock, agricultural implements or other articles which cannot be conveniently removed, and the attaching officer does not act under the first proviso to this rule, he may at the instance of the judgment-debtor or of the decree-holder or any person claiming to be interested in such property, leave it in the village or at the place where it has been attached —

(a) in the charge of the judgment-debtor or of the station pound-keeper, if any, or

(b) in the charge of the decree-holder, or of the person claiming to be interested in such property or of such respectable person as will undertake to keep such property, on his entering into a bond with one or more sureties in an amount not less than the value of the property, that he will take proper care of such property and produce it when called for.

(2) The attaching officer shall make a list of the property attached and shall obtain thereto the acknowledgment of the person in whose custody the property is left, and if possible, of the parties to the suit, and of at least one respectable person in attestation of the correctness of the list. If the property attached includes both live-stock and other articles, a separate list of the live-stock shall similarly be prepared and attested."

Any person who has so undertaken to keep attached property may be proceeded against as a surety under Section 145 of the Code and shall be liable to pay in execution proceedings the value of any such property wilfully lost by him."

4. Effect of wrongful attachment. See Note 28 to Section 60.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule deals with the mode of attachment of all moveable property except (a) agricultural produce and (b) property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, for both of which provision is made in Rules 44 to 46, infra.

The attachment is legally effected only by actual seizure.<sup>1</sup> As to the procedure for the custody and maintenance of such property as live-stock, see the rules framed under this Code by the various High Courts and the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

2. "Moveable property." — See Notes under Section 2 (13) and (16).

3. "Actual seizure." — Unlike a prohibitory order under Rule 46, attachment by actual seizure involves a change of possession from the judgment-debtor to the Court.<sup>1</sup> But actual seizure does not always imply the doing of something which would bring the property into physical contact with the person attaching.<sup>2</sup> Any overt act short of direct physical apprehension, sufficient to pass possession to the Court, amounts to actual seizure, as for example, the affixing of the Court seal to the outer door of a warehouse containing the property to be attached,<sup>3</sup> or in the case of an attachment of cattle already tied and secured, the announcement on the spot by the attaching officer of his intention to attach.<sup>4</sup> The seizure by a peon of the attaching officer is valid if done in the presence and under the instructions of such officer.<sup>5</sup> Continuance of attachment necessarily involves continuance of court-custody. If such custody is once lost, there can be no further attachment without a fresh seizure.<sup>6</sup>

4. Effect of wrongful attachment. — See Note 23 to Section 60, ante.

5. "Shall be responsible for the due custody thereof." — The attaching officer is primarily responsible for the safe custody of moveable property attached by him.<sup>1</sup> This rule deals only with the liability of the attaching officer so far as the Court necessary funds, in the local pound, if a pound has been established in or near the village, in which case the pound-keeper will be responsible for the property to the attaching officer, and shall receive the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description, or such less rate as may be agreed upon ;

(c) in the custody of a respectable surety, provided the decree-holder furnishes the cost of maintenance and other costs, if any.

(2) If in the opinion of the attaching officer the attached property cannot be kept in the village or locality, through lack of a suitable place, or satisfactory surety, or through failure of the decree-holder to provide necessary funds, or for any other reason, the attaching officer shall remove the property to the Court at the decree-holder's expenses. In the event of the decree-holder failing to provide the necessary funds, the attachment shall be withdrawn.

(3) Whenever attached property is kept in the village or locality as aforesaid the officer shall forthwith report the fact to the Court, and shall with his report forward an accurate list of property seized, such that the Court may thereon at once issue the proclamation of sale prescribed by Rule 66.

(4) If the debtor shall give his consent in writing to the sale of the property without awaiting the expiry of the term prescribed in Rule 68, the officer shall receive the same and forward it without delay to the Court for its orders.

(5) When property is removed to the Court it shall be kept by the nazir on his own sole responsibility in such place as may be approved by the Court. If the property cannot, from its nature or bulk, be conveniently kept on the court-premises, or in the personal custody of the nazir, he may, subject to approval by the Court, make such arrangements for its safe custody under his own supervision as may be most convenient and economical, and the Court may fix the remuneration to be allowed to the persons, not being officers of the Court, in whose custody the property is kept.

(6) When property remains in the village or locality where it is attached and any person other than the judgment-debtor shall claim the same, or any part of it, the attaching officer shall nevertheless, unless the decree-holder desires to withdraw the attachment of the property so claimed, maintain the attachment, and shall direct the claimant to prefer his claim to the Court.

(7) (a) If the decree-holder shall withdraw an attachment or it shall be withdrawn under sub-rule (2) or sub-rule (9) the attaching officer shall inform the debtor, or in his absence, any adult member of his family, that the property is at his disposal.

(b) In the absence of any person to take charge of it, or in case the officer shall have had notice of claim by a person other than the judgment-debtor, the officer shall, if the property has been moved from the premises in which it was seized, replace it where it was found at the time of seizure.

(8) Whenever live-stock is kept in the village or locality where it has been attached, the judgment-debtor shall be at liberty to undertake the due feeding and tending of it under the supervision of the attaching officer ; but the latter shall, if required by the decree-holder, and on his paying for the same at the rate to be fixed by the District Judge, and subject to the orders of the Court under whose orders the attachment is made, engage the services of as many persons as may be necessary, for the safe custody of it.

in accordance with sub-rule (8), the officer shall call upon the decree-holder to pay forthwith, for feeding the same. In the event of his failure to do so, the officer shall proceed as provided in sub-rule (2) and shall report the matter to the Court without delay.

(10) When attached live-stock is brought to Court, the nazir shall be responsible for the safe custody and proper feeding of it so long as the attachment continues.

(11) If a pound has been established in or near the place where the Court is held, the nazir shall be at liberty to place in it such attached live-stock as can be properly kept there, in which case the pound-keeper will be responsible for the property to the nazir and shall receive the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description, or such less rate as may be agreed upon.

(12) If there be no pound available, or if, in the opinion of the Court, it be inconvenient to lodge the attached live-stock in the pound, the nazir may keep it in his own premises, or he may entrust it to any person selected by himself and approved by the Court. The nazir will in all cases remain responsible for the custody of the property.

(13) Each Court shall from time to time fix the rates to be allowed for the custody and maintenance of the various descriptions of live-stock with reference to seasons and local circumstances. The District Judge may make any alteration he deems fit in the rates prescribed by Courts subordinate to him. Where there are two or more Courts in the same place, the rates shall be the same for each Court."

R. 44. [New.] Where the property to be attached is agricultural produce, the attachment shall be made by affixing a copy of the warrant of attachment, —

Attachment of agricultural produce.

(a) where such produce is a growing crop, on the land on which such crop has grown, or

(b) where such produce has been cut or gathered, on the threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder-stack on or in which it is deposited, and another copy on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which the judgment-debtor ordinarily resides or, with the leave of the Court, on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which he carries on business or personally works for gain or in which he is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain; and the produce shall thereupon be deemed to have passed into the possession of the Court.

[See S. 2 (13).]

1. Attachment of agricultural produce. — Agricultural produce, whether standing crop<sup>1</sup> or severed from the soil, is moveable property. Unlike other moveable property agricultural produce of either description cannot be attached by actual seizure as provided in Rule 43. The custodia legis in the case of agricultural produce on attachment is only symbolical and is not validly created unless the rules of affixture herein provided are strictly complied with.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that no property can be declared to be attached unless, first, the order for attachment has been issued, and secondly, in execution of that order the other things prescribed by the rules in the Code have been done.<sup>3</sup> But, when it is proved that an attachment has been made it must be presumed, until the contrary is shown, that all the necessary formalities were duly observed.<sup>4</sup>

This rule, like the preceding one, applies only when the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor and not of a third party.<sup>5</sup>

As regards the mode of attachment of growing crops, standing timber or other products of the earth, under the Madras Estates Land Act, V of 1908, see Section 192 (i) thereof.

"and the applicant shall pay into Court such sums as he may from time to time be required by the Court to pay in order to defray the cost of such arrangements."

1. "Shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut and gathered." — The attachment of agricultural produce does not prevent the judgment-debtor from doing or continuing all necessary acts of husbandry with respect to the crop or produce. In fact, the Court is bound, under this rule, to make proper arrangements for the custody, tending, cutting, gathering, storing, maturing and preservation of the produce either at the instance of the judgment-debtor, or if he neglects to perform the acts of preservation, at the instance of the decree-holder or otherwise. The attached property continues to be in the possession of the Court during the process of husbandry.

To enable the Court to make the necessary arrangements, an application for attachment must state the time at which the crop is likely to be ready for harvest. If the application is made a considerable time before the harvest, the Court may postpone attachment and prohibit the present removal of the produce.

Before passing such order, the Judge must verify the name of the payee from the report of the attachment and must satisfy himself that the amount proposed to be paid does not exceed the amount of the fees deposited with the Bailiff, or, if any payments have already been made in the case of the unexpended balance of such deposits and that all amounts previously drawn have been disbursed to the proper persons.

(7) When the order has been signed by the Judge, the money shall be disbursed by the Bailiff at once to the peon or peons concerned, whose acknowledgment of receipt shall be taken in Bailiff's Register II. If, however, the amount has been transferred to Bailiff's Register I, the Bailiff shall draw the amount necessary for payment from the Treasury as if it were a re-payment of deposit and shall then disburse the amount due to the peon or peons concerned, whose acknowledgment of receipt shall be taken in Bailiff's Register I.

(8) When the attachment is brought to a close or has not been effected, if the Judge finds, at the time of calculating the amount paid in and properly chargeable for peons, that the total amount of the fees actually paid under sub-rules (1) and (3) exceeds the total amount that is chargeable for peons including the amount of the last payment, he shall direct that the excess be refunded to the payer.

(9) The Judge shall in all cases in which a refund is to be made, issue to the Bailiff an order, a copy of which shall be placed on the record, to make such refund. If a sufficient portion of the amount paid by the decree-holder to pay such refund is in the hands of the Bailiff, that officer shall make the refund in the ordinary way prescribed in his Register II for re-payments. If the amount has been credited into the Treasury, he shall prepare a bill for the amount to be refunded in the prescribed Treasury Form and shall lay it before the Judge for signature with the record of the case in the same way as a bill for the remuneration of temporary peons. Before signing the refund order, the Judge must satisfy himself that the amount is available for refund by examining Bailiff's Register I and the record. The bill when signed by the Judge will be given to the payee, with instructions to present it for payment at the Treasury or sub-treasury.

45B. (1) In addition to the fees payable before a warrant issues for the attachment of moveable property under Rule 45A, the Bailiff shall require the attaching decree-holder to deposit a sum of money sufficient to cover the cost of attachment other than the pay of peons employed to take charge of it, for such period as the Bailiff may think fit.

Charges incurred in connexion with custody and conveyance of attached moveable property and feeding and tending of live-stock.

Explanation. — The costs in question might be, for example :

- (a) rent of building in which to store attached furniture,
- (b) cost of conveying the attached property from the place of attachment to Court or to a secure place of custody,
- (c) costs of feeding and tending live-stock,
- (d) cost of proceeding to the place of attachment to sell perishable property.

O.21 R.45B
(Rangoon)

(2) If the attaching decree-holder fails to comply with the Bailiff's requisition the warrant shall not be issued.

(3) Sums thus deposited shall be entered in the Bailiff's Registers I and II and any re-payments thereof shall be made according to existing orders. A receipt for such sums shall be granted by the Bailiff in Form 15A, Appendix E.

(4) In the receipt given for the sums deposited, the Bailiff shall state the period for which such sums will last, and if the attaching decree-holder does not deposit a further sum before the expiry of such period, the attachment shall cease when the sum deposited is exhausted.

(5) The officer actually attaching the property shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, give the debtor, or, in his absence, any adult member of his family who may be present, the option of having the attached property kept on his premises or elsewhere, on condition that a suitable place for its safe custody is duly provided. The option so given may be subsequently withdrawn by order of the Court. Where the attached property consists of cattle these may be employed, so far as is consistent with Rule 43, in agricultural operations.

(6) If no such suitable place be provided or if the Court directs that the property shall be removed, the officer shall remove the property to the Court, unless the property attached is a growing crop, when Rule 45 applies. Whenever live-stock is placed at the place where it has been attached, the judgment-debtor shall be at liberty to undertake the due feeding and tending of it under the supervision of the attaching officer.

(7) Whenever property is attached, the officer shall forthwith report to the Court and shall with his report forward an accurate list of the property seized.

(8) If the judgment-debtor shall give his consent in writing to the sale of property without awaiting the expiry of the terms prescribed in Rule 68, the officer shall receive the written consent and forward it without delay to the Court for its orders.

(9) When property is removed to the Court it shall be kept by the Bailiff, on his own sole responsibility, in such place as may be approved by the Court. If the property cannot, from its nature or bulk, be conveniently kept on the court-premises or in the personal custody of the Bailiff he may, subject to the approval of the Court, make such arrangement for its safe custody under his own supervision as may be most convenient and economical.

(10) If there be a cattle-pound maintained by Government or any local authority in or near the place where the Court is held, the Bailiff shall be at liberty to place in it such attached live-stock as can be properly kept there, in which case the pound-keeper will be responsible for the property to the Bailiff and shall receive the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description.

(11) Whenever property is attached, and any person other than the judgment-debtor shall claim the same, or any part of it, the officer shall nevertheless, unless the decree-holder desires to withdraw the attachment of the property so claimed, remain in possession and shall direct the claimant to prefer his claim to the Court.

(12) If the decree-holder shall withdraw an attachment or if it shall cease under sub-rule (2) or sub-rule (4), the Bailiff's officer shall inform the debtor or, in his absence, an adult member of his family that the property is at his disposal.

(13) If any portion of the deposit made under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (4)

(Rangoon)

remains unexpended it shall be refunded to the decree-holder in the manner prescribed for such refunds in sub-rule (9) of Rule 45A. Any difference between the cost of attachment of moveable property (other than the costs referred to in Rule 45A) and the sums deposited by the attaching decree-holder shall, unless the difference is due to the fault of the Bailiff, be recovered from the sale proceeds of the attached property, if any, and if there are no sale-proceeds, from the attaching decree-holder on the application of the Bailiff. If there is still a deficiency the amount shall be paid by Government."

R. 46. [S. 268.] (1) In the case of —

- (a) a debt<sup>2</sup> not secured by a negotiable instrument,
- (b) a share<sup>11</sup> in the capital of a corporation,
- (c) other moveable property<sup>12</sup> not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, except property deposited in, or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

- (i) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court;
- (ii) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon;
- (iii) in the case of the other moveable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment-debtor.

(2) A copy of such order shall be affixed on some conspicuous part of the court-house and another copy shall be sent in the case of the debt, to the debtor, in the case of the share, to the proper officer of the corporation, and, in the case of the other moveable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same.<sup>13</sup>

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (i) of sub-rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.

1. Attachment of debt, share, or other moveable property — General. —

There is a broad distinction between the attachment of moveable property in the possession of the judgment-debtor, and the attachment of debts (other than negotiable instruments), shares in a corporation or other moveable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor; in the former case the attachment is effected by actual seizure while in the latter case it is done by a prohibitory order.<sup>1</sup>

A debt, in order to be attachable under this rule, must be due solely to the judgment-debtor<sup>2</sup> and should be described with reasonable certainty in the application for attachment.<sup>3</sup> The Court cannot, on an application under this rule, direct the garnishee (judgment-debtor's debtor) to pay the amount into Court; it can only pass a prohibitory order as mentioned in the rule.<sup>4</sup> It is, however, open to the garnishee to deposit the amount of the debt in Court and thereby obtain a valid discharge.<sup>5</sup> But in the case of dispute as to the title to the amount in deposit, the Court must decide the question before ordering payment to the decree-holder.<sup>6</sup> Rules 58 and 63 of this Order are applicable to attachments hereunder.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 1-4

Under Section 50 of the Code, where a decree is executed against a legal representative, he is liable only to the extent of the property of the deceased which has come to his hands. Hence, a debt due to the legal representative or moveable property of the deceased which has not yet come into the possession of the legal representative cannot be attached under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

2. "Debt," meaning of. — See Notes 7, 14 and 22 to Section 60 and also the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

3. Salary, whether a debt. — A pay or pension in private service becomes due on the last day of the month even though it is not paid till the first of the next month and can be attached on the last day of the month.<sup>1</sup> So also, it has been held that the salary of a member of a Provincial Legislative Assembly is not the salary of a public officer and is not attachable before it becomes payable at the end of the month.<sup>2</sup> See also Notes 15 to 17 to Section 60.

4. Attachment of mortgage debt. — A mortgage debt due under a simple mortgage is a "debt" within the meaning of this rule and can be attached by a prohibitory order.<sup>1</sup> Such attachment carries with it the security of the immovable property without any further attachment of the property itself; the purchaser of the mortgage interest in execution is entitled, therefore, to sue for the sale of the mortgaged property for the debt.<sup>2</sup>

A usufructuary mortgage in which there is a covenant to pay is also a "debt" which can be attached under this rule.<sup>3</sup> But a purely usufructuary mortgage without any liability to pay the mortgage amount is not a "debt" at all and cannot be attached under this rule.<sup>4</sup> Such a mortgage should be attached under Rule 54 as immovable property.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 4 to Section 16, ante.

The locality of a mortgage debt is where the mortgage-bond is found and the Court within whose jurisdiction it is found can attach it even though the mortgagor or the property comprised in the mortgage is outside the jurisdiction of such Court.<sup>6</sup>

For the purposes of execution, a mortgage debt is "moveable property" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>7</sup>

5. Attachment of decree. — See Rule 53, infra.

6. Attachment of debt already paid by cheque. — Payment of a debt by delivery of a cheque extinguishes the debt. There is, therefore, no debt that can be attached in the hands of the garnishee where the latter has delivered a cheque for the debt to the judgment-debtor, even though the latter had not cashed the cheque.<sup>1</sup> The same principle will apply where money due to a judgment-debtor from a bank has been debited by the bank to the judgment-debtor and credited to a third person.<sup>2</sup>

7. Procedure where garnishee denies debt. — Under sub-rule (3) a garnishee may, at his option, pay the amount of the debt into Court. But the Court has no jurisdiction to compel the garnishee to do so;<sup>1</sup> nor can the Court proceed against him or his property for the recovery of the amount,<sup>2</sup> though the Court, in practice, calls on him to pay.<sup>3</sup> In case the garnishee denies that debt, it is not the duty of the Court to enquire and decide if the debt is due.<sup>4</sup> The only course in such cases is either to have a receiver appointed for the collection of the debt or to sell the debt notifying the fact of denial.<sup>5</sup> An order so appointing a receiver or for sale does not, however, debar the garnishee, in a suit on the debt, from setting up the defence that no debt is due.<sup>6</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that a decree-holder who has attached future rents is not thereby entitled to sue the tenants for the amount of the rent due without his being duly appointed a receiver for the purpose.<sup>7</sup>

8. Set-off by garnishee of cross-debt. — The garnishee is entitled to a set-off in respect of any cross-debt due to him from the judgment-debtor, at the date of the attachment<sup>1</sup> or of the sale.<sup>2</sup>

9. Procedure where garnishee resides outside jurisdiction. — The executing Court has no jurisdiction to pass any prohibitory order under this rule unless either the debt to be attached is payable or the garnishee is within its jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> "In its essential elements a garnishment proceeding is a proceeding by the defendant in the suit against the garnishee, in the name and for the benefit of the plaintiff . . . . Wherever the garnishee could be sued by the defendant for the payment, he may be charged as garnishee on account of it."<sup>2</sup> If, therefore, the garnishee resides outside the jurisdiction of a Court and the debt is also payable outside its jurisdiction, no prohibitory order can be made against the garnishee<sup>3</sup> unless specifically provided for by the Code.<sup>4</sup>

A garnishee submitting, in the first instance, to a prohibitory order in ignorance of the want of jurisdiction, may, however, refuse to abide by it subsequently.<sup>5</sup>

this hands or in the hands of a third party, and his remedy is not by way of suit but by attachment and sale in execution.<sup>1</sup> But, where a property in the possession of another is declared to belong to the plaintiff, the proper remedy for its recovery is by a suit and not in execution.<sup>2</sup>

Attachment of agricultural produce not in the possession of the judgment-debtor is covered by this rule.<sup>3</sup> Unpaid purchase money due to the judgment-debtor is moveable property attachable under this rule.<sup>4</sup> Where money is deposited by a judgment-debtor with a railway company as security for the due performance of his duties as a servant of the company, an attachment of such deposit is subject to all the rights of the company on the deposit, though the interest, if any, payable to the judgment-debtor on the deposit amount may be made available to the decree-holder by virtue of the attachment.<sup>5</sup> The attachment of rights under a patent cannot be effected by serving a prohibitory order on the Controller of Patents under this rule, because such rights cannot be said to be in the possession of the Controller.<sup>6</sup>

13. Service of prohibitory order. — A prohibitory order under this rule must be duly served on the garnishee.<sup>1</sup>

14. Effect of non-compliance with sub-rule (2). — Want of affixture of the order as required by sub-rule (2) is fatal to the validity of the attachment and a bona fide assignee from the judgment-debtor after such attachment acquires good title.<sup>1</sup>

The mere order to make an attachment does not amount to actual attachment unless it has been effected in the manner prescribed by this rule, i. e., served on the debtor by sending a copy of the order to him.<sup>2</sup>

15. Notice to debtor. — Under sub-rule (2) a copy of the prohibitory order shall be sent to the debtor. When it is not so sent, the attachment is ineffectual and the garnishee remains liable to pay the debt to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> A notice to the judgment-debtor is, however, not a condition precedent to the validity of the attachment.<sup>2</sup>

nor is the attachment a bar to a contest of non-liability by the garnishee.<sup>2</sup>

The attaching decree-holder gets no higher rights in the debt than what the judgment-debtor could give him at the date of the attachment and any disposition of the debt by the judgment-debtor prior to attachment binds the decree-holder,<sup>3</sup> nor can a decree-holder compel the judgment-debtor to create larger rights for him.<sup>4</sup> If, on the day of attachment, there was no debt and the attachment was raised, a subsequent accrual of a debt does not by itself revive the attachment.<sup>5</sup> But where a debt existed at the time of attachment, the attaching decree-holder is not precluded from realising the debt by the fact of the debt having been subsequently paid to judgment-debtor by the garnishee.<sup>6</sup>

A prohibitory order under this rule is a process in execution, and money deposited in Court under sub-rule (3) is "assets" within the meaning of Section 73 of the Code.<sup>7</sup> When there are attachments of more Courts than one of varying grades, the garnishee acting under sub-rule (3) is bound to deposit the money in the Court of the superior grade on the analogy of Section 63.<sup>8</sup>

As against an Official Assignee in bankruptcy, the attaching decree-holder obtains rights in the property attached only on complete realization by him before vesting.<sup>9</sup>

16a. Payment into Court—Sub-rule (3). — The payment contemplated by sub-rule (3) is payment into the attaching Court so as to be available to the attaching decree-holder. Thus, where the rent due by a tenant is attached and the tenant pays such rent to the credit of some other suit against the judgment-debtor than the one in which it has been attached, the payment will not discharge the tenant from his liability for the rent.<sup>1</sup>

17. Inherent power of Court to pass prohibitory orders in proper cases. — Even in cases not strictly governed by O. 21 R. 46 a prohibitory order can be passed under the inherent powers of the Court, where the ends of justice require it to be done.<sup>1</sup>

1. Attachment of salary of public officer, etc. — Under the old Code the salary of a public officer or of a railway servant or of a servant of a local authority could not be attached unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree.<sup>1</sup> As this led to considerable inconvenience and needless expense, this rule has been newly enacted to provide for such cases; the salary of this class of judgment-debtors can now be attached under this rule whether they or the disbursing officers reside within such local limits, or not.<sup>2</sup> The distinction between this rule and Rule 52, infra is that the latter refers specifically to property actually in the hands of public officers, while the former provides for the anticipatory attachment of salaries.<sup>3</sup>

This rule has no application to the attachment of salaries of judgment-debtors in private service. Such salaries are attachable only as debts after they fall due.<sup>4</sup> The wages of domestic servants<sup>5</sup> or moneys due to railway contractors<sup>6</sup> are not salary or allowances, within the meaning of this rule. This rule does not apply to the attachment of the salary of a member of a Provincial Legislative Assembly as such member is not a "public officer."<sup>7</sup> The attachment of salaries or allowances at the disposal of the disbursing officer is not invalid by reason merely of the fact that the sanction of the superior authority is necessary before the money is actually disbursed.<sup>8</sup>

Attachment under this rule can be made also by the Court to which a decree is transferred for execution.<sup>9</sup>

Sub-rule (1) of this rule has been amended by Act XXVI of 1939 so as to make it legal for the High Commissioner for India to comply with attachment orders issued by Courts in India in respect of the leave salaries payable in England to officers of the Indian Services.<sup>10</sup>

2. Sub-rule (2) and Section 64, Explanation. — Salary attached under this rule is “assets” within the meaning of Section 73 of the Code, and successive attaching decree-holders are entitled to rateable distribution thereof. There is no inconsistency between the Explanation to Section 64 and sub-rule (2) of this rule. The latter provision only lays down what the officer concerned should do.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 13 to Section 64.

3. Sub-rule (3). — The effect of this sub-rule is that any sum paid by a disbursing officer in contravention of this rule can<sup>1</sup> and should be<sup>2</sup> recovered directly from the Government or the railway company or the local authority, as the case may be. But no order for recovery thereof can be made without bringing the Government<sup>3</sup> or the railway company or the local authority on the record as a party.

4. Appeal. — Where a decree-holder wants to execute his decree by attachment of the pay of the judgment-debtor under this rule, the question whether it is possible to execute the decree in the manner which has been adopted by the executing Court is a question under Section 47 ante and the decision of the question is, therefore, appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> Where an order directing an attachment under this rule is not appealed against, it becomes final as against the parties to it and a subsequent application contesting the validity of the order of attachment is barred by the general principles of res judicata.<sup>2</sup>

1. Attachment of partnership property. — This rule and the next deal with the mode of execution affecting partnership property. Execution can be taken against any partnership property only on a decree passed against the firm or against all the partners thereof as such.<sup>1</sup> Where the decree is only against an individual partner, the property of the partnership cannot be attached but an order creating a charge on the interest of the judgment-debtor in the partnership can be obtained, with or without the appointment of a receiver.<sup>2</sup> The prohibition against attachment and sale contained in sub-rule (1) is mandatory and, therefore, a sale in execution contrary to the provision thereof is invalid and inoperative.<sup>3</sup> The provisions of this rule are closely modelled on Section 23 of the English Partnership Act (53 & 54 Viet., Chap. 39).

Notes 1-5

The interest of a partner in partnership business is moveable property, although part of the partnership property may consist of immovable property. The reason is that the share of a partner is nothing more than his proportion of the partnership assets after they have been turned into money and applied in liquidation of the partnership debts.<sup>4</sup>

2. "Against the partners in the firm as such." — These words do not occur in Section 23 of the English Partnership Act. The introduction of these words in this rule makes it clear that a decree against partners as such is on the same footing as a decree against the firm for the purposes of this rule.

3. Decree against individual partner. — The holder of a decree against an individual partner gets no higher rights in execution than what a voluntary assignee of a partner of his share in the partnership gets under such assignment. Such an assignment "does not, as against the other partners, entitle the assignee during the continuance of the partnership, to interfere in the management or administration of the partnership business or affairs, or to require any accounts of the partnership transactions, or to inspect the partnership books, but entitles the assignee only to receive the share of profits to which the assigning partner would otherwise be entitled, and the assignee must accept the account of profits agreed to by the partners."<sup>1</sup>

In case of a dissolution of the partnership whether as respects all the partners or as respects the assigning partner, the assignee is entitled to receive the share of the partnership assets to which the assigning partner is entitled as between himself and the other partners, and for the purpose of ascertaining that share, to an account as from the date of the dissolution.<sup>2</sup>

4. "Direct accounts." — See Note 3 above.

5. Order under this Rule and insolvency. — An order under this rule charging the interest of the judgment-debtor in partnership property is not a "transaction" protected by Section 57 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act or by Section 55 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.<sup>1</sup>

firms, while this rule deals with the mode of execution of decrees which have been obtained against firms in the firm name.<sup>1</sup>

As will be seen in Note 1 to O. 30 R. 1, a decree against a firm in the name of the firm has the same effect as a decree against all the partners. It can, therefore, be executed against the whole of the partnership property<sup>2</sup> [sub-rule (1), clause (a)]. It can also be executed against any one or more of the partners personally<sup>3</sup> (i. e., against their person or their personal property), though, before this is done, certain conditions have to be satisfied and a certain procedure has to be followed as proscribed by this rule. Thus, it can be executed personally against any person coming under clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1)<sup>4</sup> inasmuch as, in such cases, it may safely be presumed that the person proceeded against knows of the suit and that his liability as a partner is, in some way, established.<sup>5</sup> The decree can also, with the leave of the Court, be executed personally against any other person as being a partner of the firm [sub-rule (2)].<sup>6</sup>

Sub-rule (1) of this rule does not require the holder of a decree against a firm to exhaust his remedy under clause (a) and then proceed under the other clauses. Under that rule he has three courses open to him, any of which he may pursue regardless of the order in which they are set out.<sup>7</sup>

As regards execution against a dissolved firm, see O. 30 R. 3, Note 2 and the undermentioned case.<sup>8</sup>

The provisions of this rule do not apply to a decree obtained against a limited liability company.<sup>9</sup>

2. "Where a decree has been passed against a firm." — See Order 30, Rule 6, Note 4.

3. Award. — An award can be validly passed against a firm<sup>1</sup> as well as against individuals and when the award against a firm is filed in Court under the provisions of the Arbitration Act, 1899, it is enforceable as a decree of the Court, and the provisions of O. 21 R. 50 apply thereto.<sup>2</sup> But, though an award when filed in Court is on the same footing as a decree of Court, the proceedings before the arbitrators up to the stage of the passing of the award do not constitute 'a suit' for the application of the provisions of Order 30 (See Note 11 to O. 30 R. 1). Consequently, the service of any notice or summons by the arbitrators on an alleged partner of the firm, is not service within the meaning of sub-rule (1) so as to enable the decree-holder to take out execution against the person of such partner without the leave of the Court. Before ordering execution of an award, the Court will, therefore, have to determine in every case whether the alleged partner is liable as a partner or not, and grant or refuse leave under sub-rule (2).<sup>3</sup>

4. Against any person who has appeared. — Where an alleged partner refuses a summons sent to him under O. 30 R. 3, he must be deemed to be “individually served” and if he fails to appear, execution can proceed against him under sub-rule (1), clause (c) without any leave of the Court.<sup>1</sup> The words “or who has been adjudged to be a partner” in sub-rule (1) evidently provide for a case where the person served on behalf of the firm denies that he is a partner, and the plaintiff asks for an issue being raised in the suit, as to whether the service on him is good service or not.<sup>2</sup> Where a person served with summons under O. 30 R. 3 as a partner of a firm enters appearance and makes an application denying liability on the allegation that he is not a partner, the appearance is one ‘under protest’ under O. 30 R. 8 and not one under O. 30 R. 6 and hence, in such a case an enquiry under sub-rule (2) of this rule is not excluded.<sup>3</sup>

See also Notes on Rules 3, and 5 to 8 of Order 30.

5. Execution against persons other than those referred to in sub-rule (1) — Sub-rule (2). — It has already been seen in Note 1 above that execution of a decree against a firm can be taken against the property of the partnership as well as personally against the partners referred to in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1) and that, as against an alleged partner not referred to therein, the leave of the Court is a condition precedent to an order for execution. The principle of the distinction is that, in the case of persons who cannot in law be fixed individually with the knowledge of the suit against the firm, an opportunity must be given to them to dispute the liability under the decree.<sup>1</sup> See also sub-rule (4).

Ordinarily, a decree is binding on the executing Court and no question of the liability of the judgment-debtor under the judgment can be allowed to be raised in execution. But as, in the case of a suit against a firm the decree is passed on service of summons in an extremely technical form as set forth in O. 30 R. 3, and as each partner is not necessarily a defendant in the suit and is not required to be served with the summons in the suit before the decree is passed, it is provided specifically in sub-rule (2) read with sub-rule (4) that in the case of persons not served in the suit, their liability under the decree, when disputed, may be heard and determined in execution.<sup>2</sup>

Where a person appears in answer to a notice issued to him under sub-rule (2) and admits that he is a partner in the firm against whom a decree is passed, he cannot at the same time urge that the decree is not binding on the firm.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that the words "where the liability is not disputed" mean and can only mean liability as a partner in the firm, and that is the only question which can be decided in proceedings taken under this sub-rule.<sup>4</sup>

As to the nature of the defence that can be taken where the person on whom notice is served disputes liability as a partner, see Notes 3 and 4 to Rule 8 of Order 30 and the cases cited therein and also the undermentioned cases.<sup>5</sup>

When the liability is decided in favour of the decree-holder and leave is granted, the effect is, that the decree against the firm, which was executable or had been executed<sup>6</sup> against the property of the firm or against the persons referred to in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1), becomes also executable personally against partners not served in the suit. Accordingly, an application for leave under sub-rule (2) is only ancillary to an application for execution, and will not be barred by reason of its being made beyond three years from the date of the decree so long as the decree itself is otherwise kept alive according to law.<sup>7</sup> Though the words "may apply" occur in sub-rule (2), it has been held that no separate application for leave is necessary as the application for execution itself implies a prayer for leave.<sup>8</sup>

In the case of a Hindu son, when the Court finds under sub-rule (2) that the son is not a partner, the application against him under O. 21 R. 50 as such must be disallowed, and the decree-holder left to remedies otherwise available to him.<sup>9</sup>

2. ('82) AIR 1982 Bom 516 (520, 521, 522). (In absence of fraud or collusion, the liability must be contested in execution and not by separate suit.) [See ('83) AIR 1983 Lah 591 (591). (Decree-holder must establish the liability of the objector partners.)]

Order 30 Rule 2 provides that in a suit by a firm the plaintiff shall declare on demand by the defendant the names of all the partners constituting the plaintiff firm. Where in such a suit the defendant makes a counter-claim against the plaintiff firm and succeeds, the persons so declared as partners cannot be proceeded against personally without an adjudication of liability against them under sub-rule (2) of this rule. The reason is that O. 21 R. 50 is not controlled by O. 30 R. 2.<sup>10</sup>

As regards execution under sub-rule (2) in case of death of a partner, see Note 14 to Rule 1, Note 2 to Rule 3, and Rule 4 of Order 30.

As to whether a Court to which the decree is sent for execution can grant leave under sub-rule (2), there is a conflict of decisions, for which see the undermentioned cases.<sup>11</sup> But in such cases, the Court which passed the decree does not cease to have jurisdiction to grant leave under this sub-rule.<sup>12</sup>

6. Determination of liability under sub-rule (2) operates as a decree. —

In the case of persons referred to in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1), they can be deemed to be parties to the decree by reason of service of summons or admission or adjudication as partners. The proceedings in execution as against them fall under Section 47 of the Code and an order therein will be a decree under Section 2, sub-section (2).<sup>1</sup> But a person not coming under clauses (b) and (c) of sub-rule (1) cannot be considered to be a party to the decree as the very fact of his being a partner or of his liability to the decree is allowed to be put in issue under sub-rule (2) for determination. The proceedings as against him under sub-rule (2) cannot fall under Section 47 nor is the determination of the liability one in the suit, having arisen only after decree. Hence it is not a decree. In order, however, to confer a right of appeal which does not otherwise exist, from such adjudication, sub-rule (3) lays down specifically that the order shall have the force of a decree.<sup>2</sup> It may also be noted that sub-rule (4) requires a summons to be served, and sub-rule (2) prescribes that the issue of liability be tried, as in a suit. Where, however, the partner is ex parte and there is no trial and determination of the liability, the order granting leave ex parte does not have the force of a decree.<sup>3</sup> An application to set the ex parte order aside is not governed by Article 164 of the Limitation Act, as the said Article applies only to ex parte decrees.<sup>4</sup>

An order having the force of a decree under sub-rule (3) is governed by Schedule I, Article 1 and not Schedule II, Article 11 of the Court-fees Act.<sup>5</sup> The

An order under this sub-rule amounting to a decree bars the re-opening of the same matter in any subsequent application for leave against the same person.<sup>7</sup> The order having the force of a decree will not, however, make the proceedings a suit within the meaning of Section 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act.<sup>8</sup> But the fact that the proceedings are not proceedings in a suit will not bar a reference to the High Court of Bombay from an appeal decided by the Resident of Aden in a matter under sub-rule (2).<sup>9</sup>

7. Sub-rule (4). — Where a decree-holder against a firm claims to execute the decree against a partner not coming within clauses (a) and (b) of sub-rule (1), i. e., a partner who was not served in the suit, he has to apply under sub-rule (2) for leave to execute the decree against such partner<sup>1</sup> and for this purpose, a summons to appear and answer the application should be issued to such partner under sub-rule (4). The object of this is to give the partner an opportunity of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so.<sup>2</sup> The summons referred to in this sub-rule is not the summons sent in the suit against the firm but means a notice or summons to appear and answer the application for leave to execute under sub-rule (2).<sup>3</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule deals with the attachment of property in the custody of a Court or of a public officer.<sup>1</sup> The property sought to be attached must, however, belong to the judgment-debtor. Thus, Government promissory notes standing in the name of the judgment-debtor in a bank, but which have been declared to belong to another, cannot be attached under this rule.<sup>2</sup> Where a judgment-debtor's property is sold in execution and the sale proceeds are deposited in Court, the surplus amount of the sale proceeds payable to the judgment-debtor after payment of the decretal amount can be attached under this rule.<sup>3</sup>

The Court has no discretion to refuse to order attachment in cases under this rule.<sup>4</sup> The circumstance that one decree-holder has attached the property is no ground for preventing another decree-holder of the same judgment-debtor from attaching the same property.<sup>5</sup>

Where a decree-holder seeks to attach money of the judgment-debtor already deposited in Court, it is necessary that he should put in an execution application in his suit to that effect, and give notice to the judgment-debtor.<sup>6</sup> The attachment is to be made by issuing a notice to the custody Court, to hold the property subject to the orders of the Court issuing the notice.<sup>7</sup> Where the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same, the High Court of Lahore<sup>8</sup> has held that it would be a meaningless formality to issue a precept to itself requesting it to hold the property subject to its own orders.

2. Property in the custody of the Court or public officer. — The rule permits of attachment of property not merely in the custody of Court but also of property in the custody of public officer, such as moneys in the hands of the Official trustee<sup>1</sup> or insured letters addressed to the judgment-debtor lying in the custody of the post office.<sup>2</sup> Revenue or interest or dividends payable in future can also be attached under this rule.<sup>3</sup> For definition of 'public officer', see Section 2 (17). As to assets in the hands of the Collector in execution, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup> The word 'custody' in the rule means actual custody.<sup>5</sup>

3. Property in the hands of a receiver. — Moneys in the hands of a receiver must be regarded as being in the custody of the Court and can be attached under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Leave of Court is, however, necessary before such attachment of property in his hands can be levied. The present rule does not affect the prevailing practice as to the necessity of obtaining leave in such cases.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 3-6

Where a receiver is appointed for the assets of a partnership in a partnership suit, the practice on the original side of the High Court of Bombay has been, to pass a charging order against the assets held by the receiver, on the application of an attaching creditor. By virtue of such order the receiver is bound to deal with the charge as per order of the Court issuing the same.<sup>3</sup> Where a receiver is appointed in a suit for administration of the estate of a deceased but no decree is passed, it has been held that the receiver appointed in the suit ought not to be directed to pay a judgment-creditor who has obtained an attachment under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>5</sup>

4. Property in the hands of the Official Assignee. — The Official Assignee is a public officer coming within the definition of Section 2, clause (17), sub-clause (d) of the Code. The amount in his hands payable by way of dividend to the judgment-debtor can be attached under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

5. Anticipatory attachment. — The rule applies only to attachment of property actually in the hands of the Court or the officer and not of property expected to reach the hands of such Court or officer.<sup>1</sup>

6. Determination of questions of title and priority — Proviso. — Under the proviso to this rule, a question of title or priority arising between the decree-holder and any other person, is to be determined by the custody Court and not by the attaching Court.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where Courts B, C and D have, in execution of decrees obtained by X, Y and Z respectively, successively attached a fund in the custody of Court A, it is the latter Court that has to determine the priority between X, Y and Z.

It has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras<sup>2</sup> that X is entitled, as being the first attaching decree-holder, to priority over the claims of Y and Z, and that the custody Court A is not entitled to award a rateable distribution among X, Y and Z. The reason given is that Section 73 does not, in terms, apply to such cases inasmuch as the decree-holders have not applied to Court A for execution of their decrees before the receipt by it of such assets, and that there cannot be any rateable distribution of property apart from Section 73, on equitable grounds, among any other class of decree-holders than those specified in Section 73. And until the money is actually transferred to the credit of the suit in execution of the decree in which it was attached, the Court continues to be merely the custody Court.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Calcutta<sup>4</sup> has, on the other hand, held that attachment does not create any title in the attaching creditor and that the custody Court is bound to apply the rules of justice, equity and good conscience and distribute the fund attached rateably amongst the attaching decree-holders. In the undermentioned case the same High Court has held that where the custody Court is different from the attaching Court, the custody Court has no authority to make any rateable distribution and that it could only determine the question of priority and thereafter act under the instructions of the attaching Court.<sup>5</sup> The question has arisen in the High Court of Bombay with reference to the attachment of funds in the hands of a receiver appointed in a partnership action. In the undermentioned case<sup>6</sup> Farran, J., held that one of several creditors cannot by attachment obtain priority over the other creditors and that a Court of Equity will refuse permission to attach except on terms which ensure equality among all the creditors. A contrary view was taken by Mirza, J., in the cases cited below<sup>7</sup> following the Madras Full Bench case. The same High Court has also held that a creditor who has obtained a charging order in his favour is entitled to priority over other non-attaching creditors.<sup>8</sup> The Lahore High Court has, in the undermentioned case,<sup>9</sup> held that the decree-holder who attaches the money first is entitled to priority.

Where X obtains a decree in Court B and in execution thereof attaches a fund in Court A and before the transfer of the fund to Court B to the account of X's suit, other decree-holders have applied for execution to the Court B, the matter falls within Section 73, and X and other decree-holders will be entitled to rateable distribution.<sup>10</sup> As to the right of rateable distribution in cases in which the attaching Court and the custody Court are one and the same, see Note 11 to Section 73.

binding on the parties.<sup>11</sup> The enquiry under the proviso is of the same nature as an investigation of claim proceedings and a suit lies to set aside the order passed therein.<sup>12</sup> Further, a decision in a proceeding under the proviso between the decree-holder and a stranger will not be one under Section 47.<sup>13</sup> Hence, a separate suit to agitate the dispute between the attaching decree-holder and a stranger claiming the money or other property attached will not be barred.<sup>14</sup>

A obtains a decree against B, C and D. The decree is joint and several against all the judgment-debtors as regards a portion of the decretal amount, and as regards the balance the decree is against B exclusively. Certain money is lying in Court which A wants to attach as being the exclusive property of B. C and D claim that the property is the joint property of B, C and D and not the exclusive property of B. The dispute is one between the parties to the suit and falls under Section 47.<sup>15</sup>

7. Effect of attachment under this Rule on any previous attachment. —

A files a suit against B and attaches before judgment certain moveable properties belonging to B. The attached property being perishable is sold and the proceeds are kept in Court. C who has obtained a decree against B attaches the amount in Court deposit under the provisions of this rule. If at that time A has not obtained a decree in his suit and applied for execution thereof, C will be entitled to apply the amount attached in satisfaction of his decree and the prior attachment before judgment obtained by A will confer no right in his favour so as to affect the right of C.<sup>1</sup> But if A has actually obtained a decree and applies for execution at the time of C's attachment, different equities will arise and both A and C will be entitled to share the proceeds rateably between themselves.<sup>2</sup>

8. Step-in-aid. — Where an attachment is effected under this rule of moneys lying to the credit of the judgment-debtor in the treasury, and more than three years after the attachment an application is made for payment of the amount attached, the latter application is not one for execution but one to take a step-in-aid of the prior execution application and is not barred.<sup>1</sup>

9. Appeal. — It was held in the undermentioned case that where a decree-holder in a Munsif's Court obtained an order of attachment under this rule of certain moneys lying to the credit of the judgment-debtor in the sub-Court and in pursuance thereof obtained an order of payment from the sub-Court, an appeal lay to the District Court and not directly to the High Court. The dispute was held to be one relating only to the Munsif's Court's decree.<sup>1</sup> As to whether the question arising under the proviso to this rule falls within the scope of Section 47 so as to be open to appeal, see<sup>2</sup> Section 47, Note 5 and the cases cited there.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. In sub-rule (1), the words "or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge" have been newly added.
2. In clause (b) (ii) of the same sub-rule the words "or his judgment-debtor" are new.
3. Sub-rules (2), (3) and (6) and clause (a) of sub-rule (1) are new.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule makes a distinction, for the purposes of attachment, between decrees for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, and other decrees. Where a decree of the former class is attached the mode of realization of the attached decree is by execution thereof.<sup>1</sup> The holder of the decree sought to be executed is conferred the power of executing such attached decree and for that purpose the rule declares that he should be deemed to be a representative of the holder of the attached decree.

O. 21 R. 53

In the case of other decrees sub-rule (4) prescribes the manner of attachment thereof. But the rule is silent as to how they should be realized after attachment. Such decrees should therefore be sold after attachment by Court auction as being "other saleable property of the judgment-debtor" under Section 60.<sup>2</sup> In Madras, by virtue of Rule 178 of the Civil Rules of Practice, even in cases not falling under sub-rule (1) of this rule, a decree cannot be ordered to be sold in execution of another decree. That rule has been held to be not ultra vires of the rule-making powers of the High Court.<sup>3</sup>

A mere order for attachment will not effect the attachment of a decree under this rule. The attachment will not be complete unless the formalities prescribed by the rule are observed. Thus, in the case of an attachment of a decree for money passed by a Court other than the Court which orders the attachment, it is essential that notice must be issued to the Court by which the decree has been passed under sub-rule (1), clause (b).<sup>4</sup>

Notice to the holder of the decree sought to be attached is not necessary for effecting an attachment of a decree for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge. Such notice is only necessary in the case of other decrees under sub-rule (4).<sup>5</sup>

The rule applies to attachment of decrees whether made before or after judgment.<sup>6</sup> It does not apply to a case where the creditor of a mortgagee attached the deposit made in Court by the mortgagor to redeem the property before sale in execution.<sup>7</sup> For the attachment and the subsequent execution of decrees of Civil Courts in execution of certificates issued under the provisions of certain local Public Demands Recovery Acts, see the undermentioned provisions.<sup>8</sup>

Where an ex parte decree which has been attached in execution of another decree is set aside on the application of the judgment-debtor and a fresh decree in favour of the plaintiff is passed after trial on the merits, the original attachment must be taken to have revived as soon as a fresh decree on the merits is passed.<sup>9</sup>

3. Decree for money. — A decree for the payment of money is not attachable as a debt under Rule 46, but should be attached under this rule.<sup>1</sup> The following have been held to be money decrees attachable as such under this rule —

1. Decree for mesne profits<sup>2</sup> whether ascertained or unascertained.<sup>3</sup>

2. Decree for arrears of rent.<sup>4</sup>

3. A certificate as to deficiency of price granted under Rule 71 of this Order.<sup>5</sup>

But the rule applies only to cases where the right attached is expressly settled by the decree. Thus, a right to recover mesne profits by way of restitution by reason of reversal of the decree in appeal cannot be attached.<sup>6</sup>

O. 21 R. 53
Notes 3-4

As noticed in Note 2, after attachment under this rule, the money decree should be executed and not sold. See also Note 9 below.

3a. "Decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge." — In the absence of these words under the old Code there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage was or was not a money decree and as to the mode of execution of such a decree after attachment. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> and Calcutta<sup>2</sup> held that it was not a money decree and that it should be sold after attachment. The High Court of Madras,<sup>3</sup> on the other hand, held that it was a money decree which should be attached and executed under the corresponding Section 273. The conflict has been set at rest by the Legislature by giving effect to the Madras view. Under the present rule such decrees are placed on the same footing as money decrees.<sup>4</sup> In the case of a decree for maintenance charging immovable property also, the proper course for the decree-holder is to apply for execution, and not for the sale of the decree attached.<sup>5</sup>

If, however, in contravention of the provisions of this rule a decree for money or a mortgage decree for sale is sold and not executed, after attachment, the sale cannot be regarded as a nullity which confers no rights on the purchasers. The rule is merely one of procedure and ought not to be given a scope which will interfere with the substantive rights of creditors conferred by Section 60 of the Code.<sup>6</sup>

A preliminary decree in a mortgage suit is neither a decree for the payment of money nor one for sale in enforcement of a mortgage and is not covered by sub-rule (1) of this rule.<sup>7</sup> Such a decree is, however, attachable property of the judgment-debtor.<sup>8</sup>

4. Other decrees. — A decree relating to immovable property is not itself immovable property. Such a decree should therefore be attached only under this rule and not under the next rule.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a decree for possession of immovable property,<sup>2</sup> or a preliminary decree for partition,<sup>3</sup> or a decree for foreclosure,<sup>4</sup> should be attached under this rule. As pointed out in Note 1, such decrees should be sold after attachment, and cannot be executed.

4a. Preliminary decree for accounts — Attachability of. — There is a conflict of decisions as to whether a preliminary decree for accounts can be attached under this rule. It was held by the Bombay High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that a preliminary decree for the dissolution of a partnership and for accounts is a decree for money within the meaning of this rule and can be attached. But, the Calcutta High Court in the case cited below<sup>2</sup> dissented from this view and held that such a decree is not a decree for money and also that it could not be attached and sold in execution. But, in the undermentioned case,<sup>3</sup> the same High Court held that a preliminary decree in a suit for accounts is saleable property which is attachable under Section 60. The question arose before the Madras High Court, in the case noted below,<sup>4</sup> but the Judges who presided differed in their opinion.

5. Decree passed by the same Court. — In the case of a decree for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by the same Court, the attachment is made under sub-rule (1), clause (a) by order of the Court. In the case of other decrees, the attachment is made under sub-rule (4) by the issue of a notice to the holder of the decree sought to be attached prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way.

6. Decree passed by different Courts. — An order of attachment under this rule, by Court X, of a decree passed by Court Y, can be made either by Court X or by the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution.<sup>1</sup>

After receiving notice of attachment under this rule, the Court whose decree is attached has no jurisdiction to proceed with the sale ignoring the order. The sale, if held in such a case, will be void.<sup>2</sup>

The attachment of a decree for money passed by another Court is complete as soon as a notice under sub-rule (1), clause (b) is served on the Court which passed such decree.<sup>3</sup>

7. Effect of attachment. — The effect of attachment of a decree under this rule is to stay execution of the attached decree until the conditions mentioned therein happen.<sup>1</sup> The decree is not permanently rendered incapable of execution by reason of the attachment, nor is the decree-holder's interest destroyed.<sup>2</sup> "The judgment-creditor," as pointed out by Maclean, C. J., "still had an interest in the decree which he had obtained and the attachment order did not prevent him from presenting the decree with a view to execution." The addition of the words "or his judgment-debtor" in sub-rule (1), clause (b) gives legislative recognition to the right of the holder of the decree attached, to apply for execution after attachment.<sup>3</sup>

The rule mentions only the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor as having the right to apply for execution after attachment. But, can a transferee of the decree, whose transfer is prior to the attachment, apply for execution of the decree after attachment under this rule? The High Court of Madras in its earlier decisions<sup>4</sup> held that the words "his judgment-debtor" do not include a transferee from the judgment-debtor and that the remedy of the latter is only to prefer a claim under Rule 58 of this Order and have the attachment raised before he can apply for execution. In a later decision,<sup>5</sup> however, the same High Court has dissented from this view and held that the transferee is entitled to execute the decree notwithstanding the subsequent attachment inasmuch as his rights are prior to the attachment and Rule 16 confers a right of execution in his favour. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>6</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,<sup>7</sup> have also held that a transferee stands in the same position as his transferor, and is entitled to apply for execution. The High Court of Patna<sup>8</sup> has gone a step further and held that a transferee of the decree even after attachment is entitled to apply for execution by virtue of Rule 16. The reasoning of the Patna High Court is that in the case of money decrees, the present rule does not prohibit a transfer of the decree during the pendency of the attachment, and the general prohibition contained in Section 64 does not apply to the specific provision in this rule. But the right of the assignee to execute the decree in such a case is subject to the right of the attacher just as the assignor's right would be.<sup>9</sup>

A filed a suit against B and attached before judgment a decree which B had obtained against C. C paid into Court various sums of money towards the latter decree. Then a decree was passed in favour of A in the suit which he had filed against B. Thereupon, A applied to draw out the moneys which had been deposited by C. It was held that A was entitled to do so.<sup>10</sup>

8. Stay of execution — Sub-rule (1). — The object of the stay is to prevent the holder of the attached decree from realizing and taking away the fruits of that decree.<sup>1</sup> But the stay is not an absolute stay but a limited one and, as already noticed, does not prevent the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor from executing the attached decree.<sup>2</sup> The provision in clause (b) (ii) of sub-rule (1) does not mean that when the holder of the decree sought to be executed makes such an application, the attached decree ceases to be an attached decree; it only means that a period is provided by the rule up to which a stay of execution is to be made by the Court to which notice is sent, to enable the attaching decree-holder to apply for execution of the attached decree.<sup>3</sup>

9. Execution of attached decree — Sub-rule (2). — Under sub-rule (2) the attaching decree-holder is entitled to apply for execution of the attached decree. He can take the necessary steps for the realization of the proceeds of the attached decree and apply them in satisfaction of his decree.<sup>1</sup>

10. Representative — Sub-rule (3). — Sub-rule (3) makes it quite clear that once a decree has been attached by another decree-holder, the latter becomes a representative of the holder of the attached decree and is entitled to take out execution in the same way as the original holder thereof could have done.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 25 to Section 47.

Thus, where in execution of a decree obtained by A against B, a decree which B holds against a company in liquidation is attached, the Court will direct the liquidator to recognise A as the representative of B and allow him to prove for the decree debt in the name of B and to receive and apply dividends payable to B in satisfaction of A's decree debt.<sup>2</sup>

The attaching decree-holder is entitled to take moneys deposited by the judgment-debtor and certify payment.<sup>3</sup> Moneys brought into Court by the judgment-debtor become forthwith available for the satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed and interest ceases to run from the date of the deposit.<sup>4</sup> The attaching creditor has the same remedies as his judgment-debtor and can also proceed against any sureties for the decree amount.<sup>5</sup> If the decree is attached after execution sale but before confirmation, it has been held that the attaching decree-holder is entitled to apply for confirmation of sale in his favour.<sup>6</sup>

Where an alleged attachment under this rule is invalid for want of compliance with the prescribed formalities, the attaching decree-holder does not become the representative of the holder of the attached decree. In such a case, the mere fact that the name of the attaching decree-holder is substituted in the record for that of the original holder of the attached decree will not preclude the judgment-debtor under the latter decree to object to the execution of such decree by the substituted person, when no notice of the substitution was given to him and he had no opportunity to contest the same.<sup>7</sup>

A question arising between a person attaching a decree under this rule and an assignee of such decree will be a question between persons claiming to be representatives of the same party and as such will not be within Section 47 of the Code.<sup>8</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>9</sup>

11. Adjustment of attached decree — Sub-rule (6).— As pointed out by their Lordships of the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned Full Bench decision,<sup>1</sup> clause (6) of the rule provides an exception to the general rule embodied in Section 64 of the Code, and is a special case of the application of the well-known principle of justice and equity intended for the protection of parties to a bona fide transaction. After the judgment-debtor under the attached decree receives either through Court or otherwise notice of the order of attachment, any payment or adjustment by him to his decree-holder will not be recognized by the Court.<sup>2</sup> But if such judgment-debtor should, in ignorance of the attachment, have made any payment or adjustment it should be regarded as a payment or adjustment properly made under the decree to the rightful person.<sup>3</sup> The judgment-debtor under the attached decree cannot plead, as against the attaching decree-holder, an uncertified payment or adjustment made before the date of attachment.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the judgment-debtor could not have successfully raised the same plea as against his decree-holder by reason of the provisions of O. 21 R. 2 ante.

The rule prohibits an adjustment between the judgment-debtor under the decree attached and the decree-holder thereof and not an adjustment between the attaching decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.<sup>5</sup>

If an application for execution by the attaching decree-holder is struck off for default, it has been held that the attachment is not put an end to and the judgment-debtor cannot therefore make any payment to his decree-holder. The provisions of

See Note 2 to Section 64, ante.

As already pointed out in Rule 53 above, a decree, though relating to immovable property, is not itself immovable property, and cannot be attached as such under this rule but only under Rule 53.<sup>4</sup>

This rule extends to attachment of immovable property under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1920. See Section 50.

2. Attachment of mortgage debt. — See Note 4 to Rule 46.

3. Immovable property. — See Note 4 to Section 16, ante, for the meaning of the words "immovable property." The following have been held to be immovable property within the meaning of this rule —

- (1) The equity of redemption in a mortgage.<sup>1</sup>
- (2) The life interest taken by a Parsee widow under her husband's will in the income of his immovable property.<sup>2</sup>

3a. Attachment of property belonging to a Hindu coparcener. — An attachment of the share of an undivided coparcener in a joint Hindu family should be made in respect of his undivided share in the whole family property, and not of his share in each item of it.<sup>1</sup> Such an attachment has the effect of preventing the accrual of title by survivorship to the other members, in the event of the member,

whose share is attached, dying after attachment and before sale.<sup>3</sup>

4. Attachment, when complete. — An attachment under this rule is not complete unless first, the order of attachment has been issued and secondly, in execution of that order, the other formalities prescribed by the Code have been complied with.<sup>1</sup> No notice is necessary before ordering an attachment of property.<sup>2</sup> See for a full discussion Note 3 to Section 64, ante.

5. Service of prohibitory order. — The mere writing of an order is not enough. It must be served on the judgment-debtor and he must have an opportunity of knowing that he is prohibited.<sup>1</sup> There is a presumption that official acts are regularly performed. Where it was found that the prohibitory order was duly served on the judgment-debtors, but that portion of the record which would show that the service was effected in the prescribed manner had been destroyed, it was held that the execution sale was not vitiated on that account.<sup>2</sup>

Where the property to be attached is within the jurisdiction of the Court, there is nothing to prevent the Court from issuing the prohibitory order to the judgment-debtor living outside the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>3</sup>

6. Proclamation of order of attachment. — A mere prohibitory order will not constitute a sufficient attachment so as to operate as a valid prohibition against any alienation by the judgment-debtor unless the proclamation described in the second part of the rule is carried out.<sup>1</sup> The publication of the proclamation as required by the rule constitutes sufficient notice to the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup>

The proclamation is merely a ministerial act, and the delay on the part of the officer in effecting it, as for instance, where an attachment which was ordered before judgment is not completed till after judgment, does not vitiate the proceedings.<sup>3</sup> As to the effect of the omission to publish the sale proclamation, see Notes to Rule 90, infra.

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

7. Beat of drum. — A proclamation of attachment should be made by beat of drum at some place on or adjacent to the property attached. The omission to have the drum beaten as required by the rule is a material irregularity which will vitiate the execution sale.<sup>1</sup>

8. Affixing copy on conspicuous part of the property. — A copy of the proclamation order must be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property.<sup>1</sup> Where prima facie this is not done, it is a material irregularity which will afford a ground for setting aside the execution sale.<sup>2</sup>

9. Affixing copy in court-house. — A copy of the proclamation of sale must, under Rule 67, infra, read with this rule, be affixed on a conspicuous part of the court-house and, under Rule 68 the sale must take place only after the expiration of at least 30 days from the day on which it was so affixed.<sup>1</sup>

An omission to affix a copy of the attachment order in a conspicuous part of the court-house is also a material irregularity within the meaning of Rule 90.<sup>3</sup>

Where the process-server's report which purports to say what was done by him, omits to mention that a copy of the attachment order was affixed on the court-house, it must be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that such copy was not affixed, and the attachment must be held to be invalid.<sup>3</sup>

11. Effect of attachment and re-attachment.—An attachment under this rule does not constitute dispossession of the party in actual possession.<sup>1</sup> Nor does it confer any interest or title in the property in favour of the attaching party.<sup>2</sup> As noticed in Note 5 to Section 64 ante, the effect of attachment is to restrain alienation by the judgment-debtor and any rights acquired by reason of a private transfer subsequent to the attachment are void against all claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>3</sup> But, an agricultural lease granted by a landlord in the ordinary course of management would not be prohibited under this rule.<sup>4</sup> It has also been held that a sale effected in pursuance of a contract for sale entered into before the attachment is not affected by the attachment.<sup>5</sup>

A re-attachment of property ex majori cautela after decree does not imply an abandonment of the attachment obtained before decree.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 7 to Section 64.

12. Absence of attachment and irregular and invalid attachment.—Attachment is a step taken only in order to keep the property of the judgment-debtor intact and to enable the decree-holder to bring it to sale. It is a step in execution designed for the protection of the judgment-creditor and not for the benefit of the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> Where, therefore, a sale takes place without the property sold having been attached, it is not a nullity and will not be set aside unless substantial loss or injury is proved to have resulted therefrom.<sup>2</sup> The absence of attachment is only an irregularity which does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to sell.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, any defect or error in the mode of attachment is only an irregularity which does not render the sale ipso facto void.<sup>4</sup> See Notes to Rule 90, infra.

But as between the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser on the one hand, and an alienee from the judgment-debtor on the other, different equities come into operation.<sup>5</sup> As pointed out in Note 4, a regularly perfected attachment is a condition precedent to a restraint on alienation after attachment so as to attract the provisions of Section 64.<sup>6</sup> A private alienation of property after an order of attachment which has not been carried into effect is valid unless proof is given that all the requirements of the rule have been complied with.<sup>7</sup>

An attachment which is prima facie invalid as, for instance, where the decree is set aside on appeal at the time of attachment, cannot confer any jurisdiction on the Court to sell, and the sale, if held in pursuance of such attachment, is void.<sup>8</sup>

(2) Where —

the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn, and in the case of immovable property, the withdrawal shall, if the judgment-debtor so desires, be proclaimed at his expense and a copy of the proclamation shall be affixed in the manner prescribed by the last preceding rule."

OUDH

Substitute the following for Rule 55 :

(2) Where —

Synopsis

1. Legislative changes.

2. Scope of the Rule.

3. "Attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn."

4. Revival of attachment.

O. 21 R. 55 (Oudh Amendment)

1. ('86) 164 Ind Cas 1081 (1082) (Oudh). (Unless along with the decree of the attaching creditor, the decree of an applicant for rateable distribution is also satisfied, the attachment shall not be deemed to be withdrawn.)

O. 21 R. 55
Notes 1-3

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "or certified to the Court" are new.
2. The words "the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn, etc.," have been substituted for the words "an order shall be issued . . . . . for the withdrawal of attachment."

2. Scope of the Rule. — On any of the three things mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) happening, the attachment is automatically deemed to be withdrawn. No express order is now necessary, as it was, under the old Code.<sup>1</sup>

The rule applies only where the decree is fully and entirely satisfied.<sup>2</sup> An attachment cannot be partially raised by consent of parties without an express order of the Court.<sup>3</sup>

The words "amount decreed" mean, in the case of an instalment decree, the instalment which has become due and in respect of which the attachment has been made.<sup>4</sup>

A mere tender of money before the Judge is not sufficient to entitle the judgment-debtor to have the sale of properties stayed; the law contemplates that payment should be made in accordance with the rules and forms of the Court.<sup>5</sup>

It is the duty of the judgment-debtor to apprise the Court of the fact of satisfaction of the decree; otherwise, if the Court executes the decree in ignorance of the satisfaction thereof, the sale will not be held to be invalid on that ground alone.<sup>6</sup>

This rule applies to proceedings in respect of immovables under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act : see Section 210 (3) (b), Bengal Act, VI of 1908, as amended by Bihar and Orissa Act, VI of 1920, Section 50 (1).

As to whether money paid under this rule is available for rateable distribution to other decree-holders who have not attached the properties, see Note 4 to Section 73 ante, and also the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> under the Allahabad amendment to this rule.

The rule is not exhaustive of the modes in which attachment ceases.<sup>8</sup> Thus, an attachment ceases as soon as the sale of the property attached takes place.<sup>9</sup>

3. "Attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn." — As has been seen already, an attachment will automatically cease on payment made under clause (a). Where, therefore, by reason of such payment an attachment ceases, another decree-holder who has applied for execution against the same judgment-debtor, but who has not attached the properties, cannot have the property sold under the attachment that has ceased.<sup>1</sup>

Even under the old Code it was held that, on payment of the decree-amount into Court, the attachment became inoperative even though it was not formally withdrawn,<sup>2</sup> and that a private alienation after the attaching creditor had been satisfied would prevail against subsequent attachments.<sup>3</sup>

As seen in Note 4 to Section 73 ante, the payment under this rule is subject to the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution. It has been held that where the decretal amount is paid into Court under clause (a) of this rule but owing to the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution, the attaching decree-holder gets only a portion of the money deposited, the attachment will not cease.<sup>4</sup> The reason given is that the rule contemplates a cessation of attachment only on the decree being fully satisfied.

O. 21 R. 55.

4. Revival of attachment. — The rule provides that the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn when the decree is set aside or reversed. But, if on second appeal, the reversal of the decree by the first Appellate Court is in turn reversed and the original decree restored, the attachment will be revived and a sale can be ordered on the strength thereof.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 9 to Section 64.

R. 56. [S. 277.] Where the property attached is current coin or currency notes, the Court may, at any time during the continuance of the attachment, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same.

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — This rule is new. There was no corresponding provision in the Code of 1882, enabling the executing Court to dismiss an execution application when the decree-holder was not diligent in prosecuting the same. The Court could not act under Chapter VII (now Order 9) or under Section 157 (now O. 17 R. 2) as those provisions applied only to suits; nor could the Court apply those provisions by virtue of Section 647 (now Section 141), inasmuch as the Judicial Committee held in Thakur Prasad v. Fakirulla, I. L. R. 17 Allahabad 106 (P. C.), that that Section did not apply to execution proceedings. Hence, with a view to prevent the accumulation of execution applications from encumbering the files of the Courts and in order to show a better statistical return, the subordinate Courts resorted to the practice of disposing of them by passing such orders as "recorded" or "struck off" on such applications. Such a practice was not authorized by the provisions of the Code and, in spite of the fact that the High Courts condemned the same,<sup>1</sup> and although a Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad<sup>2</sup> pointed out that the Court could, under its inherent power, dismiss an application for the laches of the decree-holder, this unauthorized practice nevertheless persisted. Such disposals also led to further doubts and complications as to whether an attachment previously effected did or did not subsist after the passing of the order. It was held in several cases that the attachment was not necessarily put an end to by reason of the order "striking off" the application and that it was a question of intention depending on the circumstances of each case as to whether or not it subsisted.<sup>3</sup>

The present rule proscribes the procedure to be followed, where after attachment in execution, the application for execution cannot further be proceeded with by reason of the decree-holder's default.<sup>4</sup> The object of the rule is —

- (1) to put an end to the practice of disposing of execution applications by such orders as "application struck off" or "lodged";<sup>5</sup> and,
- (2) to remove the doubt that existed under the old Code as to the effect of an order of dismissal upon attachment, by providing in explicit terms that the attachment should cease upon the dismissal, irrespective of any question of intention.<sup>6</sup>

Under the present rule, the Court should not "strike off" execution applications for default of the decree-holder.<sup>7</sup> If it does pass such an order, it will be deemed to be one of dismissal.<sup>8</sup>

The provisions of this rule have been held to have no retrospective effect and do not apply to orders passed before the coming into force of the present Code.<sup>9</sup>

2. "By reason of the decree-holder's default." — The default referred to by the rule is not confined merely to a default in appearance or in the payment of

process fees, or in production of documents. It means failure to do what one is legally bound to do, that is, to go on with the application and have the property sold.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an omission to serve notice on the judgment-debtor as required by Rule 66 of this Order,<sup>2</sup> or failure to furnish any information called for by the Court,<sup>3</sup> amounts to a default within the meaning of this rule. Similarly, if the decree-holder withdraws his application,<sup>4</sup> or requests the Court to strike it off,<sup>5</sup> or consents to an application for adjournment of the sale made by the judgment-debtor,<sup>6</sup> he thereby precludes himself from proceeding with the execution application and the Court can dismiss the same for default under this rule. But an omission to do anything which he is not under an obligation to do, such as not being present at the time of the sale, or his failure to bid at such sale, does not constitute a default<sup>7</sup> and, therefore, a dismissal of the application for want of bidders at the sale will not have the effect of putting an end to the attachment under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

The default contemplated by this rule refers to a stage after the attachment and not before the attachment. Applying this principle, the High Court of Madras has held in a case where, though there was an attachment, the parties as well as the Court were proceeding in ignorance of the attachment, as though there was none, the dismissal of the application at a stage when the Court thought that the attachment was yet to be effected, does not come within the scope of this rule.<sup>9</sup> This view has also been followed by the Lahore High Court.<sup>10</sup>

Where the Court passes an order "Petition dismissed, attachment to continue", what is the legal effect of the direction regarding the continuance of the attachment? On the one hand, the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> Lahore<sup>5</sup> and Madras<sup>6</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>7</sup> have held that the direction is of no legal effect or consequence and that attachment ceases forthwith. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>8</sup> has, on the other hand, held that the order though not a proper one, cannot be treated as a nullity having no effect upon the parties, but that it should be treated as an order adjourning the case sine die. Under the rule as amended in Nagpur in 1930, the Court has power, while dismissing an application for execution, to continue the attachment.<sup>9</sup>

The rule applies, in terms, only to cases of dismissal by reason of the decree-holder's default. Where the dismissal is not due to the default of the decree-holder, the question whether the attachment ceases by reason of the dismissal, depends upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>10</sup> It has thus been held that where the dismissal is due to a mistake of the Court,<sup>11</sup> or in consequence of an order of stay,<sup>12</sup> or of injunction<sup>13</sup> passed by a competent Court, the attachment is not put an end to by reason of the order of dismissal. But the Court has power to direct even in such cases by an explicit order, that the attachment should cease even though there is no default on the part of the decree-holder.<sup>14</sup>

4. Dismissal of application by Collector. — Where execution proceedings are transferred to the Collector he has power to dismiss the execution application for default under this rule, and upon such a dismissal the attachment ceases.<sup>1</sup>

5. Execution removed from file for statistical purposes. — As seen in Note 1, the Court should, under this rule, either dismiss or adjourn the application and not simply "strike it off." Even in cases to which the rule does not apply, there is no provision of law authorizing the Court to lodge an application or record it or strike it off from the file for what is commonly called statistical purposes.<sup>1</sup> The proper course in such cases is to adjourn the application and not to strike it off the file. Where the

Court does, however, pass such an order as "struck off" or "recorded" or "closed" or "consigned to the record room," etc., it would only amount to an adjournment sine die and the application will be deemed nevertheless to be pending.<sup>3</sup> The removal for statistical purposes is not a judicial determination and no fresh application is necessary to continue the same.<sup>3</sup>

6. Responsibility of sapurdar of attached property after dismissal for default. — A sapurdar is responsible to the Court for the production of the property entrusted with him. He cannot escape liability by pleading that owing to the decree-holder's default the execution application was dismissed with the result that the attachment terminated under this rule and that therefore he handed over the property to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup>

7. Revival of attachment, when possible. — On the dismissal of an execution application for default, the attachment ceases. A revival of the execution proceedings, for instance, by an application for review, does not operate to revive the attachment, so as to prejudice the rights of a third party in the property acquired in the meantime.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if the judgment-debtor transfers the property after an order of dismissal under this rule, the transferee gets the property free from attachment.<sup>2</sup> But where there is no question of prejudice to third parties the attachment can also be revived.<sup>3</sup>

8. Attachment before judgment. — There is a conflict of judicial opinion as to the effect of an order of dismissal of an execution application under this rule upon attachment effected before judgment. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>1</sup> Calcutta<sup>2</sup> and Patna<sup>3</sup> have held that the present rule applies only to cases where the property is "attached in execution of a decree" as the rule itself expressly states, and that consequently the dismissal of an execution application for default does not put an end to the attachment before judgment. Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>5</sup> have, on the other hand, taken a contrary view. According to them, the words "any property attached in execution of a decree" should be construed as meaning "where property has been in a state of attachment in execution" and the decree-holder by electing to take the benefit of O. 38 R. 11 and proceeding to execute the decree without a fresh attachment is, in effect, asking the Court to treat the attachment as one in execution; the attachment before judgment therefore ceases upon the dismissal of the application for execution. The High Court of Bombay<sup>6</sup> has accepted the view of the Madras Full Bench but held that the dismissal of an execution application in relation to moveable property has not the effect of putting an end to an attachment of immovable properties.

1. Investigation of claims and objections. — Where property is attached in execution of a decree, it is possible that third parties, or even the parties themselves, have objections to such attachment being made. Where a party or his representative has any such objection, the question is one falling also within Section 47 and therefore must be decided by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> The enquiry under that Section is a full enquiry and the determination of the question after such enquiry amounts to a decree.<sup>2</sup> The remedy of the party aggrieved by the order is by way of appeal.<sup>3</sup> On the other hand, where a third party has a claim or an objection to the attachment of property attached in execution of a decree, there are two courses open to him. He may straightway file a suit claiming the appropriate relief, or he may file an application under this rule to the Court executing the decree. But he cannot prefer an appeal against the order of attachment.<sup>4</sup> He is not bound to prefer a claim or an objection under this rule.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that the remedy provided by this rule is a summary and concurrent remedy provided with the object of securing a speedy settlement of title raised at execution sales,<sup>6</sup> and, as has been seen in Note 63 to

Section 9, ante, the existence of such a remedy does not bar a regular suit or other available remedy to the party aggrieved.<sup>7</sup> Where such third party prefers a claim under this rule the enquiry is only a summary investigation and not a full trial of the issues between the parties.<sup>8</sup> The party aggrieved by an order passed after such investigation should file a suit under Rule 63 within one year thereof for setting aside the order.

Where a decree-holder applies for the attachment of a certain property as belonging to the judgment-debtor, it is not for the Court to anticipate proceedings under this rule and refuse to order attachment on the ground that the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor.<sup>9</sup>

As seen in Note 2 to Section 70, a Collector to whom the execution of a decree has been transferred has no power to inquire into objections to attachment under this rule.<sup>10</sup>

This rule and Rule 63 do not apply to the Vizagapatam Agency Tracts.<sup>11</sup>

2. Attachment before judgment. — See Note 6 to Rule 63.

3. "Where any claim is preferred to or any objection is made." — The rule is very wide and comprises claims of third parties whether put forward by themselves or on their behalf by the parties to the suit or their representatives.<sup>1</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>2</sup>

4. "On the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment." — The rule pre-supposes the existence of an attachment and the ground of the application is that the property is not liable to attachment.<sup>1</sup> Where there is no attachment at all, an objection under this rule is incompetent.<sup>2</sup> Nor can the objector prefer an application under this rule merely on the ground that he has not been made a party to the execution proceedings.<sup>3</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>4</sup> that the words "on the ground that such property is not liable to attachment" have reference merely to a case where an objection is made to an attachment and not to a claim preferred to the property. The High Court of Madras<sup>5</sup> has also held that it is open to a claimant to put forward his claim under this rule on the ground that the Court which passed the decree had no jurisdiction to pass it or that the Court which executes the decree has no jurisdiction to do so or that the attachment made is not legal or valid.<sup>6</sup>

But it is not open to a claimant to attack the validity of the decree<sup>7</sup> or the decree-holder's right to execute the same; it is thus not open to him to plead that the execution application is barred by limitation.<sup>8</sup>

5. Objections raised after sale. — It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Lahore, Patna and Rangoon and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar that a Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim under this rule after the execution sale has taken place.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the attachment is ipso facto determined after the sale has taken place.<sup>2</sup> But the High Courts of Madras and Nagpur and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind have expressed the view that a claim can be preferred after court-auction sale but before confirmation of the same, on the ground that the attachment subsists till the confirmation of the sale.<sup>3</sup> The Patna High Court<sup>4</sup> has also held in a recent case that under the amendment of the rule by that Court, a Court can deal with a claim petition under Rule 58 even after a sale has taken place, provided that it has not been confirmed. The amendment of the rule by the Allahabad High Court also contemplates that an objection under this rule can be dealt with after an execution sale but before its confirmation.<sup>5</sup>

An objection by a party to the suit or his representative falls under Section 47 and can be raised even after the sale.<sup>6</sup>

6. Burden of proof is on claimant to establish possession in himself. — Rule 59 prescribes that the claimant must adduce evidence to show that on the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of, the property attached. The burden of proof is therefore clearly upon the claimant or objector to establish possession in himself.<sup>1</sup>

7. Any property attached. — The rule applies to any property attached in execution of a decree. Thus, it will include a claim to moveables,<sup>1</sup> or to a fractional share of the immovable property attached,<sup>2</sup> or to a share of the moveables seized in

An objection by a third party to the attachment of any property can be entered only after an attachment has been made.<sup>4</sup>

8. Claim to debts attached in execution. — The procedure laid down in this rule applies also to claims relating to the attachment of debts. A garnishee who has failed in his claim cannot, without filing a suit within one year from the date of the order against him, assert either as plaintiff or as defendant the right denied to him by that order.<sup>1</sup> But where a garnishee denies the existence of the debt, he does not lay any claim to attached property and this rule does not apply to such a case.<sup>2</sup>

9. Claim to decree attached in execution. — The rule applies also to claims in respect of decrees attached in execution.

Where A obtains a decree against B for money and in execution thereof attaches a decree in favour of B, and C who had obtained before the attachment a transfer of the decree attached prefers a claim to the decree, his claim falls under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

10. Claim to property seized by receiver. — Where a receiver in insolvency after adjudication of the judgment-debtor seizes properties as belonging to the insolvent, it is open to third persons to prefer their claims or objections, if any, to such property. But such claims fall under Section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and are triable by the Insolvency Court,<sup>1</sup> although the procedure to be followed is that prescribed by this rule.<sup>2</sup> The decision of the Insolvency Court on such claims can, however, be challenged by the aggrieved party only by way of appeal or otherwise as provided by the Insolvency Act itself, and not by way of a suit under Rule 63.<sup>3</sup>

Where a property has been attached in execution of a decree, the mere fact that subsequent thereto the judgment-debtor becomes an insolvent and his properties become vested in the Official Receiver or the Official Assignee, will not disentitle a claimant from preferring an objection under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

11. Claims to properties ordered to be sold under a mortgage decree. — As has been seen in Note 4 ante, proceedings under this rule are applicable only when properties have been attached in execution. Attachment is necessary in the case of money decrees and not in the case of mortgage decrees. Consequently, the provisions of this rule do not apply to claims or objections relating to properties ordered to be sold under a mortgage decree.<sup>1</sup> The remedy of an objector in such a case is by way of a

Notes 11-12a

12. Claim to property attached in execution of rent decree.—Section 170, Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), expressly provides that the provisions of the Code as to claim cases, i. e., Rules 58 to 63 shall not apply to a tenure or holding attached in execution of a decree for arrears of rent thereof. Hence, no claims or objections can be filed under this rule in respect of the same.<sup>1</sup>

The rule applies to proceedings in execution of rent decrees under the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908.<sup>2</sup> This Act, unlike the Bengal Tenancy Act, contains no provision excepting the applicability of this rule to proceedings thereunder.

Rules 58 to 63 of the Code are made applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (Bihar and Orissa Act, VI of 1920) by Section 210, sub-section (3), clause (b).

12a. Property attached in execution of decree in favour of company in liquidation—Claim to such property.—Section 171 of the Companies Act of 1913 provides that no legal proceeding can be taken without the leave of the Court against a company in liquidation. O. 21 R. 56 motion and the person preferring the objection is merely in the position of a defendant
Notes 12a-14 defending a suit.

13. Who can prefer claim. — All persons, who at the date of the attachment have some interest in or are possessed of the property attached, can prefer a claim under this rule<sup>1</sup> (see Rule 59). Thus, an objection by a person who subsequent to the attachment purchases the property in execution of another decree is not one within this rule.<sup>2</sup> The Court has, however, inherent power to deal with such an objection.<sup>3</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>4</sup> where certain post office cash certificates standing in the name of a person were attached in execution of a decree, it was held that an objection by the Postmaster-General having custody of the cash certificates came within this rule. It has also been held that an objection taken by the Secretary of State for India to whom notice is issued under O. 21 R. 48 for the attachment of the salary of a Government servant, comes under this rule.<sup>5</sup>

A co-operative society has an interest in the shares of a member as these shares form part of its capital. Hence, where these shares are attached in execution of a decree against the member, the society has locus standi to object to the attachment under this rule.<sup>6</sup>

There is a difference of opinion as to whether an application by a mortgagee praying that the sale may be subject to his mortgage is one falling under Rule 66 or under this rule. See Note 2 to Rule 62.

As to whether a usufructuary mortgagee can make a claim under this rule, see Rule 62, infra.

14. Parties and representatives. — It has been seen in Note 46 to Section 47 that objections to attachment raised by parties or their representatives as representing third parties or as trustees, are really objections by third parties and do not fall within the scope of Section 47. Such objections will, therefore, have to be decided under the provisions of Rules 58 to 63.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a claim by the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad that the whole of the tarwad property is not liable to attachment in execution of a personal decree against him, falls under this rule.<sup>2</sup>

18. 20. "Shall proceed to investigate the claim." — It is the duty of the Court to investigate a claim preferred to it under this rule,<sup>1</sup> unless it sees reason to reject it on the ground of delay. It ought not, without investigation, simply notify the claim in the sale proclamation,<sup>2</sup> although if the Court does pass such an order, it is not invalid and will be conclusive until set aside by a suit under Rule 63.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, the Court should not reject a claim without investigation merely on the ground that the question of possession or title is doubtful or complicated.<sup>4</sup> In the undermentioned case,<sup>5</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that an order for merely notifying a claim does not preclude the executing Court from subsequently investigating the claim on the merits. See also Note 5 to Order 21 Rule 63.

As pointed out by Lord Hobhouse in delivering the judgment of the Board in Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Prasad<sup>6</sup> :

"The Code does not prescribe the extent to which the investigation should go; and though in some cases it may be very proper that there should be as full an investigation as if a suit were instituted for the very purpose of trying the question, in other cases it may also be the most prudent and proper course to deliver an opinion on such facts as are before the Subordinate Judge at the time, leaving the aggrieved party to bring the suit which the law allows to him."

It is not possible to define the amount of enquiry which constitutes an investigation. If the order purports to deal with the merits it must be taken that there has been an investigation.<sup>7</sup>

Note 20;

What is to be investigated is indicated by the next three following rules, viz., Rules 59 to 61. The question to be decided is, whether on the date of the attachment the judgment-debtor or the objector was in possession and where the Court is satisfied that the property was in the possession of the objector, it must be found whether he held it on his own account or in trust for the judgment-debtor.<sup>8</sup> The sole question to be investigated is, thus, one of possession.<sup>9</sup> Questions of legal right and title are not relevant, except so far as they may affect the decision as to whether the possession is on account of or in trust for the judgment-debtor or some other person.<sup>10</sup> To that extent the title may be part of the enquiry. But ultimate questions of trust,<sup>11</sup> or complicated questions like the benami nature of a transaction,<sup>12</sup> are not within the scope of the enquiry and are not intended to be gone into. As pointed out by Mr. Justice Sadasiva Ayyar in Ramaswami Chetty v. Mallappa<sup>13</sup>:

"In summary proceedings held in accordance with certain statutory provisions intended for speedy disposal of 'emergent' disputes, the Court may be prohibited from going into complicated questions of title or investigating complicated questions like fraud, trust and so on, while giving the party defeated in the summary enquiry, the right to have the whole matter and all the questions which are in dispute fully investigated in an ordinary regular suit. . . . The Court is bound to order the release of an attached property if it finds possession in the claimant on his own account, even if there is title and disposing power remaining in the judgment-debtor."

The High Court of Allahabad<sup>14</sup> has however held that it cannot be said that the Court acts without jurisdiction if it does not go into the question of possession but decides the claim on some other basis. Similarly, where the claimant adduced no

21. Proviso. — If the Court is of opinion that the application preferred under this rule has been designedly or unnecessarily delayed, it can refuse to investigate it. But the Court cannot dismiss a claim petition under this rule on the ground of delay, without giving an opportunity to the claimant or his counsel to explain the delay and without considering the explanation that might be so offered.<sup>1</sup> If the Court does entertain the claim and investigate the same, it is bound to pass an order under Rule 60 or Rule 61. A dismissal on the ground of delay after investigation is illegal.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held that an order rejecting a claim on the ground of delay has also to be set aside by a regular suit within one year from the date of the order. Otherwise, the order is conclusive within the meaning of Rule 63.<sup>3</sup> But there is a conflict of decisions as to whether an order passed without investigation falls under Rule 63. See Note 5 to Rule 63.

In the case of an attachment before judgment, a claim or objection under this rule need not be preferred before a decree is passed in the suit; a claim or objection preferred within a reasonable time after an application for execution is made by the decree-holder cannot be considered to be unnecessarily delayed.<sup>4</sup>

22. Dismissal for default. — See Note 4 to Rule 63.

22a. Reference to arbitration. — An objection under this rule is a proceeding in execution. Hence, Section 141 of the Code does not apply to such an objection. Consequently, Schedule II of the Code also does not apply to such an objection and so, the Court has no power to refer it to arbitration.<sup>1</sup>

22b. Transfer of proceedings under this Rule. — An objection under this rule can only be decided by the executing Court. Hence, a transfer to another Court of such an objection alone without transferring the execution proceedings also is not according to law.<sup>1</sup>

23. Effect of order — Res judicata. — An order passed on a claim petition disallowing the claim bars, on general principles of res judicata, a fresh application on the same grounds<sup>1</sup> and is conclusive between the parties, subject to the result of suit contemplated by Rule 63. On the same principle a defeated claimant is not entitled to apply under O. 21 R. 100 infra, the reason being that the scope of an enquiry under Rule 100 is the same as that of an enquiry under this rule.<sup>2</sup> So also, where a claim under this rule is rejected, the claimant cannot raise the same question by way of defence to a suit for possession by the auction-purchaser.<sup>3</sup>

Note 23

But the order passed in a claim proceeding is only quoad the particular claimant or the particular property attached and cannot be regarded as a general decision enuring to the benefit of others who are not parties thereto.<sup>4</sup> Thus, an order in favour of one of several decree-holders disallowing a claim cannot be availed of in favour of the other decree-holders who are not parties to the claim.<sup>5</sup> A in executing a decree against B attaches certain properties and C prefers a claim thereto. C's claim is dismissed and he does not file a suit under Rule 63. A purchases the property in court-auction in execution of his decree and gets delivery of possession by dispossessing D, who is a bona fide court-auction-purchaser of C's interest in execution of a decree against him. D is not barred from applying under Rule 101 for restoration of possession of which he was dispossessed, by reason of the fact that C became concluded by the order against him in his application under this rule.<sup>6</sup> But, where a claim under this rule has been disallowed and the order disallowing the claim has not been set aside by a suit under Rule 63, it has been held that a person holding a decree against the defeated claimant and seeking to attach the property in execution of his decree will be bound by the previous order dismissing the claim of his judgment-debtor.<sup>7</sup> Where a claim is preferred by the manager of the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor ward without the sanction of the Court of Wards, the order disallowing the claim is not binding on the minor ward.<sup>8</sup>

In execution of a decree by A against B, C prefers a claim on the basis of a transfer of the property (which has been attached) in his favour by the judgment-debtor. The claim is upheld. A does not get the order upholding the claim set aside by a suit under Rule 63. Then B is declared an insolvent and in the insolvency proceedings, A applies for the annulment of the transfer in favour of C. The application is not barred. The reason is that in the execution proceedings A was acting on his own behalf, but in the insolvency proceedings he acts in a representative capacity on behalf of all the creditors of the insolvent generally.<sup>9</sup>

Where on a claim by a third party that he is the owner of a property attached in execution of a decree against another, the attachment is set aside on that ground, the decision that the third party is the owner of the property is not binding on the judgment-debtor. But, if the judgment-debtor has appeared and opposed the claim and the matter is decided, the decision may be binding on him.<sup>10</sup>

O. 21 R. 58*Notes 23a-25 23a. Proclamation of sale pending claim petition. — A Court cannot order the issue of a proclamation of sale while a claim petition is pending.<sup>1</sup>

24. Appeal. — No appeal lies against an order allowing or rejecting a claim under this rule. The order is conclusive subject to the result of the suit contemplated by Rule 63.<sup>1</sup> Under the special provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, such an order passed by an Assistant Collector, Second Class is, however, appealable to the Collector, but the party aggrieved by the appellate order of the Collector is not barred from filing a suit under O. 21 R. 63.<sup>2</sup> There is a conflict of opinion as to whether an order dismissing a claim petition is a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such. According to the High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> it is a "judgment" and is appealable as such, and the period of limitation for the suit under Rule 63 runs from the date of the appellate order. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>4</sup> has, on the other hand, held that the refusal of the summary remedy under O. 21 R. 58 leaves open the right of bringing a regular suit and have the question finally decided, and that it cannot therefore be a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 13 of the Letters Patent (Rangoon). The High Court of Calcutta<sup>5</sup> has held, without deciding whether the order is a "judgment" or not, that the concluding words of Rule 63 infra preclude an appeal from the order.

Where the claim is one coming under Section 47, the order passed thereon is a decree and is appealable even though the objection was misdescribed as one under O. 21 R. 58 and the Court acting under a misconception dealt with it as such.<sup>6</sup>

The rule does not mean that if the claimant establishes that he has some interest in the property he is entitled to succeed irrespective of the question of possession; nor does it imply that if he fails to establish the particular interest he sets up, his claim must be disallowed irrespective of the question of possession. In each of the cases mentioned in Rules 60 and 61, the Court must determine the question of possession of the judgment-debtor and cannot base its decision merely on the question of validity of the claim or of title to the attached property. The expression "some interest" means such interest as would render the possession of the judgment-debtor, possession, not on his account, but on account of or in trust for the claimant.<sup>4</sup>

X advances money to A in order that A may advance it to B and B executes a mortgage in favour of A for the money. A then sues B on the mortgage and gets a decree. X has no interest in the decree and is therefore not entitled to object to the attachment of the decree.<sup>5</sup>

An attachment of property does not by itself create any interest in the property in favour of the person at whose instance the attachment is made. Hence, the mere fact that a person has already attached the property will not entitle him to raise an objection under this rule.<sup>6</sup>

1. Release of property from attachment — General. — A release from attachment can be made under this rule, only if the conditions prescribed in this rule are satisfied, namely—

- (1) That the property was not, when attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor or of some person in trust for him or in the occupancy of a tenant paying rent to him.
- (2) That the property being in the possession of the judgment-debtor at such time, it was so, not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of, or in trust for, some other person, viz., the claimant.
- (3) That the property was in possession of the judgment-debtor partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person.<sup>1</sup>

In the last case, the release is to be ordered to the extent to which the possession of the claimant is established.<sup>2</sup> In such a case the Court should define the share of the judgment-debtor and that of the claimant and sell only the former.<sup>3</sup>

O. 21 R. 60
Notes 1-4

An order of release should be unconditional.<sup>4</sup> It has been held by High Court of Patna in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that the Court has, apart from this rule, an inherent power to release property from illegal attachment in proper cases.

But the rule expressly recognizes a release (from attachment) to a limited extent. Thus, where the claimant only claims a life-interest in the property attached, the Court can release the property to the extent necessary to give effect to the right claimed, by directing that the property was liable to be sold subject to the life-interest of the claimant.<sup>6</sup>

2. Property in possession of third person. — If it is found that the claimant was in possession and that such possession was on his own account, the claimant is entitled to an order of release under this rule,<sup>1</sup> notwithstanding the fact that the judgment-debtor may have some beneficial interest in, or title over, the property.<sup>3</sup> Thus, in a case where the wife of the debtor claimed the Government securities attached by the creditor and proved that they were in her name, that she dealt with them as owner and that she had separate properties of her own, it was held that the claim should not be dismissed on the mere suspicion that she might be holding it for the benefit of her husband.<sup>3</sup>

3. Property in possession of judgment-debtor. — If the property is found to be in the possession of the judgment-debtor, then the attachment should continue unless it is established that such possession was on account of, or in trust for, the claimant.

A advanced money to B under an agreement that B would cut and send timber to A who was to sell and appropriate the sale proceeds in discharge of the debt due by way of advances. B accordingly cut and despatched the timber to A. While the goods were in transit, C attached them in execution of a decree against B. On a claim preferred by A, it was held that B was a trustee for A, that B's possession was on account of A, and that the timber was not liable to attachment.<sup>1</sup>

The words "possession in trust for" mean possession as servant, or agent having no right to possession on his own account,<sup>2</sup> i. e., possession of such a character as to be really the possession of the debtor.<sup>3</sup>

4. Partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person. — The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Upper Burma has held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that a mortgagee in possession is so partly on his own account,

Where in an objection preferred under this rule, the Court finds that the claimant has a half share in the attached moveable property, the proper course, according to the High Court of Calcutta, is to release the entire property, and to proceed by way of attachment under Rule 47, ante.<sup>2</sup>

5. Effect of an order of release. — An order of release from attachment under this rule is only provisional and is subject to the result of the suit contemplated by Rule 63. The attachment is merely suspended pending the result of the suit and if the decree-holder succeeds in the suit the attachment will revive. An alienation made in the interval cannot prevail against the claim of the attaching decree-holder who eventually succeeds in a suit brought by him under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Where an attachment of property is raised under this rule on a claim preferred by the owner thereof, he is entitled to have the property restored to him in status quo ante the attachment. Hence, where moveable property is attached and left in the custody of a sapurdar, and before the attachment is raised, the property is accidentally destroyed, the successful claimant is entitled to recover the value of the property.<sup>2</sup>

1. Disallowance of claim. — Where the property attached is found to be in the possession of the judgment-debtor on his own account, or if the claimant is in possession as trustee for the judgment-debtor, the Court is bound to disallow the claim under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where the claimant, though in possession, is only a tenant of the judgment-debtor paying rent to him, his possession is regarded as that of the judgment-debtor and his claim cannot be allowed.<sup>2</sup>

2. Order without dealing with the question of possession. — As already pointed out in Note 20 to Rule 58, the sole question to be considered in the investigation of a claim is the question of possession. But if the Court erroneously does not consider the question of possession, but decides the claim on some other ground, e.g., on the ground of title, the order cannot be considered to be one passed without jurisdiction and a nullity. It will nevertheless be conclusive unless set aside in a suit under Rule 63.<sup>1</sup> But such an order can be revised by the High Court.<sup>2</sup>

3. Effect of order under this Rule. — An order disallowing a claim under this rule is only provisional and if the defeated claimant succeeds in the suit filed under Rule 63, his rights as on the date of attachment will be restored. If the court auction sale takes place, the auction-purchaser's rights will be subject to the result of the suit.<sup>1</sup> An order under this rule, when it becomes conclusive under Rule 63 infra, does not operate as an order in rem so as to render void the transfer upon which the claimant relied. The order only precludes the defeated claimant from proceeding against the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser on the basis of that transfer; but otherwise it does not affect the validity of the deed of transfer.<sup>2</sup> An order dismissing a claim does not necessarily imply an adjudication that the claimant was not in possession at the

1. Scope of the Rule. — The rule is an enabling provision which empowers the Court to direct the continuance of the attachment subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of a person not in possession.

The question of the existence of a mortgage over the property attached can be raised in two ways and at two stages in execution. One is, when the Court has to prepare the proclamation for sale by public auction. This is provided for in Rule 66 of this Order. That rule enacts that the sale proclamation shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible any encumbrance to which the property is subject after giving notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. The other stage is that provided for by this rule.<sup>1</sup> The difference between the two provisions is very important. Where properties are sold subject to a mortgage under this rule, the Court does so after being satisfied of the existence of the mortgage and sells only the judgment-debtor's right of redemption so that the purchaser does not acquire any greater rights than that of redeeming the mortgage.<sup>2</sup> The order continuing the attachment subject to the mortgage or refusing to do so, is conclusive as to the rights of the parties and if no suit is filed within the period of one year prescribed by Article 11 of the Limitation Act, the mortgagee or the purchaser, as the case may be, cannot either as plaintiff or as defendant assert the right denied by that order.<sup>3</sup> In the case of a proclamation of sale issued of C did not revive and the mortgage had become extinguished in sale.)

under Rule 66, the Court does not decide the question whether the mortgage subsists or not and the purchaser buys the property subject to such risks as the notice might involve; he is not precluded from questioning the validity of the mortgage.<sup>4</sup> The Chief Court of Oudh has in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> held that there is no difference between an order passed under this rule and an order passed under Rule 66 so far as the auction-purchasers are concerned. It is submitted that the view is not correct.

The rule does not apply to claims arising in execution of a mortgage decree.<sup>6</sup>

2. "Subject to mortgage." — Has the executing Court power to decide under this rule the question of the truth or validity of the mortgage? In other words, if the Court rejects a claim of the mortgagee on the ground that the mortgage is not true, is he bound to file a suit within the period of limitation prescribed by Article 11 of the Limitation Act on pain of losing his rights under the mortgage if he does not do so? Upon this point there is a conflict of judicial opinion. The High Court of Bombay,<sup>1</sup> and the High Court of Allahabad<sup>2</sup> in a case decided under the old Code, have held that the rule is only a provision enabling the Court to continue an attachment subject to a mortgage if it finds that a mortgage exists and that the Court has no power to declare the mortgage invalid. The ratio of these decisions is that it is only where the Court is satisfied as to the existence of the mortgage that it can act under this rule, but that where it is not so satisfied, it can do nothing under this rule, but can only notify the mortgage under R. 66. The Lahore High Court<sup>3</sup> has also held that the objection of a mortgagee of the attached property does not come under Rule 58 and that an order rejecting his objection does not come under Rule 63. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>4</sup> in cases decided under the present Code, the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>5</sup> Madras,<sup>6</sup> Patna<sup>7</sup> and Rangoon<sup>8</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>9</sup> have, on the other hand, held that an order rejecting the claim of a mortgagee on the ground that the mortgage is not true or valid is an order which will be conclusive unless set aside in a suit under Rule 63. As pointed out by Ashworth, J., of the Allahabad High Court, the expression "where the Court is satisfied" confers jurisdiction on the Court to come to a finding of fact as to the existence of the mortgage. Without such finding of fact it cannot be said to be satisfied about it. The rule, in effect, provides for two alternative or mutually exclusive orders. One is an order that, as the mortgage exists, the attachment shall be continued subject to it, and the other is that no mortgage shall be deemed to exist. The latter order, no less than the former, is contemplated by Rule 63.<sup>10</sup> It may appear anomalous that an executing Court should thus be given power to decide as to the validity and existence of a mortgage in favour of a third party the value of which may exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. But the mortgagee is not bound to prefer a claim. If he chooses to avail himself of the advantages of the speedy and summary remedy provided for in this Chapter, he must suffer its disadvantages as well.<sup>11</sup> But, where a mortgagee does not file a petition of objection or claim, but merely informs the Court about his mortgage and prays that it may be notified in the sale proclamation, and the Court, on the allegation of the judgment-debtor, goes into the question of the satisfaction of the mortgage and finds that it is discharged and dismisses the mortgagee's petition, the order is not one under this rule and hence, the mortgagee is not bound to bring a suit to set it aside within a year.<sup>12</sup>

Where a claim is preferred on the ground that the properties attached in execution of a decree are subject to a mortgage, the Court is bound to investigate the claim and cannot order simply without investigation that the sale would be held with notice of the mortgage. Such an order is not contemplated by this rule.<sup>13</sup>

3. Mortgage in favour of a person not in possession. — The rule refers only to the case of a claim of a mortgagee not in possession.<sup>1</sup> Can a mortgagee in possession ask the Court to direct the continuance of the attachment subject to his mortgage? The High Court of Bombay<sup>2</sup> has held that a mortgagee in possession is not in possession as trustee for the judgment-debtor but on his own account and that, therefore, he is entitled to a release of the attachment under Rule 60 and not merely to an order directing the sale subject to his mortgage. The High Courts of Calcutta<sup>3</sup> and Patna<sup>4</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh,<sup>5</sup> while agreeing with the view of the Bombay High Court that he is entitled to a release under Rule 60, have held that in cases where the intention of the decree-holder is to attach only the equity of redemption and not the whole property, the Court can order the continuance of the attachment of the equity of redemption alone. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>6</sup> has also held that the equity of redemption in a possessory mortgage can be attached and sold.

asserted in the objection proceedings.<sup>3</sup> The policy of the Legislature is to secure a speedy settlement of questions of title raised in execution sales and the finding of the Court in the claim proceedings is a summary decision from which the suit allowed under this rule is in the nature of an appeal. The object of the Legislature in prescribing a suit by way of appeal is to give the parties an opportunity of placing their respective cases fully before the Court because a summary investigation might not furnish sufficient material for a decision by an Appellate Court.<sup>4</sup> In a suit filed under this rule, the Court is not restricted to the question of possession, but questions of title also can be fully gone into.<sup>5</sup>

The object of the suit is to establish the right which has been negated by the claim order<sup>6</sup> and is in substance to set it aside.<sup>7</sup> But there is no other restriction prescribed as regards the nature of such a suit, though the defeated party is placed at a disadvantage as regards the period of limitation for filing the suit.<sup>8</sup> Thus, his right of suit under this rule is not, in any way, governed or qualified by the proviso to Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act and a suit cannot be dismissed on the ground that a further relief than a mere declaration has not been asked for.<sup>9</sup> On the other hand, a plaintiff in a suit under this rule is not precluded from asking for other reliefs than a mere declaration of the right denied to him by the claim order.<sup>10</sup>

The order passed in the claim proceedings, as the rule itself says, is subject to the result of the suit.<sup>11</sup> The right restored to the parties on the termination of the suit is the right which they asked the Court to give a decision upon on the date of attachment, and the decision places the parties in status quo ante either by vacating or confirming the order.<sup>12</sup> See also Notes 7 and 24, infra.

If an objection to attachment does not fall under O. 21 R. 58, an order disposing of the objection will not be governed by this rule.<sup>13</sup>

3. "The party against whom an order is made." — The rule does not speak of any party but only the party against whom the order is made<sup>1</sup> and the right of suit and the conclusiveness of the order in the absence of such suit are only with reference to such a party. A person who is not a party to the claim proceedings and against whom there is no order, is not affected by the order, although he may be interested in the property attached; nor is he bound to file a suit under this rule. Thus, a judgment-debtor who is not, in fact, a party to the claim proceedings does not, in the eye of law, become such by reason solely of his being the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> He cannot be regarded as a necessary party to the claim enquiry and it depends on the facts and circumstances of each case whether he was in fact a party.<sup>3</sup> In objection proceedings the contest is really between the decree-holder who asserts that the property is liable to attachment and the claimant who alleges that it is not in the actual or constructive possession of the judgment-debtor and therefore not liable to attachment. The order made in such a case is either that the property is released from attachment as not being in the possession of the judgment-debtor or the claim be disallowed. But such an order does not affect the right or title of the judgment-debtor to the property. The order is only conclusive between the claimant and the decree-holder who is proceeding against the property.<sup>4</sup> Hence, a suit by the judgment-debtor against the successful claimant<sup>5</sup> or a suit by the defeated claimant against the judgment-debtor,<sup>6</sup> in cases where the judgment-debtor is not a party to the claim enquiry, is not affected by the provisions of this rule and is not governed by the period of limitation prescribed by Article 11 of the Limitation Act. But if the judgment-debtor was in fact a party to the claim, he is bound by the order passed therein and he can also file a suit under this rule in case the order is against him.<sup>7</sup>

A Hindu reversioner, whose right to the estate is contingent and accrues only after the death of the limited owner, is not bound to sue within one year by reason of his having preferred a claim unsuccessfully in execution of a decree against the widow. He is not debarred by reason of the claim order from filing a suit after the death of the widow.<sup>8</sup>

4. Order dismissing a claim for default. — Unlike the old Section 283 of the Code of 1882, the present rule applies to any order passed in the claim proceedings, whether with or without investigation.<sup>1</sup> An order dismissing a claim for default is an order which comes within the purview of this rule.<sup>2</sup> An application under Rule 58, ante, is a proceeding in execution and therefore the Court cannot, under Order 9, restore an application which has been dismissed for default.<sup>3</sup> As to whether such application can be restored under the Court's inherent powers, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 1 to Order 9, General, ante.

An objection by a party, as has been seen in the Notes to O. 21 R. 58, falls under Section 47 and not under Rule 58 or this rule. Where such an objection is dismissed for default, it has been held that a separate suit by the party to re-agitate the same question cannot be brought.<sup>5</sup>

4a. Ex parte order against decree-holder. — It has been held that an order accepting a claim ex parte in the decree-holder's default is conclusive within the meaning of this rule and that the only remedy of the decree-holder is by a separate suit and not by an application for restoration of the claim proceeding.<sup>1</sup> But where

5. Order refusing to investigate. — Section 283 of the old Code applied only to orders passed under Sections 280, 281 and 282 and consequently it was held that an order passed without investigation rejecting a claim on the ground of delay was not an order contemplated by the Section and hence, the one year's rule of limitation would not apply to such a case.<sup>1</sup> Under the present rule, it has been held that orders passed, whether with or without investigation, are placed on the same footing, with the result that, if the party against whom the order of rejection is made under the proviso to Rule 58 does not file a suit within one year, the order becomes conclusive against him.<sup>2</sup> (See also Note 21 to O. 21 R. 58 and Notes 4 and 4a to this rule.) Thus, an order passed on a claim, that the allegation of the claimant will be notified to the bidders as the petition was put in too late, has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> to be a conclusive order against the claimant within the meaning of this rule. But in several decisions, even under the present Code, it has been held that an order passed without investigation is not within this rule.<sup>4</sup>

An order refusing to entertain a claim on the ground that the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain it, has been held not to amount to an order under this rule.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, an order saying "Whatever right the defendant has will pass by the sale. The petition does not require any investigation. The claim put forward by the petitioner will be noted in the sale proclamation"<sup>6</sup>, or an order "Sale stopped. The claim cannot be investigated by this Court. Petition dismissed"<sup>7</sup> has been held not to amount to an order against the claimant under this rule. So also, an order merely recording the objections by reason of the claimant withdrawing or not pressing his claim is not, according to the High Courts of Madras,<sup>8</sup> Bombay<sup>9</sup> and Rangoon<sup>10</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,<sup>11</sup> an order negating the claim and, therefore, is not an order against the claimant within the meaning of this rule. The proper order to be passed in such a case is to record on the petition "withdrawn" and not "dismissed," and even if the Court has stated that it is dismissed, the claimant is not affected by the order and is not bound to sue within one year from the date of the order.<sup>12</sup> A Full Bench of the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>13</sup> has, however, held that an order passed on a claim which is not pressed, and therefore dismissed, is conclusive against the claimant until set aside in a suit under this rule. See also Note 5a below.

Where, after the filing of a claim, the execution petition itself is struck off for default and the claim petition is thereupon ordered to be closed, there is no order against the claimant so as to compel him to file a suit.<sup>14</sup>

The High Court of Calcutta<sup>15</sup> has held that the present rule and Article 11 of the Limitation Act have no application to a consent order. The High Court of Madras<sup>16</sup> has, on the other hand, held that an order passed by consent, without objection, is an 'order against' the claimant or the decree-holder as the case may be, within the meaning of this rule.

5a. Withdrawal of claim. — It has been held that where an objector voluntarily withdraws his claim and the claim is dismissed in consequence of such withdrawal, there is no order 'against' the claimant within the meaning of this rule which, therefore, does not apply.<sup>1</sup>

6. Attachment before judgment. — The rule applies also to orders on claims preferred to property attached before judgment.<sup>1</sup> Hence, a party aggrieved by reason of the dismissal of his claim in respect of an attachment before judgment is bound to file a suit under this rule, and the suit, if instituted, cannot abate by reason of the dismissal of the suit in which the attachment was effected.<sup>2</sup> But with regard to the period of limitation for such suits the question arises whether Article 11 of the Limitation Act will apply. That Article in terms applies only to an order on a claim preferred to, or objection made to the attachment of, property attached in execution of a decree. Therefore, if the claim is preferred and decided before decree, Article 11 would not apply and the period of limitation to set aside the order would be governed by the residuary Article 120.<sup>3</sup> But where, after decree, the decree-holder applies for execution and a claim to the attachment is thereafter raised and decided in the course of execution, it has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras that Article 11 would apply.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that an attachment before judgment becomes one in execution by virtue of the decree-holder's application for execution, and a claim preferred thereafter may be considered to be one preferred to property attached in execution of a decree.

Under O. 38 R. 9 the Court is bound to withdraw the attachment upon the dismissal of the suit. The reversal of the dismissal does not operate so as to revive the attachment. A fresh attachment is necessary and the objector is entitled to prefer a fresh claim in respect of such attachment and the period of one year should be counted from the date when such claim is rejected.<sup>5</sup> Under Rule 13 of Order 38, a Provincial Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to attach immovable property before judgment or to determine any claim or objection in respect of such an attachment.<sup>6</sup>

7. "May institute a suit to establish the right which he claims."—An order in a claim proceeding is not conclusive; a suit may be brought to contest it within the period prescribed by Article 11 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> This right of suit cannot be defeated or affected by reason of the fact that the property has been sold away in court-auction.<sup>2</sup>

The suit contemplated by the rule is a suit to establish the right claimed in the enquiry,<sup>3</sup> that is, the liability or non-liability of the property attached to satisfy the decree under execution,<sup>4</sup> and not the liability of third persons to satisfy the decree by the sale of their right, title and interest in the property.<sup>5</sup> The suit is in essence a continuation of the execution proceedings,<sup>6</sup> though the scope of the enquiry is much wider. What is decided in the suit is the question of title and not merely the question of possession.<sup>7</sup> Suits brought under this rule are substantive suits and must be tried like any other suit, subject to the ordinary rules of procedure and evidence.<sup>8</sup> They are not limited by any special standard of evidence or law. The claimant may, if necessary, thrash out his title in the fullest and most ultimate sense.<sup>9</sup>

In a suit by the decree-holder under this rule he must establish that on the date of the attachment the judgment-debtor had a subsisting right to the property and the suit must be tried as if it were a suit by the judgment-debtor himself for possession.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, in a suit by a defeated claimant, he must establish that the judgment-debtor had no right to the property. It is not necessary for the plaintiff in such a suit to establish his own title to the property where it is shown that the judgment-debtor had no title to it and that at the time of the attachment the property was in the possession of the claimant.<sup>11</sup> In a suit by a defeated claimant the discharge of the attachment order cannot properly be asked for. The claimant's remedy is to establish his title by a declaratory decree and then to carry the decree to the Court by which the order of attachment was issued and such Court is bound to recognize the adjudication and govern itself accordingly.<sup>12</sup>

Where the same property is attached by two different persons holding different decrees against the same judgment-debtor and an objection preferred under Rule 58 is dismissed, the two separate attachments give rise to two separate causes of action.<sup>13</sup>

the ground that the transfer has been made with intent to defeat or delay the creditors of the transferor, the suit must be brought in the form of a representative suit on behalf of or for the benefit of all the creditors of the transferor as provided in Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act as amended in 1929 and the provisions of O. 1 R. 8, ante, would be applicable to such a suit.<sup>1</sup> But where the decree-holder's suit under this rule seeking to avoid a transfer in favour of the claimant is not based on such transfer having been made with intent to defeat or delay the creditors of the transferor, the suit need not be a representative suit.<sup>2</sup> The transferee and the judgment-debtors as transferors will be necessary defendants in a suit under this rule by a decree-holder attacking an alienation of property by the judgment-debtor in favour of the successful claimant.<sup>3</sup> It is not necessary to implead any transferee from the successful claimant after the order in the claim proceedings and before the institution of the suit, as such transferee must be held to be an alienee pendente lite.<sup>4</sup>

The right of suit of the decree-holder enures also to the benefit of the auction-purchaser. He can thus file a suit to declare that the mortgage subject to which the attachment and sale took place is not true and valid.<sup>5</sup>

Where a defeated claimant files a suit under this rule the judgment-debtor is a necessary party, especially if the objector seeks to establish his title both against the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder.<sup>6</sup> If the properties are sold away in court auction, it is not necessary to implead the decree-holder. claimant ; a transferee from the defeated claimant can also sue under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

9. Consequential relief, if and when should be asked. — As has been seen in Note 2 above, this rule does not contain any limitation as regards the nature of the suit to be filed and does not exclude any particular prayer out of its scope.<sup>1</sup> The suit is of a comprehensive nature and the words "to establish the right" are wide enough to cover not only a mere declaratory suit but also one for consequential reliefs such as the recovery of the value of the property if it had been already sold<sup>2</sup> or for possession.<sup>3</sup> But the plaintiff is not bound to ask for a consequential relief. He may ask for a mere declaration and the suit cannot be dismissed as offending the proviso to Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877.<sup>4</sup> If the defeated claimant asks for a bare declaration and succeeds, a subsequent suit for possession is not barred under O. 2 R. 2.<sup>5</sup>

The Court can grant a temporary injunction to prevent the sale of the attached property in execution pending a suit by the defeated claimant under this rule.<sup>6</sup>

10. Damages for wrongful attachment, if can be asked for under this Rule. — A defeated claimant can, in a suit under this rule, claim damages for wrongful attachment,<sup>1</sup> or the value of the property if it had been already sold.<sup>2</sup> In order to sustain a claim for damages, it is not necessary for the claimant to allege and prove malice, or want of reasonable and probable cause on the part of the decree-holder in resisting the claim.<sup>3</sup>

In a suit for damages for wrongful attachment of property, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover the costs incurred by him as objector in the execution proceedings.<sup>4</sup>

O. 21 R. 63
Notes 10-11

11. Suit not necessary if property is released from attachment. — When the attachment is withdrawn by the decree-holder himself subsequent to the claim order, the object of a suit is gained and the defeated claimant is not obliged to bring a suit.<sup>1</sup> As pointed out by Sir Charles Sargent, C. J., in Gopal Purushottam v. Bai Divali<sup>2</sup>:

"When the plaintiff withdrew his attachment, the parties were restored to the status quo ante. The object of the claim which was preferred by the defendant was as contemplated by S. 278, Civil Procedure Code, to obtain the removal of the attachment, and when that attachment was removed by the judgment-creditor's own act . . . . . there was no longer an attachment or any other proceedings in execution on which the order could operate to the prejudice of the claimant and, therefore, no necessity for bringing a suit to set aside the order."

Where the attachment comes to an end,<sup>3</sup> as where the decree is satisfied or set aside or reversed or the decretal amount is paid into Court under Rule 55, or where the attachment is voluntarily withdrawn by the decree-holder himself,<sup>4</sup> or the attachment is raised owing to the default of the decree-holder under Rule 57 of this Order,<sup>5</sup> the parties are put back in the same position as they were in before execution proceedings were lodged, and the defeated claimant is not compelled to institute a suit within a year from the date of the claim order. When the attachment is raised the cause of action for the claim petition or for any suit founded upon an order in that claim also falls to the ground.<sup>6</sup>

But the withdrawal or raising of the attachment or the satisfaction of the decree should, according to the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>7</sup> and Madras<sup>8</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,<sup>9</sup> have taken place within the period of one year prescribed by Art. 11, Limitation Act. hand, held that it makes no difference whether the attachment is raised within or beyond a year after the order. It is submitted that the former view is correct. As pointed by their Lordships of the Madras High Court in Koyanna v. Dossy, I. L. R. 29 Madras 225 :

"To hold that the right of an unsuccessful claimant to bring a suit remains in a state of suspended animation for an indefinite period after the expiration of a year from the date of the order against him liable to be revived at any moment by the payment off of the amount of the decree, would lead to great inconvenience."

Where, on a claim being preferred, the decree-holder voluntarily withdraws the attachment and there is no adverse order against him in the claim proceeding, he is, nevertheless, entitled under Section 42, Specific Relief Act, to sue for a declaration that the property is liable to attachment and sale in execution of his decree. Such a suit does not fall under this rule.<sup>11</sup>

It has been held by the Nagpur High Court<sup>12</sup> that where an order has been passed under O. 21 R. 62 directing the attached property to be sold subject to a mortgage, the order will become conclusive against the decree-holder unless set aside by a suit under this rule, although subsequent to the order the execution proceeding is dismissed for default and the attachment itself is raised.

12. Claimant can pay money under protest. — If an objector fails in his claim, he is not obliged to file a suit. He may prevent the sale of the property attached by paying the decree amount under protest and then sue the decree-holder for the recovery of the money so paid under compulsion.<sup>1</sup>

13. Other remedies open to a claimant or objector. — No appeal or review<sup>1</sup> lies from an order passed in a claim proceeding. The only remedy of the defeated party is to file a suit under this rule within the period of limitation provided by Article 11 of the Limitation Act.<sup>3</sup> In the absence of such a suit he cannot, either as plaintiff or as defendant, challenge the validity of the order in any matter or proceeding.<sup>3</sup> The mere fact that a suit has been filed against him within one year or that he has filed his defence within one year of the claim order does not affect the conclusiveness of the order.<sup>4</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that a defeated claimant cannot also obstruct the auction-purchaser in delivery proceedings under Rule 99 of this Order.

The dismissal of a claim is, however, no bar to the claimant applying to set aside the court-auction-sale after making the necessary deposit under Rule 89 of this Order as a person interested in the property sold.<sup>6</sup>

14. Objector can plead invalidity of attachment. — A defeated claimant or an objector suing under this rule is entitled to plead that there was no attachment or that the attachment effected was not legal. For instance, he can show that the executing Court had no jurisdiction to attach and therefore his rights are not affected in any way by the claim order.<sup>1</sup> In Muthia Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty,<sup>2</sup> their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that, for purposes of Article 11 of the Limitation Act, the property to which a claim is made must be property which has been de facto attached. "Unless there has been attachment, there can be no order made on an objection lodged to it, nor can any claim be made to the property so attached; and without such an order, there is no terminus a quo for the running of limitation, and with this the limitation itself is non-existent."

But an objector cannot question the legality or validity of the decree against the judgment-debtor on the ground that it is colourable or collusive.<sup>3</sup>

15. Limitation for suits under this Rule. — Article 11, Schedule I of the Limitation Act, IX of 1908, prescribes the period of one year from the date of the order as the time within which a suit has to be brought under this rule. "The policy of the Act is to secure speedy settlement of questions of title raised in execution sales and for that reason a year is fixed as the time within which the suit is to be brought."<sup>1</sup> The Article applies to orders passed whether with or without investigation.<sup>2</sup> Where a claim is allowed, inter alia, on the ground that there was no proper attachment over under O. 21 R. 62 and if it is not set aside by a suit under Rule 63, the summary order becomes conclusive and the purchaser or the mortgagee cannot assert any right which that order denies.) the properties, Article 11 does not apply to a suit by the decree-holder to establish the title of his judgment-debtor.<sup>3</sup> See also discussion in Note 14 ante. In the case of a minor, however, the period of limitation is subject to be modified by virtue of Section 6 of the Limitation Act and he can file a suit within one year after he attains majority.<sup>4</sup> As to whether this Article applies to orders on claims preferred in respect of attachments before judgment, see Note 6, ante.

16. Subject to the result of the suit the order is conclusive. — As has been seen in Note 13 ante, an order passed in a claim proceeding is conclusive against the defeated party unless he brings a suit within one year from the date of the order. It is conclusive not only between the parties to the order<sup>1</sup> but binds also their representatives-in-interest.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the auction-purchaser is bound by an order against the decree-holder made under Rule 62.<sup>3</sup> Conversely, the auction-purchaser is also entitled to plead in bar to a suit by the defeated claimant that the order rejecting his claim has become conclusive against him.<sup>4</sup>

But the conclusiveness of the order is subject to the result of the suit. In other words, the order is only a provisional one and is liable to be set aside by the decision given in the suit filed under this rule.<sup>5</sup> The effect of such a suit is to keep the execution proceedings pending till the decision of the suit.<sup>6</sup> If the suit by the decree-holder succeeds,<sup>7</sup> or if the suit by the claimant fails,<sup>8</sup> the proceedings continue. If the suit by the decree-holder fails, or the suit by the claimant succeeds,<sup>9</sup> the proceeding fails simultaneously. If after a claim order, the successful claimant transfers the property in dispute to a third person, such transferee also takes it subject to the result of the suit by the decree-holder.<sup>10</sup> If the decree-holder succeeds in the suit, the attachment is revived and the transferee cannot assert his right against him.<sup>11</sup> In other words, the transfer is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens.<sup>12</sup> The same principle will apply where after the claim is rejected, the properties are sold in court-auction; the auction-

It has been seen in Note 23 to Rule 58 that where one of several decree-holders obtains an order in his favour disallowing a claim, it cannot be availed of by the other decree-holders who are not parties to the claim. But where the same property is attached by different decree-holders in execution, and on objection by a third party the attachments under all the decrees are raised, it has been held that the success obtained by a single decree-holder in a suit under this rule onures also to the benefit of the other decree-holders who have not filed suits.<sup>14</sup>

A 'suit' contemplated by this rule is a suit under the Civil Procedure Code which commences by the filing of a plaint. An application under Section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is not a 'suit' for purposes of this rule.<sup>15</sup>

A decree is passed against a firm. In execution of the decree a certain property is attached. The attachment is raised on the objection of a person not coming within sub-rule (1) of O. 21 R. 50 that it is his property. Proceedings are then taken under sub-rule (2) of O. 21 R. 50 and leave is granted for the execution of the decree against such person as being a partner in the firm. The decree-holder is entitled to attach the same property although he has not instituted a suit under this rule in respect of the previous order allowing the objection to the attachment under O. 21 R. 58. The reason is that the previous order was only a bar to the attachment of the property in execution of the decree as it stood and cannot stand in the way of the decree-holder attaching the property after he has obtained an order under O. 21 R. 50, sub-rule (2), permitting him to proceed against the person as being a partner in the firm.<sup>16</sup>

See also Note 23 to Order 21 Rule 58.

17. Property in respect of which the order is conclusive. — The claim order is conclusive between the parties to the proceedings only as regards the particular property in dispute.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a claim was allowed and the decree-holder filed a suit under this rule and after the dismissal thereof applied for the arrest of the judgment-debtor or for the attachment of other properties of the judgment-debtor more than three years after his original application for attachment, it was held that the application for arrest was barred by limitation as it could not be considered to be a continuance or revival of the previous proceedings for attachment.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the decree-holder succeeds in the suit and applies thereafter for proceeding with the execution originally started by him against the property, the application must be deemed to be a continuation of the previous proceedings and is not barred.<sup>3</sup>

O. 21 R. 63

18. Effect of decision in claim cases as to possession. — The claim order is conclusive as to the successful party's right to possession.<sup>1</sup> But the effect of the decision as to possession in other proceedings in which the question may again arise is not the matter to which the words "shall be conclusive" are directly addressed. Thus, if attachment is removed subsequent to the claim order and later another attachment is made, the question of possession is a question of possession at a different date.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held that where a claimant prefers a claim on the basis of his being in adverse possession of the property against the judgment-debtor and the claim is dismissed on the ground of his not being in possession at all, he will not be precluded, in a suit for possession by the auction-purchaser, from pleading that he has been in possession from a time anterior to the order against him, although he has not brought a suit under this rule.<sup>3</sup> The reason given is that in such a case, the suit under this rule would have been futile as it would have been dismissed on the ground that the title to the property was in the judgment-debtor.

See also Note 24 infra.

19. Burden of proof in a suit under this Rule. — In a suit brought under this rule the burden of establishing the right claimed is upon the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> In Jamahar v. Askaran<sup>2</sup> it was observed by Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., that where the suit is by the defeated claimant he must show affirmatively that not only the ostensible but the real title also is in him. The burden is not discharged by merely pointing to the innocent appearance of the instrument under which he claims. He must show that they are as good as they look. This principle has been accepted by the various High Courts and applied in a number of decisions.<sup>3</sup> But in V. E. A. R. M. Firm v. Mauny

Ba Kyin, A. I. R. 1927 Privy Council 237=I. L. R. 5 Rangoon 852, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee made the following observation :

Note 19

"They (the defeated claimants-plaintiffs) being the ostensible owners of the property under a duly registered deed and a deed of transfer, obviously the party claiming to attach the property for somebody else's debt, not their debt, but the debt of the original debtor, must show that the sale was a fraudulent one, and that could only be done in this case by showing utter inadequacy of consideration."

Their Lordships then proceeded to examine the various items of consideration and upheld the transaction in favour of the plaintiffs. Does this observation change the law as regards the onus of proof? As pointed out by their Lordships of the High Courts of Madras,<sup>4</sup> Patna<sup>5</sup> and Rangoon<sup>6</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,<sup>7</sup> the Judicial Committee did not consider the question of the burden of proof as such in the above case and the observation should be understood as applying only to the particular facts of the case before it. In Appadurai v. Vellayan Chettiar,<sup>8</sup> it was observed that in cases under this rule the burden of proving the validity of the alienation is on the plaintiff :

"The defendant however cannot escape the burden at some stage or other. If the plaintiff produces his deed and swears that it is genuine and for full consideration, and the defendants have nothing to say to the contrary, the plaintiff will succeed, and where the burden of the plaintiff is so light, it is scarcely worth arguing whether it is more correct to say that the burden is originally upon the defendants or upon the plaintiff. But where the defendant has something substantial to say to the contrary, the real burden must inevitably fall upon the plaintiff to establish the right which he claims."

See also the undermentioned decisions.<sup>9</sup>

In Mohammad Ismail v. Hanuman Parshad,<sup>10</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"Apparently it has been the settled practice of the Indian Courts, when objections to an attachment in execution have been disallowed, and a suit has been filed by the objector under O. 21 R. 63 of the Code, to put the onus of proving the bona fides of any transaction upon which the objector relies, upon him in his capacity of plaintiff. This is a matter which may possibly require further consideration when the question of onus is really material."

In the case of a dismissal of a claim without investigation on the ground of delay, it has, however, been held that the burden is upon the defendant to show that the registered deed of transfer in favour of the plaintiff (defeated claimant) is fraudulent.<sup>11</sup>

Where a decree-holder who has attached property in the possession of his judgment-debtor is unsuccessful in the claim proceedings and therefore brings a declaratory suit under this rule, he can rely, in such suit, on the presumption drawn from possession that the property attached belongs to the judgment-debtor and the burden of proving the contrary is on the defendant.<sup>12</sup>

Where the facts are fully established and the inference from them is clear, the question of onus is not material.<sup>13</sup>

20. Defence of fraudulent transfer by the judgment-debtor, if can be raised in the suit. — In a suit by a defeated claimant under this rule, the decree-holder defendant can set up in defence that the transfer in favour of the claimant is voidable under Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. There is no bar to the setting up of such a plea in defence.<sup>1</sup>

21. Jurisdiction. — In a suit brought under this rule, where the sole question between the parties is whether the property attached is or is not liable to be attached and sold, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the amount of the decree, where the value of the property exceeds that amount. If, however, the value of the property is less than the decree amount, then the value for purposes of jurisdiction is the value of the property.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that where the property has been sold in execution of the decree, before the suit, the value of the property will determine the value of the suit.<sup>2</sup>

If the judgment-debtor is added as a party and a declaration of title as against him also is prayed for, then the suit should be valued as on the value of the property attached.<sup>3</sup>

The rule says nothing of the nature of the suit or the Court in which the suit is to be brought; this question, therefore, depends on the nature of the claim and the right sought to be enforced. Article 20, Schedule II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, excludes a suit under this rule from the cognizance of the Court of Small Causes. Under Article 23 of that Act suits under Article 11 of the Limitation Act are also excepted from the cognizance of the Courts of Small Causes. Hence a suit under this rule cannot be filed in a Provincial Small Cause Court.<sup>4</sup> An order passed in a claim

Decree-holder can rely on Section 53, T. P. Act, without instituting suit to set aside transfer.]]

O. 21 R. 68
Notes 23-26

24. Effect of attachment on adverse possession. — An attachment does not arrest the running of limitation in favour of a person holding adversely to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that the fact that such person prefers a claim under Rule 58 before the expiry of the statutory period of twelve years does not prevent him from pleading successfully that on the date of the suit he has acquired a right by prescription.<sup>2</sup> But the contrary view has been taken in the undermentioned decisions,<sup>3</sup> the reason given being that in such cases the rights of the parties should be determined as they were at the time of the attachment.

See also Note 18, supra.

25. Costs. — According to the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> and Madras,<sup>2</sup> the Court cannot, in a suit under this rule, order the payment of costs incurred in the claim proceedings, in favour of the successful party. The High Court of Rangoon<sup>3</sup> has, on the other hand, held that the successful party in the suit is entitled to the costs incurred in the claim proceedings. The reason given is that the defeated party has no right of appeal against the order and the suit under this rule being in the nature of an appeal, success in the suit will entitle him also to the costs of the miscellaneous proceedings under Rule 58.

It has been held that where a claim preferred under Rule 58 is rejected with costs and a suit by the defeated claimant under this rule is decreed, the prior order in the claim proceeding, including the order as to costs, is superseded.<sup>4</sup>

25a. Decree-holder's suit under this Rule, whether step-in-aid of execution. — See the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Article 182, Note 104 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

26. Appeal. — No appeal lies from an order on a claim or an objection preferred under Rule 58. See Note 24 to Rule 58. A decree passed in a suit under this

CALCUTTA

Add the following as Rule 63A:

O. 21 R. 63A
(Calcutta)

"63A. When an attachment of moveable property ceases, the Court may order the restoration of the attached property to the person in whose possession it was before the attachment."

LAHORE

Add the following Rule:

"63A. (1) Where the property attached is a debt, the Court executing the decree shall investigate the claims of the judgment-debtor against the garnishee in respect thereto and may order the garnishee to pay the amount of the debt to the Court.

(2) The garnishee shall be deemed to be a party to the suit in which the decree was passed within the meaning of Section 47, and subject to the provisions of that Section the orders passed by the Court as a result of such investigation shall be conclusive between the judgment-debtor and the garnishee and no separate suit relating thereto shall lie."

Note. The Court must investigate the claims of the judgment-debtor against the garnishee even if he denies the debt.<sup>1</sup>

The remedy of a party aggrieved by an order under Rule 63A is to appeal against the order<sup>2</sup> and a separate suit to set it aside is incompetent.<sup>3</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup>

| 5. "Liable to sale."               |   |

1. "Any Court executing a decree." — As to the power of an executing Court to order the sale of property situated outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, see Section 38, Note 6 and the undermentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

Where the same property is under attachment in execution of decrees of several Courts, the sale thereof must be ordered by the Court of the highest grade. But a sale by a Court of inferior grade is not a nullity. See Section 63 and the Notes thereunder.

Rules 64 to 73 are applicable to the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. See Section 210, sub-section (3), clause (b) of that Act.

2. "May order." — The term "may" in this rule does not confer a discretion on the Court to order or refuse to order a sale ; it is obligatory on it to do so when a valid application for such order and a valid attachment have been made.<sup>1</sup>

Where a sale in execution is set aside (for instance on the ground of fraud) and the purchaser who is not a party to the decree is dispossessed, he is entitled to compensation for the improvements made by him on the property. It is not necessary in such a case to inquire whether the auction-purchaser believed in good faith that he was entitled to the property, the order of the Court under which the sale was held being itself a sufficient protection. At any rate, the "good faith" required does not go beyond an honest belief (though it may be negligent) on the purchaser's part in the validity of his title. See General Clauses Act, Section 3 (20).<sup>2</sup>

As to the effect of a reversal, or the setting aside of a decree, on the title of the auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of such decree, see Note 13 to Section 144.

3. "Attached by it." — The rule contemplates that the property should be under attachment before its sale is ordered. Where a property has been attached, the attachment cannot be said to have come to an end by the mere fact that an order is passed releasing the property from the attachment, so long as the order is liable to be set aside in appeal or otherwise. See Section 64, Note 9 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

Though the rule contains the words "attached by it" it has been held by the Madras High Court<sup>2</sup> that it does not forbid a sale where the attachment has been made by another Court.

4. Sale without attachment.—A property must be attached before it can be ordered to be sold under this rule.<sup>1</sup> If, however, it is sold in execution without there being a prior attachment, what is the effect? There is a conflict of decisions as to whether the sale in such a case is one without jurisdiction or whether the absence of attachment amounts only to an irregularity. As to this, see Section 51, Note 4 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

5. "Liable to sale."—A Court has no jurisdiction under this rule to order a sale unless the property is "liable to sale." The Court is therefore bound to hear objections to the saleability of a property before it orders its sale.<sup>1</sup> A decree for money though capable of being attached is not liable to sale.<sup>2</sup> (See O. 21 R. 53.) But a debt can be sold under this rule.<sup>3</sup> It has been held that a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit is attachable property of the judgment-debtor and that the procedure for realizing such a decree is for the Court to sell it under this rule.<sup>4</sup> (See Notes to O. 21 R. 53.)

Suppose, in execution of a decree held by A against B, certain property belonging to B is sold and subsequently C, the holder of another money decree against B, seeks to attach and sell the same property. C is not entitled to do so, because, when the property is sold under A's decree, the title to the property passes to the auction-purchaser and it ceases to be liable to sale under any other decree against B.<sup>5</sup> Suppose in the above illustration C had already attached the property at the time of its sale under A's decree and that this attachment was even prior to that under A's decree; still C cannot sell the property but can only claim a rateable distribution of the sale proceeds under Section 73 of the Code.<sup>6</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 5-8

6. Sale of property not belonging to the judgment-debtor. — In England the execution of a decree for money is entrusted to the Sheriff, an officer who is bound to use his own discretion, and is directly responsible to those interested, for the illegal seizure of goods which do not belong to the judgment-debtor. But in India warrants for attachment are issued on the application of the creditor who is bound to specify the property which he desires to attach and its estimated value. Hence, the English doctrine that a judgment-creditor is not responsible for the consequences of a sale, under a judicial order, of goods illegally taken in execution in satisfaction of his debt,<sup>1</sup> does not apply in India. Where the decree-holder is liable to pay damages to the third party whose goods he has illegally brought to sale in execution of his decree,<sup>2</sup> these damages will include not only the price realized at the sale but also the amount by which such price falls short of the market value of the property on the date of the attachment.<sup>3</sup> Where on the application of a decree-holder and through his mistake his own property is sold in execution of his decree, as that of the judgment-debtor, it has been held by the High Court of Madras<sup>4</sup> that the decree-holder will be estopped from claiming back the property from the auction-purchaser unless it is found that the latter was not in fact misled by such mistake. The High Court of Calcutta has held a contrary view.<sup>5</sup>

7. Such portion thereof as may be found necessary. — It is permissible under this rule to order the sale of a portion of the attached property.<sup>1</sup> Compare proviso to Rule 17, ante.

8. "Party entitled under the decree." — Under this rule, the sale proceeds should be paid to the "party entitled under the decree to receive the same." The decree-holder is such a person. But the Court is not bound to order the payment of

Where the Government has a claim against the judgment-debtor for court-fees under a decree in a pauper suit, it is entitled to be paid the amount of the court-fee out of the sale proceeds in preference to the decree-holder. The reason is that the claim for the court-fees is a Crown debt and is entitled to precedence over all other creditors. The Government in such a case is "a party entitled under the decree to receive" the money within the meaning of Rule 64; it need not attach the money before it can receive it.<sup>2</sup> (*Of. The following sentence shall be added :

"Such officer or person shall be competent to declare the highest bidder as purchaser at the sale, provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of the court-house, no such declaration shall be made without the leave of the Court."

RANGOON

Substitute the following rule :

"R. 65. (1) Sales shall be conducted by the Bailiff or Deputy Bailiff but the duty may be entrusted to a process-server when the property is moveable property not exceeding Rs. 50 in value, and when, in the opinion of the Court, for reasons recorded in the diary of the case, the Bailiff or Deputy Bailiff cannot personally conduct the sale.

(2) Subject to the terms of the proviso to Rule 43 and of Rule 74, some one day in each week shall be set apart and regularly observed for holding sales in execution of decrees; and some well-known place in the vicinity of the court-house or the public bazaar shall be selected for the purpose.

(3) Subject as aforesaid, and unless the Court is of opinion that for any special reason a sale on the spot where the property is attached or situated will be more beneficial to the judgment-debtor, all property whether moveable or immovable attached in execution of the decree, shall be sold at the time and place selected. The day to be set apart, and the place selected for holding the sales, and any changes therein, shall be reported for the information of the High Court.

(4) The following scale is laid down as to the amount which may be deducted from the proceeds of the sale of property sold in execution of the decree, as the expenses of sale, and paid to the officer conducting the sale under the orders of the Court as his authorized commission. When the proceeds of sale do not exceed Rs. 500—5 per cent. Where they exceed Rs. 500 and do not exceed Rs. 5,000—5 per cent. on

The calculation of the commission shall be on the whole amount realized in pursuance of one application for execution.

(5) Subject to the provisions of sub-rule (13) of Rule 45B, no further sum beyond this authorized commission and the cost of conveyance of property to the place of sale shall be deducted from the sale proceeds.

(6) When a sale of immovable property is set aside under the provisions of Rule 92 (2) below, no commission shall be paid to the Bailiff for selling the property.

(7) No officer of a subordinate Court shall receive any larger commission or fee in respect of any sale of property (mortgaged or otherwise) held in execution or in pursuance of any decree or order of the Court directing or authorizing such sale than that allowed by sub-rule (4) above.

2. Sales by whom to be conducted. — Sales in execution are to be conducted by — (a) an officer of the Court, or

(b) any other person whom the Court may appoint.

It is not, however, every officer that can conduct an execution sale; but only an officer who has been appointed for the purpose can do it.<sup>1</sup> The rule enables the Court to appoint a person who is not an officer of the Court (e. g., an auctioneer) to conduct an execution sale.<sup>2</sup> Where the Court has directed a bailiff to hold a sale, the mere fact that the bids were recorded by another person does not show that the sale was not conducted by the bailiff.<sup>3</sup>

3. Sale to be by public auction. — See Rule 76 infra. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that the Court may, for good reason, order that the bidders shall be confined to a particular class or classes of persons.<sup>1</sup>

2. Object of proclamation. — A proclamation of sale is meant for the information of intending purchasers and not of the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup>

3. Nature of proceedings under this Rule. — Are proceedings under this rule administrative or judicial in character? On this question, there is a conflict of decisions. Three views have been expressed on the matter —

(a) The proceedings under this rule are of an administrative and not of a judicial character. The leading case which lays down this view is Sivagami Achi v. Subramania Ayyar,<sup>1</sup> a decision under the old Code. The cases under the present Code which fall within this group have held that the view laid down in the above case is good law even under the present Code, notwithstanding the changes made therein.<sup>2</sup>

(b) The proceedings under this rule are of a judicial and not of an administrative character.<sup>3</sup> These cases proceed on the view that the alterations in the rule under the new Code have the effect of making the action of the Court under the present rule, a judicial one.

(c) So far as Rule 66 requires a decision as to matters which are purely administrative in nature such as fixing the upset price and details of the sale proclamation, the matter is administrative. In other words, where the order does not affect rights, liabilities or equities of the parties to the decree, it is not a judicial order.<sup>4</sup>

Held, questions merely related to procedure and did not in themselves affect rights or liabilities of parties.)]

But where the order affects the rights, liabilities or equities of the parties it is a judicial and not an administrative order.<sup>5</sup>

O. 21 R. 66

Although, apparently, there is a conflict of decisions as set forth above, if the views expressed in the various cases are taken into consideration, there does not seem to be any real conflict if the actual decisions are taken into account. The great majority of them fall within the principles stated in paragraph (c) above. Thus, in all the cases cited as holding that proceedings under this rule are administrative and not judicial (paragraph (a) above) the orders in question did not affect the rights of the parties.

It must also be noted that the opinion expressed in Kaveri Bai Ammal v. B. Mehta and Sons,<sup>6</sup> suggesting that under the new Code proceedings under Rule 66 are judicial and not administrative was obiter.

4. Delegation of the power to settle proclamation. — It is the duty of the Court to settle the proclamation of sale itself. It cannot depute a commissioner to do it and if it does so the sale will be invalid.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Such proclamation shall be drawn up after notice." — The sale proclamation should be settled only after notice to the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> It is the duty of the decree-holder to apply for issue of notice under this rule and to take the necessary steps to have it served on the judgment-debtor.<sup>3</sup> But such notice is required only where a proclamation of sale has to be drawn up. It need not be given where a fresh proclamation is ordered under Rule 69 (2) on an adjournment of sale.<sup>3</sup>

The absence of a notice under this rule does not by itself vitiate an execution sale. The defect is only an irregularity which may entitle the judgment-debtor to have the sale set aside on satisfying the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of the defect.<sup>4</sup> But where the Court has fixed a certain date for hearing the parties as to the valuation to be entered in a sale proclamation but fixes the valuation before such date, the Court acts without jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup>

It has been held by the Lahore High Court that where notice has been given under Rule 66 and the execution proceedings are thus brought to the knowledge of the judgment-debtor, they are not vitiated by the absence of a notice under Rule 22.<sup>6</sup>

A notice under this rule is to be served in the same manner as a summons. (Order 48 Rule 2.)<sup>7</sup>

No notice is necessary before drawing up a sale proclamation in proceedings in execution of a rent decree under the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>8</sup>

Where a judgment-debtor applies to have the sale set aside on the ground that notice under this rule was not properly served upon him, the burden of proving it is on him.<sup>9</sup>

6. "Such proclamation shall state the time and place of sale." — Time of sale. — The omission to state in the proclamation the time of sale is a material irregularity within the meaning of Rule 90.<sup>1</sup> It is not enough merely to mention the day of sale; the hour of sale should also be stated.<sup>2</sup> Where a sale has been advertised to take place at a particular hour, but is actually held at an earlier hour, though on the same day, it has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta that no sale could be deemed to have taken place at all within the meaning of the Code.<sup>3</sup> According to the Chief Courts of the Punjab and Burma, however, such a sale is not a nullity but only an irregularity which, if material, would entitle the party interested to set aside the sale.<sup>4</sup> Where a sale was advertised to take place between 11 A. M. and 5 P. M. on a particular day, and actually took place at 3 P. M., it was held by the High Court of Bombay that there was no irregularity inasmuch as once the sale had begun, the Court could not be expected to keep it on till 5 P. M., even if the sale could be finished earlier.<sup>5</sup> Where a sale is advertised to take place at a particular hour but is held a few hours later, it has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that the delay of a few hours is not a material irregularity within the meaning of Rule 90.<sup>6</sup> Where the judgment-debtor agreed to an adjournment of the sale without fresh proclamation, the failure to mention the time of sale in the order ceases to be a material irregularity.<sup>7</sup>

In the absence of any rules to the contrary, a sale held on a public holiday is not illegal or irregular.<sup>8</sup>

7. "As fairly and accurately as possible." — It is the duty of the Court to use all possible materials before it in drawing up a proclamation of sale which will give such information about the property to be sold as may be given and as fairly and as accurately as possible. Where the presiding Judge has not availed himself of the materials before him, they being such as would have enabled him to avoid the trouble afterwards occasioned, the purchaser who has, in fact, been misled would have a remedy either for a proportionate refund of the purchase-money or for a cancellation of the sale.<sup>1</sup>

8. Contents of sale proclamation. — See Notes 9 to 14 below.

Under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) and the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913), a sale proclamation should contain certain particulars in addition to those specified in this rule. See Sections 163 and 217 of the said Acts respectively.

9. Specification of property. — The Court is under a duty to ascertain definitely the property to be sold before entering it in the sale proclamation.<sup>1</sup> Where it erroneously directs the sale of the property of a stranger to the decree behind his back, he is entitled to sue to have the sale set aside.<sup>2</sup>

The rule requires that the property to be sold should be described in the sale proclamation as fairly and accurately as possible.<sup>3</sup> The description should be sufficient to identify the property.<sup>4</sup> Where two properties which have been amalgamated into

10. Specification of revenue. — Where the property to be sold is an interest in an estate or part of an estate paying revenue to the Government, the revenue assessed upon the estate or part of the estate should be specified in the sale proclamation.<sup>1</sup>

An omission to state it<sup>2</sup> or an incorrect statement thereof<sup>3</sup> in the proclamation is a material irregularity within the meaning of Rule 90.

The term "part of an estate" in the rule means an aliquot part of an estate.<sup>4</sup>

11. Encumbrances to which property is liable. — The proclamation of sale should specify, as fairly and accurately as possible, the encumbrances to which the property to be sold is liable.<sup>1</sup> The amount due on the encumbrances notified should also be mentioned.<sup>2</sup> The fact that any of the alleged mortgages is admitted or disputed may also be stated.<sup>3</sup> But the decree-holder is not required to inspect and peruse all the mortgage documents mentioned in the encumbrance certificate and notify any specially onerous conditions that may be included therein, such as, that the property cannot be redeemed without paying off mortgages on other properties of the debtor.<sup>4</sup>

It is competent to the encumbrancer himself to apply to the Court under this rule praying that his encumbrance should be notified in the sale proclamation.<sup>5</sup> But he is not bound to do so and the mere fact that his incumbrance is not mentioned in the sale proclamation and that he is present at the time of the sale but does not warn intending bidders about his incumbrance will not debar him from enforcing his incumbrance.<sup>6</sup> A prior mortgagee who has been impleaded as a party to the suit on the puisne mortgage, in which the issue as to his priority was abandoned by him is not precluded from claiming under this rule that his mortgage should be notified in the sale proclamation.<sup>7</sup>

The rule authorizes the Court to notify the alleged encumbrances on the property. It does not empower it to order that the sale should be subject to the encumbrances<sup>8</sup> or to adjudicate upon the rights of the parties as to such incumbrances.<sup>9</sup> The notification of an encumbrance under this rule must be distinguished from an order under Rule 62 ante, that the property be sold subject to a certain encumbrance. In the former case there is no adjudication as to the binding nature of the alleged encumbrance, and the auction-purchaser is entitled to dispute the validity of the mortgage.<sup>10</sup> But in the latter case there is such an adjudication and the auction-purchaser cannot challenge the validity of the mortgage.<sup>11</sup> See Notes 1 and 2 to Rule 62. See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>12</sup> Where the decree itself directs the sale of the property subject to a certain encumbrance, the purchaser cannot challenge the validity of the encumbrance afterwards.<sup>13</sup>

The failure to notify encumbrances under this rule is a material irregularity which will vitiate the sale,<sup>14</sup> though a person who has waived the irregularity cannot subsequently object to it.<sup>15</sup> Even though the fact that the sale is subject to a mortgage is mentioned in the sale proclamation, the sale will still be vitiated, if through the conduct of the officers conducting the sale, the purchaser is misled into believing that the sale is free from encumbrances.<sup>16</sup> As to the remedies of a party when an encumbrance is wrongly mentioned in a sale proclamation, see Notes to Rules 90 to 92 infra, and the undermentioned case.<sup>17</sup>

The fact that a mortgage is not notified in the sale proclamation does not affect the binding nature of the mortgage as regards the property in the purchaser's hands.<sup>18</sup> Its enforceability does not depend upon the purchaser having notice of the mortgage. In the case of a charge, however, it will not as a general rule be binding on the purchaser if he has no notice of such charge.<sup>19</sup> See Section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act.

But a mortgagee may be estopped by his conduct from setting up the mortgage against a bona fide purchaser. Thus, a decree-holder on whom a duty is cast by this rule to give full and true information, so far as it is known to him, will be estopped from setting up, as against the auction-purchaser, any mortgage in his own favour, which he has not mentioned in his application under this rule, and which does not appear in the sale proclamation,<sup>20</sup> provided the auction-purchaser has actually bought without notice of the mortgage.<sup>21</sup> But the omission of a decree-holder to have a mortgage in his own favour notified in the sale proclamation will not debar him from enforcing his mortgage as against a subsequent encumbrancer who is not in any way connected with the execution proceedings or otherwise prejudiced by the omission in the sale proclamation.<sup>22</sup>

As to whether registration constitutes notice for the purpose of such estoppel, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>23</sup> (See also Transfer of Property Act, Section 3.) There is, however, no estoppel where the decree-holder has mentioned the mortgage in his application for an order for sale but through some mistake of the Court officers, it is not inserted in the sale proclamation.<sup>24</sup> The above rule of estoppel also applies to a judgment-debtor, as, for instance, where in a suit for rent the mortgagee of the holding has also been impleaded as a defendant and he does not take steps to have his mortgage announced in the sale proclamation.<sup>25</sup>

Estoppel arises not only by failure of a party in his duty to have his mortgage entered in the sale proclamation, but also by any other conduct on the part of the person putting forward the mortgage which has misled the purchaser into believing that the alleged mortgage did not exist.<sup>26</sup> The rule of estoppel applies not only to setting up a mortgage against the auction-purchaser but also to other claims against him.<sup>27</sup>

An attachment is not an incumbrance within the meaning of this rule and hence need not be notified in the sale proclamation.<sup>28</sup>

12. Amount to be recovered. — The amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered should be entered in the proclamation of sale. The amount so entered should not be one exceeding that granted by the decree. Thus, where the decree does not grant interest, the proclamation of sale should not include it.<sup>1</sup> Where the decree awards future interest, the interest should be calculated up to the date fixed for the sale.<sup>2</sup> The fact that in the application for execution under O. 21 R. 11 (2) ante, interest is calculated only up to the date of application is no bar to the interest being calculated in the sale proclamation up to the date fixed for sale.<sup>3</sup>

Where, at an execution sale, the decree-holder himself purchases the property and is placed in possession, and the sale is subsequently set aside and a fresh proclamation of sale ordered, it has been held that the mesne profits which the judgment-debtor is entitled to recover from the decree-holder for the period of his possession may be deducted from the decretal amount entered in the sale proclamation and that the matter is one to be decided in execution proceedings.<sup>4</sup> (Vide Section 144, Note 34, ante.)

When a sale is adjourned under Rule 69 infra, and a fresh proclamation of sale is waived by the judgment-debtor, the sale on the adjourned date for the amount entered in the original proclamation is not irregular, although the decree was partly satisfied when the adjournment was obtained. The reason is that where a sale is adjourned and the judgment-debtor waives a fresh proclamation, the amount due on the date to which the sale is adjourned is never shown in the proclamation.<sup>5</sup>

An incorrect statement in the sale proclamation as to the amount due under the decree does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to sell the property and the sale held under a proclamation containing such incorrect statement is not illegal.<sup>6</sup>

But when objection is taken to the correctness of the amount entered in the sale proclamation, the sale should not be held before the objection is disposed of.<sup>7</sup>

13. proclamation its own estimate of the value of the property. The Bombay High Court<sup>7</sup> has held in a recent decision that it is not necessary in every case to value the property to be sold and to state the value in the sale proclamation; but the Court may, if it thinks fit, do so. But, in the undermentioned case<sup>9</sup> it was held by the same High Court that the Court is bound to hold an inquiry as to the value of the property and state the value in the sale proclamation. Opinion in the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court is divided.<sup>9</sup> Though, as seen above, the Calcutta High Court holds that it is the duty of the Court to enter in the sale proclamation its own valuation of the property to be sold, it has also been held by that Court that in exceptional cases, the Court will be justified in not attempting to give a valuation of its own and in confining itself to stating the values given by the parties.<sup>10</sup> In any view, the omission of the Court to give an estimate of value is a mere irregularity and does not by itself vitiate the sale.<sup>11</sup>

Under the rule as amended by the High Courts of Calcutta, Lahore, Madras, Nagpur, N.-W. F. Province and Patna, the Court is not bound to give its own estimate of the value of the property, but is only required to state the value given by the parties. (See Local Amendments.) In view of this, the decisions of the High Courts of Calcutta and Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur passed before the above amendments, holding that the Court was under a duty to state its own estimate of the value of the property should be treated as no longer law.

An undervaluation in a sale proclamation which is calculated to mislead possible bidders and prevent them from offering adequate prices or from bidding at all is a material irregularity within the meaning of Rule 90 infra,<sup>12</sup> but the judgment-debtor may by his conduct be estopped from raising this objection.<sup>13</sup>

The Court need not make an elaborate enquiry before fixing the value of the property.<sup>14</sup> The fact that the highest bid offered at the auction is far below the value stated in the proclamation is no evidence of fraud or material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.<sup>15</sup> Where the highest bid offered at the auction falls below the value stated in the proclamation, the Court has no power to dismiss the execution petition.<sup>16</sup> In fixing the value of the property, abwabs (illegal cesses) should not be taken into consideration.<sup>17</sup> A right to have a lease of a mill for 20 years should not be valued by capitalising the annual rent for 20 years.<sup>18</sup> It is not a correct method of valuing heavily encumbered properties by taking their value in an unencumbered state and simply deducting from them the amount of the encumbrances.<sup>19</sup>

It is the duty of the Court to group the lands (to be sold in execution) in small and convenient plots and offer them for sale so that it may be possible for men of ordinary means, especially the ryots in the locality, to purchase them at a fair value.<sup>20</sup>

15. Effect of an order under this Rule. — There is a material difference between an order under Rule 63 and an order under the present rule. In the former case, if the party affected does not sue within 12 months to set it aside, it becomes conclusive against the person against whom it is made. In the latter case, it has no such effect.<sup>1</sup>

Where property is sold to a bona fide third party purchaser in execution of a decree in force at the time, a subsequent reversal, variation or amendment of the decree does not affect the validity of the sale.<sup>2</sup>

Where the property of a stranger is attached and sold, his failure to object thereto does not affect his rights inasmuch as, though the Code enables third parties to come in and object, they are not bound to do so.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 11 above.

16. Non-compliance with the provisions of this Rule. — Non-compliance with the provisions of this rule renders a court sale liable to be set aside on the ground of material irregularity.<sup>1</sup> If objection is raised by the judgment-debtor to anything stated in the sale proclamation, it is irregular for the Court to order the sale to be held

17. Verified statement to accompany application for order for sale — Sub-rule (3). — An application for an order for sale should be accompanied by a verified statement as required by this sub-rule.<sup>1</sup> Omission to file a verified statement amounts only to an irregularity and does not by itself vitiate the sale.<sup>2</sup> The verification need not be made by the decree-holder himself, but may be made by a person acquainted with the facts of the case.<sup>3</sup> (See also Order 6 Rule 15.)

18. "Court may summon any person," etc. — Sub-rule (4). — A claim preferred in the course of an investigation under Rule 66 in relation to immovable property ordered by the decree to be sold cannot be treated as a claim under Rule 58, because the latter rule applies only in cases where the property is attached.<sup>1</sup>

19. Form of proclamation of sale. — See Appendix E, Form No. 29.

20. Appeal. — An order under this rule is not one of the appealable orders under Section 104 or O. 43 R. 1.<sup>1</sup> Hence, the question arises whether orders under this rule are appealable as decrees under Section 47 read with Section 2. This question depends on two further questions, viz. —

(a) whether proceedings under this rule are of an administrative or a judicial character, and

(b) whether orders under this rule amount to a determination of a question within Section 47.

The answer to these questions must depend on the particular order in question in each case. Thus, where an order under this rule does not affect the rights, liabilities or equities of the parties to the decree, it is not a judicial order; nor does it amount to the determination of a question within Section 47 and hence no appeal lies from such an order.<sup>2</sup> On this principle no appeal lies from the following orders under this rule —

(a) An order about the value of the property to be entered in the sale proclamation.<sup>3</sup>

But, where the Court in addition to deciding matters which are purely administrative in nature, such as fixing the upset price and the details of the sale proclamation, decides questions affecting the rights of the parties, the order will be a judicial order and will also amount to a determination of a question within Section 47 and an appeal will lie from that order.<sup>10</sup> Thus, where there are several judgment-debtors under a mortgage decree, an order that the properties of some of them should be sold first and the properties of the others should be sold only in the case of a deficiency occurring on such a sale, may be appealable as a decree as it determines the rights of the co-judgment-debtors inter se.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, an order relating to the boundaries or the area of the property to be sold comes within Section 47 and is appealable as a decree.<sup>12</sup> It has been held that an order as to whether a sale is to be held by the Court itself or by the Collector on the ground of the judgment-debtor being an agriculturist is a judicial order which is open to appeal.<sup>13</sup> It has been held in some cases that irregularities in drawing up the sale proclamation are not irregularities in publishing or conducting the sale within O. 21 R. 90, and hence, an application by a judgment-debtor to set aside an execution sale on the ground of such irregularities comes within Section 47 and not under O. 21 R. 90, and that therefore an order determining such an application is one under Section 47 and appealable as a decree.<sup>14</sup>

A question of waiver of irregularities in the sale proclamation by the judgment-debtor on which the trial Court had found against him but which was not raised before the High Court on appeal, cannot be raised by him before the Privy Council.<sup>15</sup> (See Notes to Order 41 Rules 1 and 2.)

21. Revision. — It has been held by the High Court of Patna<sup>1</sup> that the action of the Court under this rule is a judicial one and hence subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. It was further held by that Court that the High Court could interfere under Section 107 of the Government of India Act of 1915 even if the action of the lower Court in such cases be held to be administrative.<sup>2</sup> But the High Court will not ordinarily interfere in revision in a discretionary matter<sup>3</sup> or where the applicant for revision has not been in any way damnified by the order complained against.<sup>4</sup>

22. Applicability of the rule of res judicata to proceedings under this Rule. — The principle of res judicata applies to execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> (See Section 11, Note 23.) The question whether the principle applies to proceedings under this rule depends on whether the proceedings are administrative or judicial, for unless they are held to be judicial, the principle of res judicata cannot apply to them. (See Section 11, Note 100.) The answer to this question depends on the particular order in question in each case. In so far as an order merely settles the details to be entered in a sale proclamation, the proceeding is only administrative or ministerial and such an order cannot operate as res judicata,<sup>2</sup> nor is such an order a final order so as to operate as res judicata.<sup>3</sup> But if in proceedings under the rule, a final order affecting the rights of the parties is passed, such an order will be a final order of a judicial character and as such will operate as res judicata.<sup>4</sup>

The principle of constructive res judicata (Section 11, Explanation 4) also applies to execution proceedings.<sup>5</sup> (See Section 11 Note 23.) But it must be shown that the party sought to be barred has had clear notice of the nature of the claim made against him. (See Section 11 Note 23.) Thus, it has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court<sup>6</sup> that where a notice is for the settlement of the terms of a sale proclamation, the judgment-debtor's legal representative cannot be deemed, by absenting himself, to have attended and raised the question as to whether the property was that of the judgment-debtor or belonged to himself. Further, where the last execution case was dismissed for default, the judgment-debtor cannot be held to be barred by constructive res judicata from raising a contention which he failed to raise in such execution case.<sup>7</sup>

The principle of res judicata will not apply if the Court had no jurisdiction to pass the order in question, as, for instance, where the order was by a Civil Court for the sale of ancestral property of the judgment-debtor, which, under the law, could be sold only by the Collector.<sup>8</sup> But, where in such a case the judgment-debtor to whom a notice is sent under this rule fails to appear and the Court upon the materials before it decides that the property is non-ancestral and orders its sale, the judgment-debtor cannot subsequently raise the objection as to jurisdiction,<sup>9</sup> for a decision as to jurisdiction is as much res judicata as a decision on any other point. (See Section 11 Note 73.)

A decision in the course of execution proceedings operates as res judicata even in a subsequent suit between the parties.<sup>10</sup>

The principle of Section 11, Explanation 5 does not apply so as to preclude a Court executing a mortgage decree from directing that the properties should be sold in a particular order, merely because the Court trying the suit was asked to embody an order to this effect in its decree but did not do so.<sup>11</sup> The reason is, it is conceived, that in such a case, the decree does not decide that the properties should be sold in any particular order and the executing Court has, in the exercise of its power to sell "the mortgaged property or a sufficient portion thereof," (see O. 34 Rr. 4 and 5) a discretion to direct the sale of the properties in any order it thinks fit. (Cf. also Section 11, Note 125.)

A decree-holder ought not to be allowed to take up inconsistent positions to the prejudice of the judgment-debtor. Thus, where in execution of a mortgage decree the decree-holder has caused to be sold properties not comprised in the mortgage and has all along been acting on the basis that the properties sold were comprised in the mortgage, he cannot be allowed to contend that they were not comprised in the mortgage and to bring to sale the properties that were comprised in the mortgage.<sup>12</sup>

1a. Object of the Rule.

1. Mode of making the proclamation.

2. Publication in the gazette or newspaper.

3. Division of property into lots — Sub-rule (3).

4. Non-compliance with the Rule.

1a. Object of the Rule.—The provisions of Rules 67 and 68 have been designed for the protection of judgment-debtors and for the purpose of ensuring that the properties of such persons shall not be put to sale unless due publicity is given to the fact that a sale is to be held and a proper opportunity is afforded to bidders to attend the sale after proper notice has been given.<sup>1</sup>

1. Mode of making the proclamation. — The proclamation of sale should be made and published in the manner provided for by sub-rule (2) of Rule 54. See Notes to Rule 54 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

This rule applies to proceedings under the Orissa Tenancy Act, II of 1913, (see Sections 217 and 219) but not to proceedings under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), (see Section 163, sub-section (3) as amended by Act IV of 1928, Section 102, clause (c).

2. Publication in the gazette or newspaper. — The Court has a discretion under this rule to direct the publication either in the gazette or in a local newspaper or in both.<sup>1</sup> The want of correspondence between the advertisement in the gazette, and the schedule of the attached property in the sale proclamation, constitutes an irregularity which might be cured if the sale was regular in other respects.<sup>2</sup>

3. Division of property into lots—Sub-rule (3).—Sub-rule (3) is new and dispenses with the necessity of making separate proclamations for each separate lot, where the property is divided into separate lots for being sold.<sup>1</sup> If, however, the Court thinks that proper notice cannot otherwise be given, as for instance, where the lots are situate at such a distance from each other that there is no certainty of communication to persons interested in one of such lots of what is publicly done in the other, the Court can direct the issue of a separate proclamation for each lot.<sup>2</sup>

1. Time of sale. | 2. Non-compliance with the Rule.

1. Time of sale. — The rule provides that there should be an interval of thirty days in the case of immovable property and fifteen days in the case of moveable property between the date of sale and the date of affixing the copy of the proclamation in the court-house. The fifteen days rule does not, however, apply to a sale of moveables subject to speedy and natural decay (see proviso to Rule 43). It is also open to the judgment-debtor to consent to have the sale before the prescribed time. But such consent should be express and in writing.<sup>1</sup>

Suppose a sale takes place after thirty days from the date on which a copy of the sale proclamation was affixed on the court-house but before thirty days from the date on which a copy was affixed on the property to be sold. (It will be noted that under Rule 67 read with Rule 54 ante, affixing on both the places is necessary.) The question arises whether such a sale is in accordance with law. On this question there was a conflict of decisions under the old Code.<sup>2</sup> But, under the present Code, Rule 54 has been amended and it has been made clear that the affixing on the court-house is to be after a copy of the sale proclamation has been affixed on the property to be sold. Hence, under the present Code, the sale must be held after thirty days not only from the affixing of a copy of the proclamation of sale on the court-house but also from its being affixed on the property.

See Sections 68 and 69 of the Rangoon Small Cause Courts Act, VII of 1920, and Section 163, sub-section (4) of the Bengal Tenancy Act for special provisions as to time of sale under the said Acts.

2. Non-compliance with the Rule. — Omission to comply with the requirement of this rule is a material irregularity.<sup>1</sup> But this alone will not render the execution sale a nullity. It will not be set aside unless substantial injury is proved to have resulted therefrom.<sup>2</sup>

R. 69. [S. 291.] (1) The Court<sup>2</sup> may, in its discretion, adjourn<sup>3</sup> any sale hereunder to a specified day and hour,<sup>7</sup> and the officer conducting any such sale may in his discretion adjourn the sale, recording his reasons for such adjournment :

Provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court.
